These Greenhouses are Equipped with The Kewanee System of Water Supply

This illustration shows the Riverside Greenhouses at Wichita, Kas. Though not connected with any city mains, they are provided with service equal to that of the best city water works system.

Mr. F. Kuechenmeister, proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses, says: "The Kewanee Water Supply System I bought of you, gives entire satisfaction. The outfit works fine—no cost for repairs."

Good water service is appreciated everywhere. But nowhere is this service so essential, as it is for greenhouses, nurseries, truck gardens, etc. The water supply problem for these places has been successfully solved by

The Kewanee System of Water Supply

In the Kewanee System, there is no elevated tank to leak, freeze, overflow or collapse. Instead, the water is stored in a Kewanee Pneumatic Tank, and it is delivered by air pressure.

The Kewanee Tank may be located in the cellar or buried in the ground. It is completely protected from all extremes in weather. You will be sure of water of the right temperature during all seasons. This water will have strong pressure behind it—40 to 60 pounds is easily possible. 40 pounds is equal to the pressure from an elevated tank 93 feet high.

And you can have all the water you want, because Kewanee Tanks are made in sizes to suit any requirements.

There are nearly ten thousand Kewanee Systems in successful operation. They are being used for country and suburban homes, farms, green houses, truck gardens, public institutions, schools, etc.

Wherever city water service is not available or is unsatisfactory, the Kewanee System is the logical choice.

Let our engineering department solve your water supply problem. No charge for preliminary specifications and estimates. Satisfactory results guaranteed.

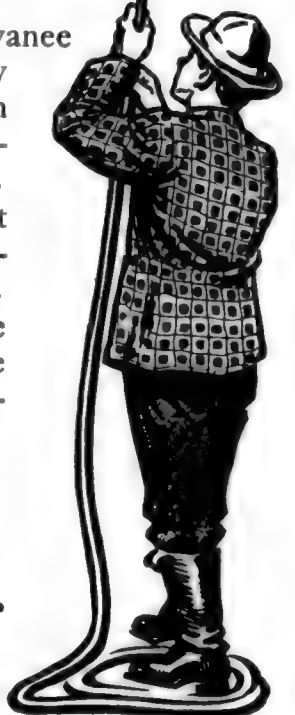

Write for our 64-page illustrated catalog which tells all about the Kewanee System. This book is free. Ask for catalog No. 55.

MOTHERS' DAY

AND

A DAY WE MUST PUSH.

Let Everybody Help.

It is not often fortune favors the florists the way it has with Mothers' day—the second Sunday in May.

But the Trade should not depend wholly on the fact that the sentiment which inspired Mothers' day has appealed to the great American people as nothing else has done in recent years—we should grasp our opportunity and do our utmost to acquaint the public with the purpose of this annual event: "To honor the best mother who ever lived—your own."

Mothers' day is but two years old, but last year it brought a lot of business to every florist who made effort to arouse interest—and to some who only sat idly waiting for others to work up the interest for them. So let's all do our share this year and push this new flower day into a leading place among the Trade's special dates.

There are many ways it can be done—but none of these ways includes raising prices. Don't do that; reduce them, if anything.

Origin of Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day in 1908 took florists by surprise. Few had heard of it before the call for flowers came, and several wrote to the REVIEW for information. The number of letters received last year was greater, but nowhere near so many as have come in this month, showing how the interest is growing.

The origin of Mothers' day seemed shrouded in the mists of antiquity when it was only a year old. The Federation of Women's Clubs, when appealed to at that time, disclaimed responsibility, but said, "It's a fine idea." Officials of the Congress of Mothers replied, "We have no record of Mothers' day, but the idea is good; we shall call attention to it at our next annual meeting." Finally, the search for someone to whom the credit could be given led to an individual, Miss Anna Jarvis, 2031 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia, who conceived the idea in the desire to commemorate the anniversary of her mother's death. It was not only the thought of laying some flowers on mother's grave, but it occurred to her that it would be a beautiful tribute to all mothers, the living as well as the dead, if their children, on a given day, would unite in the simple wearing of white flowers. She wrote a letter about it to a Philadelphia newspaper and it was this that caused Mothers' day to break out in spots all over the country.

No Special Flower Needed.

Miss Jarvis suggested the white carnation as the Mothers' day flower par excellence. "Its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty; its fragrance, love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all a true mother's attributes," she wrote.

But the way the sentiment appealed to the people was too strong for the supply of white carnations—there were not enough to go around—and it was suggested that white flowers be worn for mothers gone before, bright flowers for mothers living. So let it be.

How Florists Can Help.

In the first place, every florist can advertise Mothers' day. Put a card in your window. You can do a great deal by using space in your local papers a few days before May 8. Besides, you can enlist the aid of the editors. They will appreciate the sentiment and help it along.

Then, too, you can bring to your aid the Woman's Club, the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and the fraternal orders. The idea appeals to all classes.

Why not get the mayor of your city to issue a proclamation similar to the one issued for the first Mothers' day by the mayor of Lincoln? Here it is:

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION.

Office of the Mayor,
City of Lincoln, Neb.

To the People of Lincoln:

The secretary of the Lincoln Young Men's Christian Association having suggested that Sunday, May 10, be observed by the people of this city as Mothers' day, every man to wear on inspiring that other cities will, in future years, follow the example.

Witness my hand as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., this 6th day of May, A. D. 1908.

F. W. BROWN, Mayor.

You see, he did it at the suggestion of the Y. M. C. A. If you think your own "pull" isn't strong enough, get a leading minister to approach His Honor. Don't be bashful about it. It's a good idea and they'll all take to it.

When the day arrives, if you live in a town not too large, deck out each street car conductor with a flower early in the morning—they all had mothers. Start the church-goers and Sunday promenaders wearing flowers, and you soon will find the idea will take a big hold and mean a good day's business.

How It Worked Last Year.

In its issue of April 29 last year the REVIEW called attention to Mothers' day and pointed out the desirability of helping the idea along; also, some ways in which it could be done. Quite a few took hold and did their part with a will and several afterward wrote the REVIEW about it. This is the way it worked out:

In London, Ont.

We want to express our appreciation of the article which appeared in the REVIEW April 29, regarding Mothers' day. The press cheerfully came to our aid and exploited the sentiment expressed, to such an extent that it was taken up by nearly all the religious bodies in the city and, with but few exceptions, it was the theme of discourse at either morning or evening services. In several of the churches the members of the choir all wore white flowers.

From a business standpoint, it was an unqualified success. Although prepara-

Wear a Flower for Mother's Sake

SUNDAY, MAY 8

A bright flower for Mothers living.

We shall be prepared Saturday, May 7, and Sunday, May 8, with a large assortment of fine, fresh flowers, appropriate for Mothers' Day, offered at our usual moderate prices. All customers served promptly.

that day a flower in honor of his mother. I have been requested to ask for general compliance with the suggestion.

Therefore, in pursuance of this request and as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., I hereby recommend that by general consent, Sunday, May 10, 1908, be set apart as Mothers' day and that on that day every man and every boy in the city of Lincoln and every visitor within our gates, wear a flower in honor of his mother.

And I suggest that the day be made a special occasion for sending flowers to the invalids in Lincoln homes, to the sick in hospitals and to the orphans in public and denominational institutions.

It is eminently fitting that in this, as in other worthy movements, Lincoln take the lead. Let us hope that the first Mothers' day observed in this beautiful city will be so successful and tion had been made in anticipation, by four o'clock on Saturday afternoon not a white carnation was to be had in the city, and before eight o'clock not a white flower of any description could be obtained. Hundreds of customers had to be turned away after the supply ran out.

J. GAMMAGE & SONS.

In the Southwest.

Tulsa, Okla., came bravely to the front May 9 in observing Mothers' day. The City Federation of Women's Clubs induced the mayor to issue a proclamation, churches held special services and the day was made much of. By noon of Sunday there was nothing in town that looked like a white flower and "yours truly" did a flourishing business. As far as can be learned, Tulsa was the only town in Oklahoma to generally observe the day. At least she is not in the rear, thanks to your suggestions of April 29.

PERRY N. DE HAVEN.

In Parkersburg, W. Va.

We have watched the REVIEW's reports of Mothers' day, and have noted that in some cities there were large sales, while in others there was not much doing that day, due to no effort to advertise the day. We believe Mothers' day in the future will be one of the banner days for the florist.

In our little city this was the first year that Mothers' day was publicly honored. Our governor issued a proclamation calling on all the people to observe Mothers' day by wearing a white flower. In addition to this we induced the mayor to issue a proclamation to the same effect. We also went to every church in the city and donated plants and a nice vase of white flowers for the altar. Each pastor had a notice placed in the papers calling on the people to attend special services for that day, and also mentioned that the church would be decorated for the occasion. Now, this seems like a whole lot of work and expense, but it paid well. Try it, Mr. Florist, next year, and be well fortified with plenty of white flowers.

J. W. DUDLEY & SONS.

In New York.

I wish to let you know that your idea of pushing Mothers' day was a success in Lowville, N. Y. There was a special service in the Presbyterian church, the church being beautifully decorated in white and green. A white carnation was given at the door to each person who did not have one. The local papers took an interest in the matter and gave an interesting description of the observance of the day, asking everyone to wear a white carnation. It will be a big flower day in course of time.

WM. R. KEAY.

At Des Moines, Ia.

Sunday had been declared Mothers' day in a proclamation issued by Mayor Mathis, conveying the suggestion that every man and boy wear a white flower in honor of his mother. The plan was received with readiness and as a result May 8 was the biggest white flower day in history. One prominent florist said that no less than 10,000 carnations alone were sold. Before the closing hour Saturday night every white carnation in the city had been ordered. Then, when the white carnations could no longer be purchased, the demand for white roses began, and when that flower was no longer to be had it turned to others of the same color. Before the afternoon was half gone the supply was entirely exhausted.

The altars of the churches were veritable piles of white flowers, and appropriate services were held in many of them. Old-fashioned songs, such as "Rock of Ages," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," were sung.

A Suggestion.

For Mothers' day, I would suggest to wear for a living mother any other color than white, and white only for the dead. This would move all colors of flowers and stock can be sold for considerably lower prices.

A WEDDING PERGOLA.

Wedding bells and wedding gates have been so long in use that the up-to-date decorators are looking for something different, especially for use at the big society weddings, the decorations for which go such a long way toward establishing the florist's reputation for artistic originality. Among the new ideas is the pergola decoration. It has been used at some of the largest weddings in New York this spring and is sufficiently unique to command attention wherever the scheme is employed. At the same time it is susceptible of such treatment at the hands of the skilled decorator as will obviate the appearance of strife for originality, which never is desirable. It is better to be conventional than to be bizarre.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the wedding pergola as erected in the famous Delmonico restaurant, New York, by the Forster Mansfield Co., for the use of one of the leading decorators of the city. The materials are all enameled in white and the pergola may readily be taken apart without injury for removal, storage and reerection in any suitable place. It is adapted to use for church weddings, as well as for those in large halls. And any one accustomed to doing this class of decorating will readily appreciate the number of different ways in which the florist can display his skill with such a groundwork. Almost any flowers may be used in such a decoration, and the kneeling-stool, bell and other accessories may be employed if wanted.

TROUBLE WITH REFRIGERATOR.

We are using a standard make of display refrigerator, built for us last fall, and also an old market refrigerator, which we picked up at a sale several years ago. The market refrigerator, with cracks around the doors and sweating walls, keeps flowers in moderate weather four days. The new refrigerator consumes twice as much ice, though it is smaller, and keeps stock in salable condition only twenty-four to forty-eight hours, according to the quality of the flowers. Is this right? At what temperature should cut flowers be kept for best results?

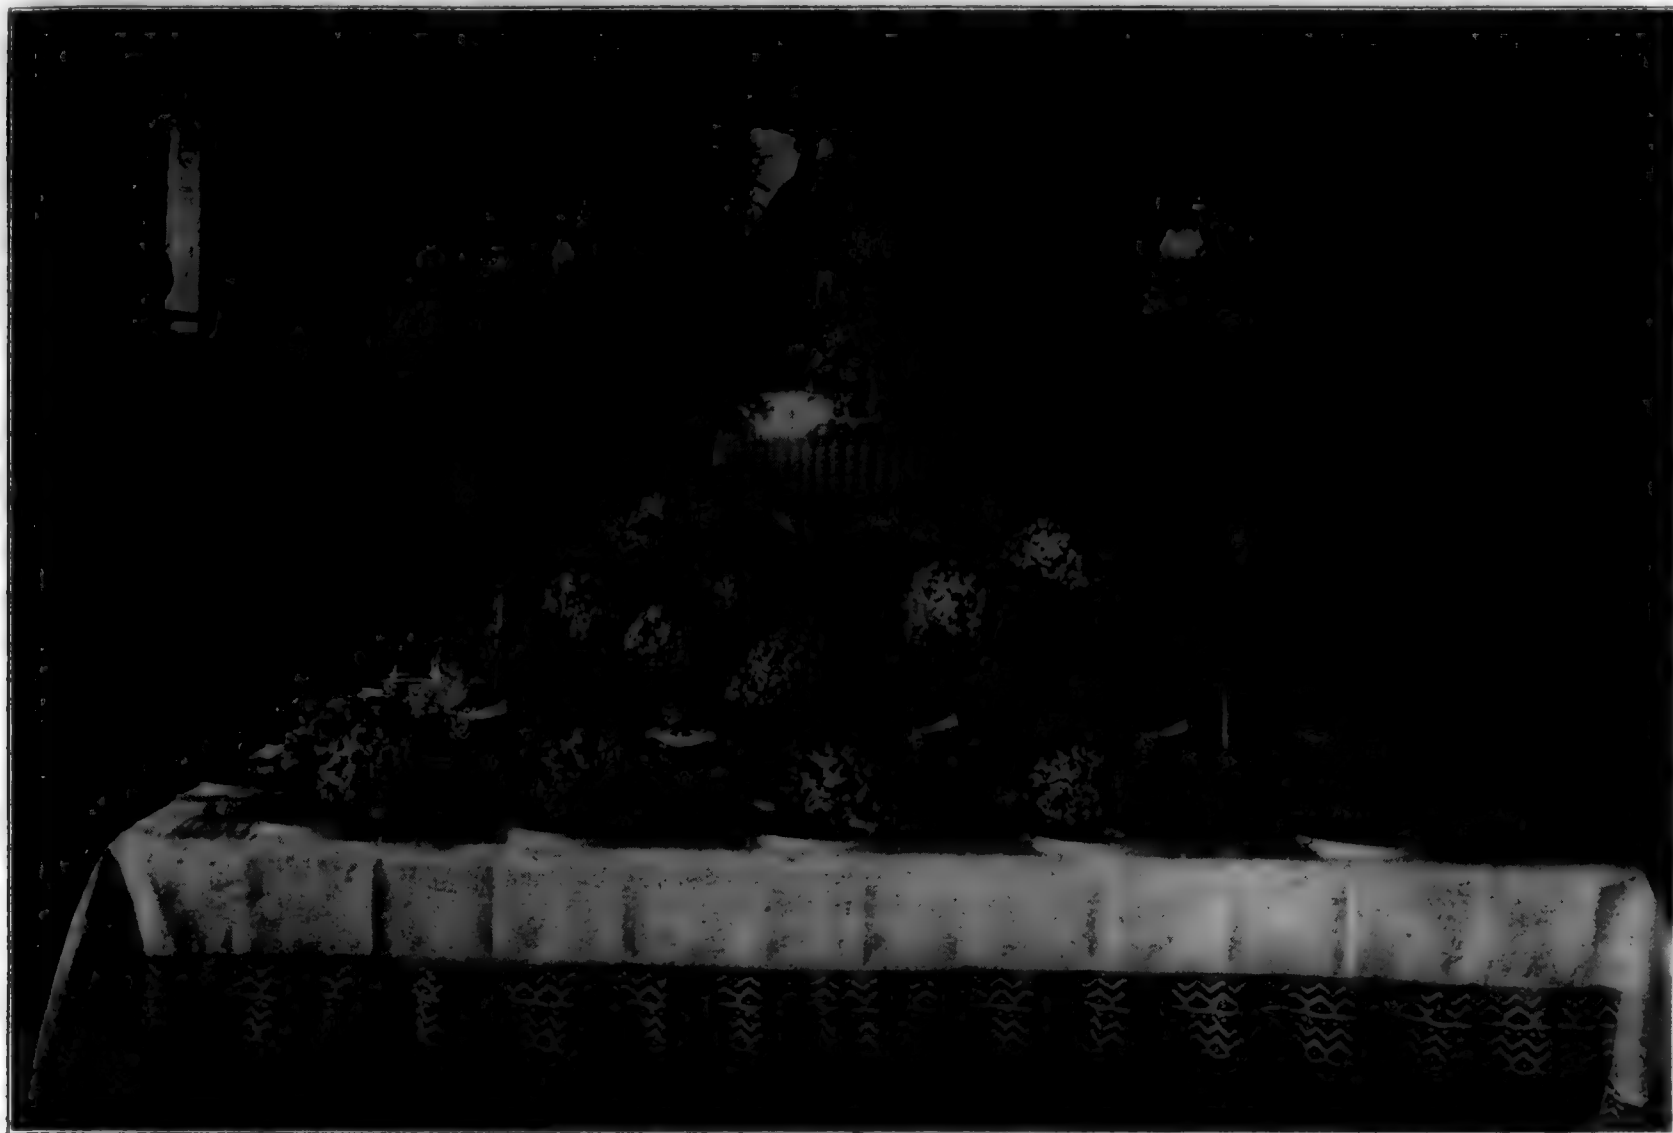

S. B. S.

It is hardly probable that the construction of your new display refrigerator is at fault. Still, the writer can think of no other reason why it should consume more ice than the old one, or even as much, presuming that they are of about the same size and that no outside conditions affect the new one—that is, too close proximity to a radiator, heater or steam pipes. Good drainage must be provided under the ice chamber, so that as soon as the ice melts the water will flow away.

Being right on the ground, you should be better able to see where the trouble lies than some one at a distance can. I presume you have gone all over the matter with the builder of the box?

Using so much ice, the parts of the refrigerator in which the flowers are stored should be sufficiently cool to keep flowers nicely, provided the box is built so as to allow the cooled air to circulate properly.

In a retail store, where a variety of flowers are kept in the same cooler, the temperature should be from 50 to 55 degrees. Many flowers—roses, for instance—would keep longer in a still colder atmosphere, but this is not desirable. Flowers stored in too cold a place will, when transferred to a warm living-room, quickly wilt.

Is the air pure in your new refrigerator? Pure, fresh air is as essential in keeping cut flowers as in keeping plants and the cooler must be properly ventilated, so the air will not become stagnant. Too much moisture is bad for carnations, having a tendency to put them to sleep.

I doubt whether my answer to your question will be of any material aid in solving your problem. Perhaps some other reader of the REVIEW can offer some suggestions. H. S.

FICUS PANDURATA.

The fiddle-leaved rubber is not much in vogue in Europe, but in commenting on its rapidly increasing popularity in America a correspondent of the Horticultural Advertiser (English) says: "As a means of rapidly increasing a stock of the plant it might be grafted on roots of the common fig (Ficus carica), or cuttings may be made from short pieces of the stem, each with a leaf and a bud at the base attached. These should be placed on a moist bottom heat of 80 degrees and top heat of 70 degrees."

Aside from its bold and striking character, the chief merit of Ficus Pandurata is that it will stand a great amount of abuse and will endure dwelling-room conditions for fully as long as any other plant.

AN ODD SIDE LINE.

Pretty nearly every retail florist heats his winter delivery vehicle with one of the wagon heaters that burn a specially prepared coal. Out of this one leading retailer has built up an unusual winter side line.

A large number of his customers are owners of automobiles or carriages and have wagon heaters of their own for foot warming purposes. Of course the automobile supply concerns sell the foot warmers and the coal to use in them, but some of the florists' customers found it more convenient to get the coal from the florist. More with a view to accommodating his customers than for the small profit there was in it, the florist printed a little card announcing his ability to supply the foot warmer fuel, and sent out the card with packages and bills. It brought enough people to the store so that the card was mailed to every automobile owner in the city. Perhaps it was as much the peculiar combination of getting coal of the florist as anything else that brought the people to the flower store. But a good many retail florists have found that everything pays which brings people to the store on any legitimate errand. Get people in and they buy flowers.

A BIRTHDAY TABLE.

Seventy candles is a rather unusual number on a birthday cake, and the decoration for a septuagenarian's anniversary would naturally call for an unusually good decoration. The accompanying illustration will show what F. M. Brownell, of the retail cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., did when he received such an order. The table was laid for eighteen covers and arranged in the form of a square. In the center was a mass of pink hydrangeas, their blooms extending over the table. Above this, and seemingly resting on the blooms, was an immense cake surrounded by seventy large pink candles. The chandelier above the table is supported by heavy chains, which were wound with smilax and studded with pink sweet peas. Some ties of three-toned green ribbon also were used. At each corner of the table stood tall cut glass vases filled with roses, the stems of the vases being wound with Asparagus plumosus and sweet peas. The place cards, which were suspended from the wine glasses, were tied with pansies, and at each place was a large corsage bouquet of pink sweet peas tied with pink and green cords.

SPECIAL DESIGNS.

When one's customer is set on having some special design in funeral flowers—a railroad train or a floral dynamo—what is the florist to do? Why, take the money, of course.

The customers came to P. Pearson, at his place in Chicago, and would have nothing but a ship. You see, the deceased was a sailor. Since Mr. Pearson could not induce the customers to take something more conventional and a little duced the mayor to issue a proclamation, churches held special services and the day was made much of. By noon of Sunday there was nothing in town that looked like a white flower and "yours truly" did a flourishing business. As far as can be learned, Tulsa was the only town in Oklahoma to generally observe the day. At least she is not in the rear, thanks to your suggestions of April 29.

PERRY N. DE HAVEN.

In Parkersburg, W. Va.

We have watched the REVIEW's reports of Mothers' day, and have noted that in some cities there were large sales, while in others there was not much doing that day, due to no effort to advertise the day. We believe Mothers' day in the future will be one of the banner days for the florist.

In our little city this was the first year that Mothers' day was publicly honored. Our governor issued a proclamation calling on all the people to observe Mothers' day by wearing a white flower. In addition to this we induced the mayor to issue a proclamation to the same effect. We also went to every church in the city and donated plants and a nice vase of white flowers for the altar. Each pastor had a notice placed in the papers calling on the people to attend special services for that day, and also mentioned that the church would be decorated for the occasion. Now, this seems like a whole lot of work and expense, but it paid well. Try it, Mr. Florist, next year, and be well fortified with plenty of white flowers.

In New York.

I wish to let you know that your idea of pushing Mothers' day was a success in Lowville, N. Y. There was a special service in the Presbyterian church, the church being beautifully decorated in white and green. A white carnation was given at the door to each person who did not have one. The local papers took an interest in the matter and gave an interesting description of the observance of the day, asking everyone to wear a white carnation. It will be a big flower day in course of time.

The bottom of the hull was made of violets, the deck edge with carnations; for his water line Mr. Pearson picked blooms of the Primula obconica, which is his specialty. The rigging he wound with thin trails of smilax, with a few violets caught in. The inscription on the bow of the ship was the name of the vessel on which the deceased had sailed—and the design made a great hit with those who ordered it.

THE UPLIFTING INFLUENCE.

A university professor has figured out—and written a book about it—that the shrewdest advertiser is he who is the closest student of psychology, the science of the phenomena of the mind. Not many of us are psychologists; but we all know that the best story is the one that doesn't tell it quite all—that leaves the mind to go just a step farther than the words and grasp the idea. That's what Aristotle, one of the first psychologists, meant when he wrote about the most important principle of psychology, the association of ideas. And it's what the professor argues should be applied to advertising; he thinks the advertiser can create more desire for his merchandise by suggestion than by the method of that other school of advertisers which argues for the direct command. "Buy my Flowers!" printed in big type, may be all very well, says the student of the power of mind over pocketbook, but as a simple business proposition it is not to be compared to the method that merely suggests and leaves something to the intelligence of the reader.

There is no other line of trade that affords a finer field for the employment of psychology. The uplifting influence of flowers is something we hear so much about from those outside the trade that we get just a bit bored with it and lose sight of its great value as a selling power.

LILIES ON AN AUTO.

In the recent automobile parade at Indianapolis some thirty owners entered decorated cars in a class, for which the vehicle decorated by Bertermann Bros. Co. won first prize. The car is shown in the accompanying illustration. Some 600 Easter lilies and a large quantity of Adiantum Farleyense were used.

HYACINTHS A SECOND YEAR.

I note the inquiry of W. D. P. & S. in the REVIEW of April 7, regarding the growing of hyacinth buds the second year.

The answer given to this inquiry—that hyacinths are of no use a second year—is no doubt correct if applied to Roman hyacinths, but we have found it quite satisfactory to save the bulbs of Dutch hyacinths left from stock grown in flats for cutting, or from pot-grown stock that did not happen to sell.

We dump these, soil and all, in a shady place. We generally use the space under the north side of a greenhouse bench, laying them in piles a foot deep or more, and do not water them except just to sprinkle the outside enough to keep the bulbs nearest the surface from shriveling. Along in the fall, when Romans begin to arrive, we get these bulbs out of the soil, plant them in flats the same as Roman hyacinths and give them the same treatment, except that we do not bring them into the greenhouse for growing till about December 1. In that way we have them in flower by about January 1, and while the spikes are not so good as on newly imported stock, we get them earlier and they sell readily as cut flowers, made up in various ways. Considering that the bulbs cost practically nothing, the price of 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen for the flowers shows a fair profit, as they nearly all bloom. W. H. C.

PLANTS FOR MARSHY GROUND.

[An extract from a paper by Arthur E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.]

Water, whether in the form of ponds or streams, is a most valuable adjunct to all gardens, large or small, and no part of an estate can be made more attractive and beautiful than the aquatic garden if it is well arranged and the grandis is similar in all respects, except that the flowers are pure white.

Astilbe rivularis and its two varieties, gigantea and major, are noble plants, with immense foliage and arching spikes of creamy white flowers. A. Chinensis is a plant of great merit, with a light pink inflorescence, and such varieties as Washington, New Rose, Queen Alexandra, Silver Sheaf and Thunbergii, which grow from two to three feet high, are indispensable where the best plants are desired.

The spiraeas, though often regarded as being akin to the astilbes, are botanically quite different; but they are equally beautiful for waterside planting. There is considerable variety of form and coloring among them and a good selection would include gigantea and its variety, rosea, which are six feet high; venusta, with rich pink flowers; palmata and its two varieties, alba and elegans, and the double form of the English meadow sweet, S. Ulmaria flore pleno.

Marigolds, Primulas and Rodgersias.

Everyone is familiar with Caltha palustris, the marsh marigold or king cup, of which there are several good double forms, but the most noteworthy is the new C. polypetala, which is the giant of the family. It has large foliage and the flowers are borne on long stems.

Two handsome North American plants are Napaea dioica and Stenanthium robustum, both deserving of extended cultivation. Oreocome Candollei is also uncommon, but its elegant foliage and white flowers render it attractive.

China is responsible for the best of the hardy primulas, and P. pulverulenta, rich purple; Cockburniana, orange scarlet, and vittata, with deep rosy purple flowers, are unsurpassed for such positions as where P. Japonica succeeds.

For many years Rodgersia podophylla was the only member of this family cultivated in gardens, and had no new varieties been discovered in China we should have been perfectly satisfied with the large, bronzy foliage and numerous white flowers of the well known species, but now there are several others of even greater value. R. æsculifolia, with leaves like a horse chestnut and large panicles of rosy white flowers on stems four feet high, is extremely effective. R. pinnata, with salmon pink flowers, and its white variety are also desirable plants.

Close to the Waterside.

Saxifraga peltata, which produces its tall flower stems in spring before the foliage, is one of the best waterside plants and the variety gigantea is a larger edition in all respects.

One does not often see that beautiful British plant, Butomus umbellatus, in cultivation, although it is one of the best for growing just at the edge of the water. It has rush-like foliage and tall umbels of rosy pink flowers. For spring flowering the globe flowers or trollius are unsurpassed and many beautiful varieties are now obtainable in a variety of colors, some with yellow and others with rich orange-colored flowers. Fire Globe, Newry Giant and Orange Globe are three of the most desirable plants I am acquainted with.

Rheum Alexandrae is an extremely ornamental rhubarb from China and the most effective of the family. The pale yellow leaf bracts which cover the flower stems present a unique and beautiful appearance in June and contrast well with the dark, glossy green foliage.

most suitable plants are employed. This, however, is a large subject and would need a separate lecture to do it justice; so I will confine the rest of my remarks to some herbaceous plants which thrive best at the edge of the water or in marshy ground. Many of these are recent Chinese introductions, and when seen growing one is greatly impressed with the remarkable beauty of that country's flora, and they are all perfectly hardy.

Astilbes and Spiraeas.

Astilbe Davidii is perhaps the most beautiful of the family and, like all the others, would be worth growing for its luxuriant foliage. The flowers are produced on branching stems, five feet in height, and the color is best described as deep rose-pink with a suffusion of violet, a peculiarly beautiful combination, not seen in any other plant. A.

Six Hundred Lilies on an Automobile.

Perhaps the most ornamental of all bog garden plants from the far east are the senecios, and Mr. Wilson would have done a good work for horticulture had he only introduced these. Senecio elvorum is a singularly beautiful plant, with foliage a foot or more in diameter and rich golden yellow flowers three inches across, on branching stems five feet high. S. Veitchianus has large foliage and bright yellow blossoms, which are produced on the upper portion of the stem for fully two feet, and S. Wilsonianus, which is similar in habit, has smaller flowers in much larger numbers. As single specimens or when planted in groups, these three plants are unsurpassed.

A WHITE SALVIA.

Salvias are so indispensable for bedding that a different color from scarlet seems desirable. Many a florist may have pictured in his mind a salvia of a golden yellow color as desirable, while others may have wished for a white of the same general character as our scarlet ones—a regular snowdrift when planted in masses. The white salvia, which is being introduced this year, shows so far every character of the well-known Zurich, though the spike resembles more that of the Fireball, being somewhat heavier than the spike of the Zurich. The originator says that the white salvia is a cross with Fireball, but does not give the other parent, and he introduced it under the name of Bavaria. The color of the spike and calyx is cream, while the flower itself is a pure white. The growth of the plant resembles that of the well-known Zurich so much that the name White Zurich would be more appropriate in our country.

While we do not believe that this new Salvia Bavaria will ever get such a wide distribution or be as popular as the scarlet varieties, it might be worthy of a place with the retail florist and a trial should be made. J. L. SCHILLER.

HARMONY.

[A paper by Mrs. E. Young, of Dayton, O., read at the annual banquet of the Dayton Florists' Club, April 14, 1910.]

The subject that has been assigned to me is an important theme to touch upon. The questions arise: "What is the Florists' Club? For what purpose was it organized? Was it for the purpose of providing a place of meeting where we feel compelled to go once a month, or where we go to be entertained while we look on and criticize?" No, it should be a meeting where harmony reigns supreme; where we should come together with one purpose, that of friendship, and to work toward the elevation of our profession.

One of the first things in a true and happy home is harmony, not strife. So, in our Florists' Club, we must have harmony in order to succeed. Each member has his or her rights, and they are to be respected, but his or her rights are not the only rights; so, if we must differ, let it be done in harmony, ever striving to help one another.

If we are harmonious, we cannot help spending a pleasant evening together. We all know that flowers are grown the most perfectly in good soil and sunshine, so let us all bring sunshine to our club meetings. There is inspiration in every word spoken cheerfully and smilingly; in such an atmosphere we find harmony.

The Great Desideratum.

The one thing we need most of all is that the members take an interest in our club and be regular in attendance at the meetings. Harmony is essential to every organization, no matter how important it is or what its purpose; no club can exist without it.

There are differences and difficulties that are sure to arise, and we must meet them in a cheerful mood. Do not be selfish; help the other fellow and he will help you. Do not act in a dissatisfied manner, but take things as they come. Remember that harmony is one of the principles of success, and success is the goal we are striving for.

Let harmony be your ideal and watchword on every hand, and by keeping this in mind you are bound to succeed.

"Friendship, kind words and love's cheerful smile Bespeak the truth, 'Twas worth our while."

Therefore, let each and every one look after the welfare of our club; then harmony will prevail.

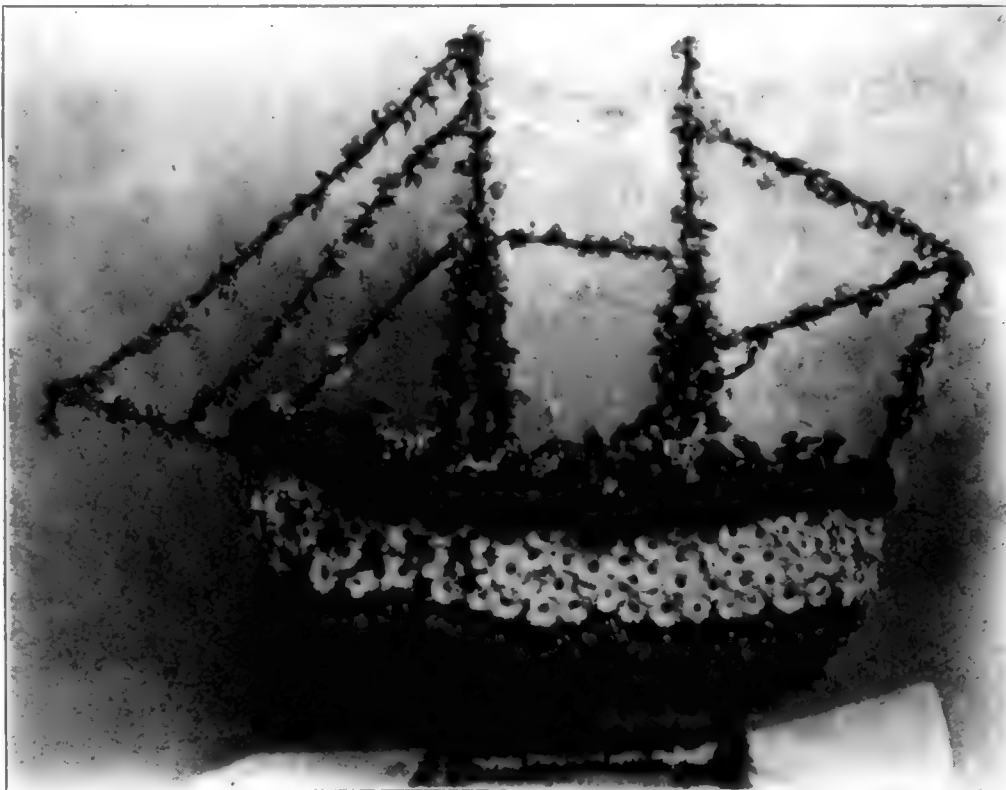

GOOD FOR POT PLANTS.

Name four geraniums to grow in pots to bloom any time, white, pink, scarlet and salmon, single, semi-double or double. Name a few good easily grown plants to sell as pot plants in bloom, to be grown from seed or otherwise. I wish plants of some substance that will do the customers some good. My trade is changing, more calling for blooming pot plants than bulbs. I live in Texas. A. D. H.

Alphonse Ricard, semi-double scarlet; Beaute Poitevine, semi-double salmon pink; Jean Viaud, double rose-pink; La Favorite, double white; S. A. Nutt, double dark scarlet. One or two good singles are: Dryden, soft crimson, large white eye; Snowdrop, pure white; Paul Crampel, scarlet; Jacquerie, crimson scarlet.

A few plants to grow from seed or otherwise are: Dutch bulbs, including hyacinths, tulips and narcissi; spiræas, such as Japonica, Queen Alexandra and Gladstone; Azalea Indica; roses, such as Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha, Baby Rambler and Clothilde Soupert; genistas, marguerites, Lilium longiflorum, petunias, heliotropes, gloxinias, tuberous and fibrous-rooted begonias, fuchsias, geraniums, both zonal and ivy-leaved, and Browallia speciosa major. Lorraine begonias should do well with you, but in your warm climate cinerarias, calceolarias, primulas and cyclamens will, I am afraid, not be a success.

THE S. A. F. TRADE EXHIBIT.

The accompanying diagram shows the ground floor plan of Convention hall, Rochester, N. Y., in which the meetings of the S. A. F. will be held and where the trade exhibit will be staged. The fact that the meetings of the society and the exhibition are to be held under one roof, and practically on one floor, will make the Rochester convention of special interest and value to florists, dealers and manufacturers of florists' supplies. Here the ambitious grower can listen to the advice of experts in floriculture and in a minute's time see the most approved methods for obtaining the desired result.

Convention hall consists of two adjoining buildings that can be opened into one. The main building is 74x170 feet, with a large gallery on three sides. At the right of the main entrance the meeting room has been located. This room is 40x70 feet, and is especially planned for the sessions of the S. A. F. The remainder of the floor space of the main hall—about 9,800 square feet—will be devoted entirely to exhibits of cut flowers, plants, bulbs, seeds, florists' decorative material, supplies, etc.

The building at the left was constructed about a year ago, and was especially planned for exhibition purposes. About 11,000 square feet will be available for staging exhibits. All light machinery will be placed on the ground floor, while the exhibits of heavy machinery, heating apparatus, greenhouse appliances, etc., will be set up in the basement, a well equipped, light and airy place for such displays.

The interior decorations will be on an elaborate scale. The stage opposite the main entrance will be converted into a representation of a French garden; in the center a fountain will play, the water rippling down over miniature cascades into the pools below. Aisle space will be reserved from the main entrance to the stage, and in the center from left to right through both buildings, thus giving unobstructed views of the stage and exhibits. The floor plan and decorations are designed by A. S. De Forest, of Rochester.

Superintendent C. H. Vick is enthusiastic over the outlook for the largest trade exhibit in the history of the S. A.

F. Applications for space are coming in daily and the reservations are large, thus indicating that dealers and manufacturers of supplies appreciate the value of the trade exhibit as an advertising medium.

SPORT OF BEGONIA FEASTII.

I am sending under separate cover a photograph of a begonia which I have never seen elsewhere, which originated with me about two years ago. I would like to know if there is such a variety on the market. If not, I have stock enough so that I could work enough up to offer to the trade within a year. I am sending the picture of a 6-inch pot blooming plant. It is a sport of the Begonia Feastii and has the same characteristics, with the exception of the edge of the leaf, the crinkled effect of which the photograph will show much better than I can explain. The plant shows no tendency to revert to the Feastii—more towards becoming more curly around the edge.

L. C. B.

I have never seen any form of this begonia with curled foliage such as this sport carries. I think this is quite a unique novelty and would certainly advise you to make up a stock of it. As it has shown no signs of reversion as yet, it will undoubtedly hold true.

W. N. CRAIG.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Cyclamens.

Cyclamen seedlings which are still in flats should be potted as soon as possible. Use 3-inch pots, unless the plants are small. Instead of potting the smallest ones, transplant them into flats for a few weeks longer. For compost use a good fibrous loam, to which should be added some flaky leaf-mold, well rotted cow manure passed through a fine screen, and sand. Cyclamens, while somewhat tender, do not require strong heat at any stage of their growth. They dislike sudden changes and succeed best where extremes of temperature are avoided. A winter average minimum of 55 degrees for young plants is about right. If the temperature can always be kept between 55 and 70 degrees and other conditions are all right, cyclamens should do well. Keep the atmosphere somewhat humid all the time, and, as the sun is now getting quite powerful, a light shade is necessary to subdue its rays. Do not shade heavily at any time, or the plants will become drawn and weakened. Avoid cold drafts, but give all possible air, to promote a sturdy growth.

The bugbear of cyclamen cultivators is the dreaded mite. Every year fine batches are ruined by it. Some claim that spraying checks it, others that dipping in a nicotine solution is a partial remedy, but there is in reality no known cure for this disease when once it appears. Our own idea is that it originates in the soil and thorough sterilization of all potting compost is the best way to fight it. Possibly some plants may show the mite even in sterilized soil, but there can be no doubt that sterilization assists wonderfully in keeping the plants clean.

Asters.

The earliest sowing of asters is now getting well established in benches, where they will be allowed to flower. The early varieties only are used for this purpose, and while disbudding can be done and good flowers obtained, it pays much better to merely pinch out the leading shoot and make the plants break. The flowers on the lateral shoots are of a size that every country florist can find plenty of use for. Do not shade any of the indoor asters at any time until the flowers are opening, when a coat of white lead and kerosene will cool the temperature and add to their keeping qualities. Keep the surface soil constantly stirred and grow the plants cool and airy all the time.

Later sowings of asters will require transplanting before they become starved and crowded in the seed flats. Use a moderately rich soil for them. Sowings in coldframes are now timely, while, except in the more northerly states, they can be sown outdoors. Be sure to pulverize the soil well in every case. In more southerly states asters can now be planted out with perfect safety. In the north it is necessary to wait until the early part of May. Asters are hardier than many people imagine and the plants will withstand several degrees of frost without injury. In the case of late varieties, like Vick's Branching and Semple's, seed should be sown by the first week in May, but the earlier varieties can be sown until the middle of June. Be sure that the land to be used for asters is kept well cultivated. This kills the weeds, and where cutworms are numerous the constant stirring up exposes them to the robins and other birds, which will destroy thousands of them.

Gloxinias.

The earlier started gloxinias are now coming into bloom. These are given a well shaded house, with a night temperature of 60 degrees, the plants being kept quite close to the glass. In watering, care must be taken not to wet the foliage any more than is absolutely necessary. If the sun can strike such plants while their foliage is damp, they are soon badly scorched and made quite unsalable. When well opened, gloxinias can be placed in a house 10 degrees cooler, in which they will get more substance and keep much longer, but they must always be well shaded from the sun and cold drafts must never strike them. Later tubers, starting up naturally now, even in a cool storeroom, will be found useful in late summer. Gloxinias enjoy a light but moderately rich compost, and it is better not to use chemical fertilizers if flowers with substance are desired. Seedlings started in January are now of a good size in flats and will soon go into 3½-inch pots, with a later shift into 5½-inch, in which they will be allowed to flower.

Coldframes.

The pressure on the greenhouses can now be greatly relieved where there is an abundance of coldframe sashes at command. Almost any of the hardier and many quite tender annuals can now be placed in these, either in pots or flats, or pricked directly into the beds themselves. Such annuals as asters, stocks, verbenas, marigolds, salvias, zinnias, Phlox Drummondii, dianthus and vincas will be stockier and better in every way if grown in frames. The main requirements are plenty of water, careful ventilation, and protection on any unusually cold nights. Geraniums will also now do well in frames, and if they can be partially plunged in ashes over a few inches of well tramped, warm manure, the growth they make will surprise you.

Curly-leaved Sport of Begonia Feastii.

It is yet rather early to risk coleus, achyranthes, cannas, ricinus, acalyphas and other plants of a tender nature in frames, but dahlias grown from green cuttings or from divided roots, if grown in frames, are far stockier than any kept in greenhouses.

Sweet Peas.

The continued clear, warm weather is telling on sweet peas under glass, if they have flowered a good part of the winter, and the flowers are now running smaller on these. It will hardly pay to keep these in any longer at prevailing prices. Tomatoes or cucumbers make a good summer crop if the houses are not wanted for chrysanthemums. Later sown peas under glass, which are just giving their first pickings, must be carefully looked after. A too dry atmosphere will quickly allow red spider to get in its deadly work, while an injudicious use of moisture, with erratic ventilation, may cause mildew to appear. Sweet peas like to be kept cool and moist at the root. They also love fresh, pure air, and if they are in large, roomy houses they will be unlikely to suffer from the ailments peculiar to smaller and more old-fashioned structures.

The earliest outdoor sowing is now making rapid progress and should have been given brush or wire supports by this time. This being done, loosen the soil well and give the spaces between the rows a liberal mulch of straw, hay, littery manure, seaweed or any other available material. This will keep weeds down, hold moisture and keep the roots cool. If you have sown your seed thickly—a common error—have courage to thin severely and the results will well repay you for so doing.

Herbaceous Peonies.

There are no more popular or more generally useful hardy herbaceous plants for florists than peonies. The demand for them steadily increases, and of the really good kinds it is doubtful if there will be any overplus for some years to come. The plants are now making rapid growth and, with a continuation of warm weather, a larger proportion than ever should be in season at Memorial day. The present is a good time to feed the plants. An application of some quick working fertilizer will materially improve both stems and flowers. For this purpose nitrate of soda and dried blood are each excellent. Liquid manure, where it can be applied economically, is hard to beat. It is best applied after a soaking rain, and the soil should be cultivated before it has time to dry out too much. Constant tickling of the surface soil is half the battle in successful farming and gardening, and no good crops can be grown where it is neglected.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The Knob Hill Greenhouses have been sold to the Colorado Springs Floral Co., who will continue the business.

THRIPS.

I am sending a package containing a carnation bloom, bud and cutting. The blooms do not open properly. The variety is Lieut. Peary. Other carnations in the same bench are free from the trouble. The plants of Peary grow well, but there are light spots on some of the leaves, and the petals have dried edges. Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated. N. E.

The specimens forwarded showed plainly the ravages of thrips. Whenever you see those brown edges on white varieties, or white spots on the petals of colored varieties, you may take it as a signal to get busy. Nicotine, administered in any form, is the standard remedy for destroying this pest.

There is considerable difference of opinion among growers as to the relative merits of fumigating and spraying. Some use both methods, and sometimes one method may be preferable and sometimes the other, according to circumstances. We use the spraying method altogether, and we think that on places where flowers are cut every day it is the best. We can spray any day without interfering with the cutting of the blooms, as no odor is left on the blooms a few hours after the spraying is done. The odor from the fumes does not disappear so quickly. We use a compressed air sprayer and a medium spraying nozzle.

Get a quantity at once and spray three times each week until you see the trouble disappearing. After that once each week will likely be enough. Of the forty or forty-five per cent solutions, use three teaspoonfuls to each gallon of water. Each gallon of this mixture should spray 800 to 1,000 square feet of bench space thoroughly.

We have noticed that early in the morning, before the sun is strong, the insects are most numerous on the outside of the buds. When the sun gets up higher they seem to disappear from view. From this you can readily see that the best time for spraying is early in the morning or on a cloudy day. Evaporation is not so rapid then, either, and the effect should be better for that reason.

Get rid of them at once, for if you wait until really warm weather sets in, they will multiply so fast that you will be unable to get rid of them at all.

ROHRER'S STRASBURG PLACE.

A. N. Rohrer is one of the well known growers at Strasburg, Pa., where the photographs for the accompanying illustrations were made, March 20. Mr. Rohrer's establishment consists of about 7,000 feet of glass. He is a carnation specialist, one of those marketing stock through the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, but also grows bedding plants, and sweet peas and asters in their seasons. The illustrations will serve to show how thoroughly up-to-date are Mr. Rohrer's houses. The varieties grown are Lawson, Winsor, Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon, and the season's performance of Lawson shows that it is not yet the least profitable of the quintette of varieties. He employs field culture for his stock, planting outdoors as early as circumstances will permit and lifting about August 1. In the larger illustration Mr. Rohrer stands in the path at the left of a bench of Enchantress, with his son, J. H. Rohrer, in the path at the right.

HYACINTH SPIKES DECAYING.

I am mailing you two samples of hyacinths and would like to know what is the trouble with them. I potted them the last week in October and placed them in an underground cellar, and they grew well. I have grown hyacinths for fourteen years and never had a failure before. Out of 100 bulbs I did not have one fit to sell this year. I kept them watered and brought them out to flower for Easter, but the flowers never grew after being brought up. They were placed on a light bench in a temperature of 45 degrees at night and from 50 to 60 degrees during the day. D. S.

The bulbs sent had each an abundance of healthy roots. The foliage also was good, while the flower spikes had evidently rotted after being so far advanced. The mere fact that the roots and foliage were healthy and normal would seem to indicate that an excess of water had been poured over the foliage, which had caused rotting of the spikes. In a light, sunny house water would not much matter, as the moisture would soon dry, but in a dark, damp cellar it would assuredly cause the trouble you have experienced. Applied to narcissi, tulips and almost any other bulbs, water would do no harm, but hyacinth spikes just pushing up are easily rotted, unless you water around the sides of the pots. C. W.

CAMPHORATED TOBACCO STEMS.

I read an article some time ago which stated that camphor water sprinkled on tobacco stems would make them more effective when burned. Please tell me how the camphor water is prepared and how strong it is used. R. A. W.

The usual strength of camphorated water to be used to sprinkle tobacco stems is one ounce of camphor to one gallon of water. It can be used much stronger than this, however, with perfect safety.

As to its efficacy when used in this form, I have my doubts. RIBES.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A heavy rain storm, the culmination of the southern and western storms, swept down upon New York and vicinity April 17, and before Monday noon had dissipated all the bad effects of the late heat and drought and evened up the average April rainfall. Clearing skies appeared late Monday—too late for the opening ball game of the season—and many a florist's heart ached with disappointment, for though few of them are baseball fans, like Will Gunther and his brothers, yet most of them take in the opening game of the Giants, just as they did the debut of the American League Thursday, April 14, and that seems to satisfy most of these busy men for the balance of the summer. The weather must have been made to order for the nurserymen and seedsmen. Everything this year seems to be coming their way.

Prices in the cut flower market are better, and though the advance has been only slight, it is encouraging to all concerned. Beauties, if selected, sold at 25 cents Saturday, April 16, and fine Bride, Maid and Killarney easily commanded 6 cents for the best. To quote a price on small lots is not fair to either grower or wholesaler. The quotations I endeavor to give are at hundred rates. The surplus and the thousand lots are a problem that must be solved by those most interested.

Prices are better also for carnations; 2 cents to 3 cents was the asking price Saturday for the selected stock. The day-old and sleepy stock is on the street. Dozens of merchants, with their stores in their baskets, infest the leading streets. Every one of them should be forced to take out a license and pay for his privileges. But they get rid of the surplus; so, after all, it may be as well to let them alone. They will soon be off to the summer resorts, and we will see no more of them until October.

Fine gardenias still arrive in goodly quantity and prices are now shaded so that all the good stores handle them freely. Cattleyas hold at 75 cents for the best, and more of them could be sold. Lilies bring better figures, 6 cents for the best being easily obtainable. Valley, too, has advanced and will hold at 3 cents for the best until the outdoor valley arrives. Arbutus is already here and lilac is as abundant as any market can possibly absorb. Plenty of bulbous stock of all kinds comes daily and apple and cherry boughs and even Magnolia Soulangiana blooms make gay the retail windows.

Monday's storm resulted in light shipments and also put a damper on business generally. Prices did not advance because of this scarcity, as the general demand is light and nothing of great importance in decorating is on tap this week, except the Gould-Drexel wedding.

Meeting for Market Movement.

A joint meeting of the New York Florists' Club, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, the New York and New Jersey Market Florists' Association, the Cut Flower Exchange and the Cut Flower Company was held at the Grand Opera House building, Monday evening, April 18. President Miller, of the New York Florists' Club, occupied the chair. About 100 were in attendance, including those who follow all branches of the business. W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., gave full details of the proposed public market, which the city has offered for the plant and flower associations. He was listened to with intense interest. Julius Roehrs, Jr., spoke heartily in favor of the scheme. President Miller said the market was for every department of the trade and was intended to include everything that florists use.

H. C. Steinhoff spoke of his twenty-five years' experience with the Canal market and of this being the first offer of the kind that ever has been made. He spoke of the markets of Paris, London and other cities. He considered the opportunity worthy of immediate acceptance. Mr. Moore, of the New York Cut Flower Co., said he understood the city offer to be for a retail market only. Mr. Miller explained that the market must be a public market. Charles Lenker said the marketman should have the privilege of selling in any way he deemed best, and that harmony and success depended on it. A. M. Henshaw thought the space inadequate for the purpose. John Birnie said the market proposed would cover 50,000 square feet. Alex. Donaldson said it was an ideal spot for a plant and cut flower market and that everybody he had spoken to agreed with him. He said the Cut Flower Exchange had a lease for four years longer and the Cut Flower Co. also one, but that it might be possible to sublet, if the owners would consent. He thought it was an opportunity that would never come again.

J. B. Nugent said sidewalk space is available equal to the enclosed space, and that it would take ten times as much stock of flowers and plants as now come to New York to occupy it all. President Miller considered the city's terms reasonable.

Mr. Schraeder moved that petitions be at once prepared requesting the city to set the space apart for the market purposes. The motion carried.

W. F. Sheridan thought the market should be wholesale only. It is impossible that there should be both wholesale and retail work, he said. He referred to the tie-up of most of the wholesale florists with long leases, but that he was in favor ultimately of concentration, but for wholesale only. John Birnie thought this could be accomplished; that many of the small growers would increase their output, and that the craft never again will have such a golden opportunity. He referred to the other markets of the world and the greatness of New York in growth and future destiny. A. M. Henshaw suggested many practical necessities to make it a success. Mr. Nugent spoke for the retailers and thought the peddlers would be put out of business and did not believe the retailers would be injured in any way by the establishment of the market. Alex. Donaldson moved that each organization pay pro rata towards the expenses of the negotiations.

President Miller suggested a meeting with Commissioner Goodacre, with representatives of all the organizations. Anton Zvolanek said all present seemed agreed as to the project. He suggested that all interests unite to effect a success. John Birnie suggested that Secretary Siebrecht interview the market association. H. C. Steinhoff suggested a committee from each organization to be given full power to go ahead and complete arrangements. Mr. Siebrecht moved that all associations that have not already appointed committees, do so immediately, so that every organization may be represented by five members. Charles Lenker emphasized the necessity of a public market. There must be no restrictions. The Growers' Cut Flower Co., of sixty-eight members, through its ex-president, requested the appointment of a committee from its membership. The New York Florists' Protective Association was also suggested, and the New York Retail Florists' Association.

H. C. Steinhoff spoke in favor of the various committees having full power to make final arrangements. Charles Lenker gave an interesting account of his travels in Europe and his visits to the flower markets there and their methods. John Birnie and others declared the market must be wholesale only.

The meeting was one of continued interest and harmony. The discussions were spirited and practical and it seems certain that something practical will be evolved without delay.

Various Notes.

The Aphine Mfg. Co., of Madison, gave a demonstration of the value of its insecticide Wednesday, April 13, under the auspices of the horticultural society at Glen Cove, which proved to be one of the most successful it has yet made. A large number of gardeners were present and many of them brought infested plants for treatment. The test was under the supervision of Treasurer M. C. Ebel, assisted by Robert Schultz, and several from New York were present, including Secretary Maynard of the Gardeners' Society of America. A splendid meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in the evening.

It is an anxious week for some of the wholesalers on Twenty-eighth street, who must find new quarters by May 1. The ground between Sixth and Seventh avenues is being well canvassed and considered. The Kervan Co. now occupies two stores there, so rapidly has its business grown. The wholesale cut flower business seems to be pretty permanently established in this locality. Long leases have been taken in the big building Traendly & Schenck and Walter Sheridan have chosen.

There is no diminution in the crowds that attend the auctions. Compared with other years, prices are advancing and the scarcity of nursery stock is plainly emphasized. Hardy roses and fruit trees have advanced 100 per cent. The seed houses are sharing in the general demand. Every firm is behind in its shipments. The continued cool weather is a godsend.

James Romaine Strang, for eight years bookkeeper for William Elliott & Sons, died last week after an eight weeks' illness of tuberculosis of the bowels. He was much respected by all who knew him.

J. H. F. Matz has a prosperous plant at Glen Cove, L. I., with over an acre of land and several greenhouses, and is the leading retail florist of that section of Long Island.

M. A. Bowe has orders for decorations for two society weddings next week and seems to always have as much business as he can attend to.

It is rumored a prominent Broadway florist is engaged to a charming widow with two millions, and wedding bells in June and a European trip are on the program.

The A. T. Bunyard Co. has a big wedding in June at Bernardsville, N. J. Romeo Guido is proving a good lieutenant here.

John F. Sharkey has a large wedding Thursday, April 21, at the Church of Epiphany, the Swift-Hurry wedding, which will naturally require some rapid decorating. At the large funeral of one of the Borden family at Cranford, N. J., Sunday, April 17, Mr. Sharkey had the family order, including a casket cover of American Beauties.

J. Martens, of Hamburg, Germany, whose specialty is lily of the valley, is in the city, also C. Colijn, of Voorhout, Holland, who handles Dutch bulbs.

Lightning seldom strikes twice in the same place, but George Saltford can prove it sometimes does. A while ago a burglar managed to open his safe and carry off quite a profitable night's wages. Sunday the bolt struck the safe again and did some damage to the front of it, but the income of the week was safely stowed away in the bank's keeping and the "burgle" was in vain.

The decorations which Alex. McConnell put up for the Gould-Drexel wedding, April 19, were the most elaborate New York has seen in the last twenty-five years.

Thomas Young, Jr., at Boundbrook, N. J., has installed $25,000 worth of orchids in his six 500-foot greenhouses, where he has grown gardenias this season. He has a specialist in charge of each of his gardenia, rose and orchid departments.

Anton Zvolanek, who has thirty-four acres in Boundbrook, N. J., and 20,000 square feet of glass devoted entirely to sweet peas, says they are now scarce and that his stock is bringing 20 cents a bunch in the market, the highest price of the season. His three sons are associated with him in the business.

W. B. Reed, of Reed & Keller, leaves April 28, with Mrs. Reed, for a European trip via the steamship Cincinnati. They will be back in time for the convention at Rochester. Mr. Reed has fully recovered his health and says he is going on the Cincinnati because of the good time he had at the last convention.

Walter L. Curtis, floral decorator at Utica, N. Y., was in the city this week, visiting the palm houses at Rutherford. He says that young, ambitious man, Peter Crowe, has returned to his first love, taken over all his greenhouses, and is back in the growing business to stay. He has taken Henry Martin as partner and Mr. Martin will handle the retail part of the business at Utica.

N. Lecakes has purchased a farm in South Norwalk, of forty-seven acres, and will move there with his family in May for the summer. Manager Foley says the galax leaves now arriving from the south are worthless.

The New York Retailers' Association will have a special meeting Thursday, April 21, at the Lenox Lyceum.

Charles Millang has recovered and is again on deck and as lively as a cricket as usual. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Continued warm weather does not seem to have helped trade to any great extent, possibly because those having gardens have some flowers of their own, as all early shrubbery is in bloom, including lilacs and all the bulbous flowers.

The hot spell has also forced the crops of carnations and there is not much of a surplus, but roses are still coming in quantities.

Beauties continue to arrive in such quantities that prices are far too low to satisfy the growers, and indeed one can scarcely believe that Beauty growers have made good the last couple of years. In this city, the fancy Killarney roses have largely taken the place of Beauties, to such extent, in fact, that some of the retailers can hardly be persuaded to carry samples, much less stock.

There are few violets coming in, but they are good, considering the season. Sweet peas have largely taken the place of violets and are much in demand; those coming into this city are fine and find ready sale.

Various Notes.

time, but it was so dry that they are only now beginning to plant, as the rain the last of the week put the soil in proper condition.

There are two parties near this city who are desirous of selling out at a sacrifice, really bargains waiting for some one with about $15,000 cash; the balance can go as long as the purchaser desires; but where can you find a florist with $15,000 loose cash?

The many friends of Judge Vesey in this city wish to express their sympathy in the death of Mrs. Vesey, and the ladies who met Mrs. Vesey recently at the convention also send their sympathy.

George Marshall, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., is one of the two candidates nominated for the select council, from the twenty-fifth ward, to take the place made vacant by one of the self-confessed grafters. It was a regular democratic meeting with a fair-sized scrap, and neither candidate has any idea, at this time, whose name will appear on the ticket. Hoo-Hoo.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

It is really surprising to see how business has kept up of late; if there is no large funeral on, then weddings, receptions and that kind of work have turned up, thus keeping the market pretty well cleaned up nearly all the time. Violets are a thing of the past for this season, thus making an opening for the increased supply of sweet peas and valley.

The typical April weather, with its changing temperatures and lack of sunshine, has curtailed receipts in nearly every line, so that prices have gone up a notch or two in most cases. Callas and snapdragons have been good items to handle of late, especially the latter, which have been in larger supply and of better quality this spring than in previous seasons.

The local carnation market is again on a firm basis, for the extremely mild weather in March brought on the full crop with most growers, which lasted until Easter. Since that time the supply has gradually diminished, so that at the present time stock of good quality is cleaned up at sight, and at good prices.

The demand for the higher grade of green goods has been ahead of the supply.

Various Notes.

The latest addition to the list of retail florists is the National Floral Co., which opened a store at 920 National avenue, April 9, with Ed. Perstein as the main promoter. He gained his experience by selling flowers about the city for some time, so is not a newcomer.

James M. Fox & Son Co. had the decorations for the wedding of Miss Elsa Lemp to Thomas H. Wright, both of St. Louis, which took place April 12 at the home of the bride's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav G. Pabst, in Milwaukee. From a florist's standpoint it was the most elaborate that has taken place for some time. It cleaned up the market on high grade stock of Beauties, Killarney and other roses and lily of the valley.

John C. Arnold, who has successfully conducted a flower store at 44 Juneau avenue for the last few years, is about to move to more spacious quarters in the new building at 603 East Water street.

At the W. E. Dallwig seed store they report business as exceptionally fine; it began with the first warm weather and has been a continual rush ever since.

Rudolph Preuss, at 24 Vine street, reports that business is keeping up nicely—always something doing, either in one line or the other.

At the election, April 5, C. B. Whinnall, an honorary member of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, was elected city treasurer. He is widely known throughout the country, being a charter member of the S. A. F. and a regular attendant at most conventions.

At the last club meeting Alex Klokner entertained those present by giving a description of his recent travels, which led him from British Columbia down the Pacific coast, through California, the middle west, down to Mexico and back through the southern states. It was a treat appreciated by all. The following club members were selected to help the Outdoor Art Association judge the backyards, before and after planting: C. Dallwig, August Kellner, Robert Zepnick, Wm. Zimmermann and Walter Hummel.

Nic. Zweifel, as representative of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, is one of the three judges who will officiate in that capacity in the class for flower beds at this year's state fair.

Manke Bros., of North Milwaukee, have the material on hand for three houses, each 27x180, plus a new heating plant, thereby doubling their glass area, but making two distinct ranges, the whole to be devoted to carnations exclusively.

POSTMASTER CROWELL.

When the interests allied with the Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O., established a Mississippi nursery for rose growing, the name of Rich seemed especially appropriate for the town—as typifying the character of the soil required for such an industry, not what its promoters expected to become through the business. But now the establishment of the United States Nursery Co. is to be known as located at Roseacres and this brief sketch introduces Postmaster S. W. Crowell. Mr. Crowell has been manager of the nursery ever since it was started and has developed it from an uncultivated tract to a position as the leading establishment of its kind in the country. He is a young man, full of the progressive spirit which has made Springfield so important a center in the mailing plant trade, and when the United States postoffice department agreed to establish a postoffice on the nursery grounds, as it did a few days ago, it was natural that he should be selected as postmaster at Roseacres. Was there ever a better chosen name?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Following a record-breaking Easter, the florists continue to report good business, with little indication of falling off for the present. Usually after Easter, there is nothing doing until Memorial day, and then the June graduations of the schools. Funeral work remains brisk and there have been an unusual number of big, fashionable weddings, balls and other social functions that have accelerated business. There is a plentiful supply of carnations, roses and sweet peas, although of the latter, in white, there was a big call the last part of the week, which found a dearth of blossoms.

Various Notes.

B. A. Bohlsar has leased three acres of land at Newport for the propagation of nursery stock.

Fred B. Luther had the decorations for the McKay-Kent wedding, April 11.

A. Holscher is bringing in some fine sweet peas and cut pansies. He also has excellent assortments of the latter in baskets for planting.

Joseph L. Reynolds, for many years associated with T. J. Johnston & Co., is rapidly convalescing from the injuries he received last fall.

E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster, Mass., read an instructive and valuable paper on "Orchids" at the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society last week. The paper was generally discussed by the members.

M. Sweeney had the decorations for the Martin-Olsen wedding, April 12. Palms, ferns and hemlock boughs transformed the entire house into a veritable palm garden, with a plethora of Killarney roses.

The immense bed of tulips in the middle of the plaza, fronting the Union railroad depot in this city, is far handsomer this year than ever. It contains nearly 5,000 plants and was set out by the Hope Greenhouses, Miss Florence Willard, proprietor.

After May 1, Carl Jurgens, of Newport, will dispose of his cut flowers through his own salesman at the New York Cut Flower Co.'s rooms at 55-57 West Twenty-sixth street.

Johnston Bros. have added a handsome line of hammered brass vases, jardinières and similar goods. They are doing a big business.

There was a large display of flowers at the funeral of Robert W. Dean, at Cranston, April 17, the orders being well distributed.

Stephen Toher is completing a new house, 25x75, on Concord street, which he will put to carnations and bedding stock.

Nathan D. Pierce, of the Norwood Greenhouses, is driven hard with laying out the new grounds at the Pomham club, and other outdoor work.

John D. Duly is now the gardener at Mrs. F. W. Andrews' estate near Newport.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, has just purchased a new automobile and makes his deliveries in an eight horse-power Oldsmobile runabout.

William Miller, formerly an assistant, has succeeded Andrew J. Pow as head gardener for Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's Newport residence, The Breakers.

Mrs. G. H. H. Mercer was the decorator for the Simmons-Pearce wedding, April 14.

John A. Schwartau, who has been employed for several seasons by S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, as a rose grower, has gone to Ohio, where he has accepted a similar position.

E. Kempenaar, of the firm of Bulk & Kempenaar, of Boskoop, Holland, has leased a large tract of land at Newport and is to engage in the propagation and culture of nursery stock.

William Chappell is contemplating a general overhauling and rearrangement of his range of houses this spring.

F. Macrae's Sons are busy in their preliminary work for spring planting and cleaning up. They report a good winter's business.

O'Connor had the decorations for the ante-wedding reception tendered to Miss Grosvenor at the Agawam Hunt, April 15.

Charles Newton, for several years gardener for M. I. T. Burden at Newport, is now in charge of the greenhouses of the R. T. Wilson estate at Palmetto Bluffs, S. C.

William B. Hazard says he has more than doubled his business since his removal to the Mathewson street store.

Joseph Kopelman is to begin the erection in a few days of another of the houses that he purchased last year of the Rhode Island Greenhouse range when it was dismantled. It will go up on his farm estate in Oaklawn.

A. Brandt, of Newport, is offering 300,000 pansy plants from his own propagating houses. They are of fine strain, strong and healthy. They sold at $10 per 1,000.

W. H. M.

NEW CANAAN, CONN.—S. B. Hoyt has been improving the approach to his greenhouses, on South Main street, by filling the low places with soil, laying out the grounds attractively and planting flower beds.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

It is reported that sphagnum moss is on the scarce side and to be picked up when the opportunity offers.

THE jobbers of window glass predict still higher prices, but say previous advances have not appeared to affect florists' buying.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

If "I. O. U.," who writes with green ink, will send his full name and address the REVIEW will be pleased to reply to his question. Anonymous inquiries cannot be answered.

THE Ladies' Society of American Florists, of which Mrs. W. J. Vesey was the first president, has adopted suitable resolutions on her death, as has the St. Louis Ladies' Home Circle, and numerous florists' clubs.

OBITUARY.

Hermann Wild.

Hermann Wild, for forty-two years a resident of Sarcoxie, Mo., died at his home on Sunday, April 10, of old age. Born in Rosswein, Saxony, December 24, 1824, he left his native country at the age of 20, arriving in New York. From that city he went to Milwaukee, Wis., and in 1848 was married to Miss Maria Haase, who survives him.

One of the early settlers at Sarcoxie, he purchased a tract of land and commenced farming, later establishing a business as a nurseryman. He was a man of kindly nature and benevolent disposition. Recently he and his wife presented to the city a tract of land for a park.

Besides the widow, one brother and six children survive him. He was a member of the Odd Fellows' order for forty years, and his body was laid to rest with Odd Fellow honors.

Henry G. McPike.

Henry G. McPike, better known as the "Illinois Burbank," died suddenly at his home in Alton, Ill., Monday morning, April 18. Mr. McPike was well known in horticultural circles throughout the country. He originated the now well-known McPike grape. Mr. McPike was born in 1825 and had been a resident of Alton since 1847 and twice served that city as mayor.

FLOWER SHOWS BRING CRUSH.

SOME day in the big cities of America horticulture will be as popular with the public as it now is in Great Britain, where the Royal Horticultural Society has a fellowship exceeding 11,000 and is struggling with the problem of how to avoid the physical discomforts incident to the overcrowding of its flower shows. This spring the applications for exhibition space have been so numerous that it has been necessary to set the tables close together and the attendance has become so large that in the middle of the afternoon the crush has made movement practically impossible. The Gardeners' Chronicle recently printed an illustration reproduced from a photograph made in Horticultural hall during the height of the crush. The discomfort of those who came to enjoy the exhibition was all too plainly evident.

COMPOSITION OF MANURE.

The following table gives the average composition of the most important animal manures:

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Market conditions did not improve last week, as was expected. Indeed, the week proved a distinct disappointment to growers and wholesalers. It had been hoped that the worst of the congestion and low prices was past, and it proved that supplies were diminished, but demand also fell away, with the result that there was no improvement in the average prices, while the volume of sales was considerably reduced. The opening of the present week did not bring a change for the better. A good business at wholesale was done Friday and Saturday, but rains were general wherever Chicago flowers go, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, with the result that retailers found themselves with enough carried-over stock so that they did not need to buy heavily at the beginning of the present week.

There is an abundance of material in almost every line, in spite of the fact that the weather shows radical change from the midsummer conditions of the last three weeks; where we have been experiencing 30 degrees above normal, now we have 10 degrees below ordinary April temperature. One would expect it to result in a sharp reduction in supplies, but no one need want for flowers. Also, the extremely low prices which prevailed after Easter have resulted in rose growers prosecuting replanting operations much more industriously than usual during April. Ordinarily some beginning at the work is made this early, but this year the middle of April found many growers well along toward the completion of their replanting. Of course, rose growers do not nowadays replant all their places in any one year, so the effect of throwing out old stock is not so apparent in the market's receipts of roses as was the case in earlier times. Neither the weather nor the replanting has sufficed to cut down rose supplies; the receipts are still ahead of requirements, extremely low prices prevail, and the quality of the stock is so good that splendid values are to be had in all varieties. Retailers certainly should be doing a large, satisfactory and highly profitable business. Killarney is by far the best selling rose; Maid will be a scarce article next season. Some superb White Killarney also are seen. There is an oversupply of long Beauties of indifferent quality, but really good Beauties are selling fairly well. Not many growers are cutting any considerable quantity of medium and shorter Beauties that will pass muster; the good ones in these lengths sell briskly.

The carnation market was weak, but after Friday's cheap clean-up became erratic; an advance is expected because of the cold weather. Sweet peas continue about the best selling article in the list. Only a few violets now come in. Jonquils and daffodils still are abundant and cheap. The big oversupply of Easter lilies that just missed Easter has passed; lilies still are abundant, but are not the problem they have been for three weeks. It is not yet possible to do much with callas. Iris is popular and when good sells well. Some fine snapdragon are offered, but meet with no special demand. Valley sells steadily.

The first peonies from the south arrived April 18, red and pink, and report has it that many shippers will be ready by the latter part of this week. Local lilac began coming in last week, but the rains knocked it out.

The green goods market still is lightly supplied, except for adiantum, of which there is too much. There is pressure to sell ferns.

Mr. Washburn is Studying.

Bassett & Washburn have up for consideration a proposition to remove their greenhouses to a property where they can have sidetrack connection with the C., B. & Q. railroad and be far enough from town to escape many handicaps. The property where the greenhouses now stand is worth $1,000 an acre. Removal will cost $100,000, but the saving in cartage of coal and other items will return a satisfactory interest on the increased investment. It is too big a proposition for hasty action, but is receiving serious consideration.

Wendland & Keimel's Plans.

Wendland & Keimel, at Elmhurst, have put in an extremely busy six weeks. Since March 1 they have built three new greenhouses, each 27x200, and planted them to White Killarney, also planting two of the older houses with the same variety. Richmond, which formerly occupied these two houses, has been dropped. The place now consists of ten houses, each 27x200, planted exclusively to the two Killarneys, pink and white; twenty-seven benches of the former and thirteen benches of the latter. The planting was finished early this week. It is expected to begin cutting by July 15 from young stock and the old plants will not be rested until August, so a continuous cut is expected all summer. It has been current report that the firm was planning to open a wholesale house next fall to sell their own stock (they now consign to E. C. Amling), but Mr. Keimel stated April 15 that they had given up the idea. "The only way we could sell our own stock to advantage would be to combine with several other growers, and that would be the same thing as opening another commission house, so we conclude it may be all right to let well enough alone," said he.

PINE BLUFF, ARK.—The greenhouses of A. A. Harper were demolished by a cyclone, April 11. The stock, as well as the houses, was almost completely destroyed, and no insurance was carried. This is Mr. Harper's fifth serious loss within four years, the four previous disasters being caused by hail. He remarks that these repeated losses have "about taken all the starch out of him," and he has not decided whether he will rebuild. He states that there has been rain in his neighborhood nearly every day.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Mrs. Jardine is the bright, particular star of the floral world this week, for has not Mrs. Jardine been selected as the proper pink for the wedding in New York, going over fully 1,000 strong, in appearance so fine that Philadelphia may well be proud?

The fashionable weddings, here and elsewhere, create the principal demand from the smart set. The stock is in every way worthy for such occasions, the higher grade of orchids, roses, valley, etc., being especially fine. Unfortunately, there are many flowers in the lower grades, flowers that cannot find a market that will pay the cost of production. These flowers are mostly sold at some price, but their increasing number causes grave anxiety to the wholesalers, who feel the responsibility of returning living prices to the growers. At times like these the difference between stock of high grade that reaches the market in prime condition and stock of low grade, or stock that is unripe, or too ripe, is enormous.

Sweet peas continue in active demand. The supply of fine stock is limited. It would seem that the hot weather of two weeks ago railroaded crops to a degree that precluded the possibility of much fine stock for a time. Poor peas are not in demand. Carnations vary greatly with different growers. Many of those who have had heavy crops through the winter and at Easter are now at low water mark, while many others are coming in with a strong spring crop.

The percentage of high grade carnations is not large; the poor stock is particularly trying to the dealers. Roses are abundant. Fine flowers in all varieties are obtainable at prices moderate for the season. Here, too, the lower grades are most in evidence. The lily market is improving, although lilies do not yet bring a price that can be returned with pride.

Cattleyas are increasing in supply, prices declining. The market for gardenias is insufficient. Violets still hold on, the buyers manifesting less and less interest. Dagger ferns are most active among the greens; the fine stock of the old crop is at premium. Pansies gain added interest to the exit of the violet and the shortage of the sweet pea. A few outdoor daffodils and tulips are seen.

Apple blossoms and Jersey lilacs are abundant.

The Shifting of the Scene.

With the opening of spring, popular interest, from the florists' standpoint, centers in the establishments of the wholesale plant growers, those who specialize in pot plants for lawns and gardens. It has been the object of this column to write of one or more of these places each spring; this season the choice fell on Charles Mecky.

Mr. Mecky, reputed one of the most prosperous of our florists, formerly owned and operated a plant at Seventeenth street and Erie avenue. The march of improvement drove him westward; about five years ago he purchased a large tract of ground on the Limekiln pike, north of Cheltenham avenue, in Pittville, where he has erected something like 50,000 square feet of glass, more or less, in the most substantial manner.

His packing shed is an immense affair, designed for expeditious loading of vans; no other word will apply to the kind of wagon Mr. Mecky uses, for he believes in having a means of transportation that comes as near to carrying all of an order as anyone could reasonably expect. When I was there one of these vans was being loaded with hydrangeas and geraniums, both nicely done, the former the tail end of the Easter crop, the latter the scouts of the spring army. The Easter crop at Pittville includes Hydrangea Otaksa and Thomas Hogg, that good old standby, not as frequently seen as of old. The pure white, seen in mass, was most attractive, there being no evidence of that crumpled look so distressing in this variety. Daisies are also grown in large quantities, and spiræas, too, I think.

Roses are the mainstay of the Pittville place. A few standard varieties of the best type in each class are grown in quantity, and well grown. Geraniums are an important factor and there are a number of other reliable, soft-wooded plants.

The watchword of the place is economy. Mr. Mecky believes that, to be profitable, pot plants should be grown in quantity, using the best varieties only, with as little labor and fuel as practicable, and that they should be sold at a reasonable price. He further believes in wholesaling only, adhering to this rule without deviation. Mr. Mecky devotes less of his time to business than of yore; his son, William Mecky, carries on the business with ability and industry.

From Sunny Italy.

A pictorial postcard, giving a beautiful view of the Canal Grande Alberghi in Venice, was recently received, and its contents may be of more than usual interest to REVIEW readers. It was written in Venice, under the date of April 4, by M. Rice, the well known Philadelphian. Mr. Rice writes:

"Just a line to let you know that we are enjoying the scenery in Italy, but the weather is rather cool. We found Sorrento, Amalfi and Capri most delightful, and had some most beautiful coast drives; thence to Rome to spend Easter. The outdoor growth is no farther advanced than in our own country."

The Senator's Front Yard.

James P. McNichol, state senator from Philadelphia and, of far more import, chief of the republican organization in this city, resides on Nineteenth street, facing Logan Square. So beautiful has Logan Square become, with its stately trees, pretty beds of shrubbery and well-kept grass, that "the boys," politically speaking, describe it as "the senator's front yard."

Two walks run parallel to each other, about twenty-five feet apart, from Nineteenth street on the westward, directly in front of the senatorial residence, to Eighteenth street on the east, only interrupted by the circular fountain pool in the center. Today the bed between these two walks is a blaze of gorgeous hyacinths laid out in masses for effect. The six other walks, converging to the center like the spokes of a wheel to the hub, are marked, four on each side, by glorious beds of single daffodils, completing their junction in triangular shape. The effect of the whole, set off by the rich green of foliage and grass, refreshed by the rain of Quaker week, is glorious.

The Firm of Myers & Samtman.

Frank P. Myers and Martin Samtman, trading as Myers & Samtman, wholesale growers of roses at Wyndmoor, Montgomery county, have been so successful that florists all over the country watch their movements with interest. These amateur rose growers, as they delight to call themselves, had a few years of hard, up-hill work; then they forged rapidly to the front, where they have remained ever since, leaders among the growers. Myers & Samtman have ordered a new house, 56x300 feet, from Lord & Burnham Co. It is to be three-quarter-span, with iron frame, and although not officially announced, the street believes it will be planted with 9,000 American Beauties. Work has commenced.

During the first half of April, Myers & Samtman have cut 7,085 American Beauties of the special grade, besides many thousands of shorter flowers. These go to the New York and Pittsburg markets. To New York they have also sent in the same time 18,000 My Maryland roses. The prospects for a good cut of both varieties for the balance of the month are excellent.

Various Notes.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report that the unsettled condition in the bituminous coal region restricts production to an extent that delays shipment. Work is being carried on only in part. In the anthracite regions steam sizes of coal are in brisk demand, while the domestic sizes are dull. The collieries are working two days a week.

A. E. Biester, 1410 Susquehanna avenue, has the sympathy of his many florist friends in a sad bereavement in his family.

Sydney Bayersdorfer and Martin Reukauf have returned with smiling faces from the Hub. An improved imperial chinaware is the latest novelty of H. B. & Co.

W. E. McKissick says that Mrs. Jardine graced the wedding of Miss Gould and Mr. Drexel in New York, April 19.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society meeting, April 19, was devoted to plans for the coming exhibition. There were some good exhibits for the seedsmen's prizes.

Robert Schock reports that in his trip as far east as Portland, Maine, interest in Memorial day is high. The demand for baskets of natural flowers for the soldiers' graves is growing. The steamer Rhenania, laden with Memorial day supplies for M. Rice & Co., arrived April 19, with 50,000 cypress leaves.

Stokes' Seed Store reports a falling off from the south and west, where the season is waning, and an increase in the local demand for garden demands. PHIL.

market should continue to clean up well. Roses are selling much better, the range on Killarney, Carnot, Maryland and Richmond being $1.50 to $8 per hundred, some few fancies going higher. Bride and Maid still are selling poorly. Beauties are in good supply and moving better. Mrs. Aaron Ward is proving a popular rose and there is considerable call for the old Safrano and Bon Silene. Carnation supplies have fallen off. Some growers state that their plants are now much off crop. Prices have advanced a little and a few fancies now bring $4, while nothing goes below the dollar mark. The quality of flowers, thanks to cool weather, is extra good.

Violets are down and out, except for a few doubles. Sweet peas are sold in large quantities and are one of the most popular flowers at present. Some of those seen have remarkably fine stems, vastly superior to anything grown outdoors. Of lilies there is a great abundance. Never were they so scarce before Easter and so abundant after that event. Pansies, primroses, mignonette, ixias, tritonias and Spanish iris all sell quite well. Stocks sell rather poorly, as do antirrhinums, the clear pink and white colors of the latter going the best.

Indoor bulbous grown flowers are less abundant and are selling rather better. Quite a few narcissi are coming from outdoors this week, and tulips will be available in quantity in a day or two. Gardenias are selling slowly. For valley, the demand has been only fair. In orchids, Cattleya Mossiae has been selling well at $5 to $6 per dozen. Marguerites are selling exceptionally well, particularly the yellow varieties. Adiantum is more plentiful and of fine quality. This and Asparagus plumosus and nanus are selling quite well. The cool, dry weather has checked the sale of spring bedding plants, but pansies, myosotis, daisies, etc., are in good request, and geraniums are becoming quite a feature at the stores. Trade in flowering plants, which was dull a week or two following Easter, is now considerably improved and all are looking forward to a heavy Memorial day trade.

Various Notes.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 26. A number of timely topics will be allotted ten minutes each. Exhibits will be unusually interesting, especially of hardy plants. A new treasurer will be elected and there is considerable other important business to come up.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, are this year making a great specialty of gladioli for Memorial day. Of America, May and other popular sorts they are growing many thousands.

Wheeler & Co., the Waban orchid specialists, are cutting a fine crop of Cattleya Mossiae. They also have a nice variety of other seasonable orchids.

William C. Ward, of Quincy, the pansy specialist, is now shipping some fine Jack Rose dahlias to Thomas Pegler at the Park Street market.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report business as good, with excellent shipping orders. Of valley, cattleyas, Beauties, gardenias and other choice flowers they carry fine stocks.

George W. Butterworth, of South Framingham, became of age last week. Mr.

Butterworth has been an efficient salesman for some years and is still, we believe, the youngest in his class.

Penn Bros., the up-to-date Bromfield street florists, are always hustling. Their window last week, of yellow marguerites and Hiawatha roses, was especially pretty. They are handling some good cattleyas from Seth Borden, of Fall River.

Julius H. Zinn is showing, among other plants, some nice Ivy Geranium Alice Crousse, calceolarias and Canterbury bells.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, says he does not remember a season when it was so difficult to keep abreast of orders for nursery stock. The extreme dryness of the soil has increased the work. August Zirngiebel, son of the late Denys Zirngiebel, of Needham, and now located at East Norwich, N. Y., was in town last week and his many old friends were glad to meet him once more.

Letters from John W. Duncan, now at Spokane, indicate that he is kept busy in the western city, addressing improvement associations, women's clubs and other bodies. The city is asking for a $1,000,000 loan for park and boulevard development, and will vote on it May 3. At this time a favorable vote seems probable.

The forsythias in the parkways and arboretum never looked more beautiful than at present. There seems to have been little winter-killing among shrubs. Many of the prunus family are also now at their best. Even lilacs are already opening. The variety oblata had flowers open as early as April 15.

Rhea Reid and Beacon Hill roses at W. H. Elliott's are each now exceptionally fine. Mrs. Aaron Ward is found a great seller. For Bon Silene and Safrano there are still many customers.

James Wheeler, of Natick, is busy getting his water supply laid, and posts for his big new house are in position.

N. F. Comley returned April 10 from a few days' visit to big growers in and around Chicago. He went over the plants of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Peter Reinberg, being duly impressed with their immensity, also the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, and visited several other places. He made purchases of 65,000 carnation cuttings, including good numbers of Conquest, Sangamo and Mary Tolman.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, the bulb specialists, are bringing in fine lots of Blushing Bride gladioli.

William E. Cahill, local representative for the Stumpp & Walter Co., is able to be around again after an operation and five weeks' confinement in a Connecticut hospital.

April is proving much cooler than March. Quite sharp frosts at night have caused some damage, which would have been much greater but for the extreme dryness of the soil. Since March 2 we had no rain until the present week. Many fruit trees are already in flower, including peaches, plums and some pears. There is a generous show of fruit buds on all trees.

Horticultural hall is rapidly being prepared for the big orchid show, which opens May 26. Keen interest is being manifested in Class 1, where prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250 are offered, and there will be a good competition in this class. Entries will positively close April 30.

Long, strenuous days continue the rule at all the seed stores. The cooler weather has come as a welcome relief. Never has there been such a volume of counter trade as during March and April, and the end is not yet.

dings and dinner parties and some funeral work, but none of these used up half the stock that came to this market. While the nurserymen and plantsmen had all they could do, it looks as though they will be cut off this week, as April 18 it was snowing and cold enough to put a stop to planting-out. The wholesalers say they had plenty of everything all week and the demand was slow and prices away down. There were some fine consignments of roses and carnations at all of the wholesale houses, but half of them could not be disposed of. Harrisii and callas were also overplentiful, with prices as low as $5 per hundred. Good sweet peas are scarce, as well as tulips and Dutch hyacinths. Lily of the valley is plentiful and of extra fine quality. In greens, smilax sold well. Everything in this line is in plenty at usual prices.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, Thursday, April 14, was not so well attended, there being only nineteen members present, because the greenhouse men are all busy with outdoor work and have little time to attend an afternoon meeting. There was quite a lot of important business to transact, which was laid over for the next meeting, when a better attendance is expected. All reports of committees were heard and laid over until the next meeting for final action. Trustees Ostertag and Schoenle were George Waldbart was doing jury duty all last week. He was called for Easter week, but on a plea got a two weeks' stay.

A carload of wild smilax is to be used to decorate the big Coliseum for the Metropolitan grand opera season, April 25 to 27. A number of large plants will also be used.

Henry Aue, on Mardel avenue, is cutting extra fine lily of the valley. It is about the best seen in this market for many seasons. His smilax crop has also been a big success.

E. W. Guy, Henry Emunds and A. S. Halstead, of Belleville; William Winter, of Kirkwood, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, were the out-of-town members who attended the Florists' Club meeting, Thursday afternoon, April 14.

Julius Koenig has taken Charlie Fullgraf's place, in the office of City Forester Meyer, Mr. Fullgraf having resigned recently to enter into business on his own account.

The big tulip beds at the Missouri Botanical Garden were a great attraction this spring. All the big parks also had attractive beds of tulips.

The Evening Star is booming a green carnation day for the florists for Thursday, April 21, for Jack O'Connor day, the new manager of the St. Louis Browns, and opening day of the American League season in St. Louis.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society has issued its preliminary list for its fall flower show, to be held November 8 to 12, and it is said that the show will again be held in the big Coliseum. The executive board will hold monthly meetings from now until show week.

The Women's Missouri Development Society will hold, in connection with the land congress of the Missouri Immigration Commission, a wild flower show May 24 and 25 at Arcadia, Mo. The show will comprise every wild flower that is indigenous to southeastern Missouri, and prizes will be offered for collections of the rarest flowers. Mrs. H. S. Hadley, wife of Governor Hadley, will head the committee on awards.

Arthur Neyer has been added to the force at C. A. Kuehn's and will be a great help to the firm during the morning rush.

The St. Louis Ladies' Home Circle

held its regular monthly meeting Monday afternoon, April 11, at Trimps hall. Miss Birdie Meinhardt entertained the ladies with a reading on "Violets," which was enjoyed by the members. Suitable resolutions of condolence on the death of Mrs. Vesey were presented and accepted as part of the records of the meeting, a copy being forwarded to the Vesey family. After the meeting the members enjoyed a game of bowling and a fine lunch was spread. The next meeting of the circle will take place at the same hall May 9. Any of our lady florists wishing to join the circle should call up the secretary, Miss M. Meinhardt, or attend the next meeting at Trimps hall, 4456 Delmar avenue.

The Market.

The market conditions were much improved last week. There was an increased demand for nearly everything. The supply, though still larger than necessary, was not so heavy as in the previous week. The lighter shades were in demand for funeral work. The prices were about the same as at the last writing.

During the last few days the weather has been cloudy and we have had some good April showers. The temperature continued warm until Sunday. Since then, however, the thermometer has taken a decided drop; cool weather prevails and frosts are threatened.

The supply of roses, still large, slackened somewhat the first part of this week. The quality of the stock is good, especially in Beauties, the two Killarneys, My Maryland, Jardine and Richmond. The buds of Brides and Maids are smaller than they are normally. There has been an increased demand for roses since Saturday, April 16.

The number of carnations coming to the wholesale houses has decreased somewhat. In the first part of last week they moved slowly, but after that they sold more readily. Saturday the wholesalers all cleaned up on any stock that was worth while.

First-class outdoor tulips are now coming in. Callas and Harrisii are still a drug on the market; they scarcely sell even at buyers' prices. Lily of the valley and sweet peas are more plentiful than a week ago. Outdoor valley is especially in evidence. Good pansies and ten weeks' stocks are also offered.

The supply of green goods is sufficient. There is enough smilax to go around, while plumosus and Sprengeri are plentiful. The season for southern smilax is over and huckleberry has taken its place.

Various Notes.

J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind., has lost his mother. She passed away Friday night, April 15. He has the sincere sympathy of his many friends.

J. A. Peterson has a fine lot of hydrangeas coming in. They are the best he has ever had.

C. E. Critchell is offering his first shipment of huckleberry for this season. Mr. Critchell also expects new Kentucky ferns at the end of this month.

W. H. Gardner was up at New Castle, Ind., for several days last week. He says all the flowers there, at the various plants, are in the best of shape. Heller Bros. intend to grow more Beauties next year than they ever had before. Mr. and Mrs. Otto Benthey are rejoicing over the birth of a daughter. William Dittman, Benthey & Co. and Weiland & Olinger have finer looking places than ever before at this time of the year.

R. Witterstaetter has finished planting his carnations in the field.

L. H. Kyrk has some fine Killarney and Jardine roses, gladioli and pansies.

John T. Fischer, of Huntsville, Ala., who was a short time ago a guest of William Murphy, writes that a hailstorm wiped out his glass completely.

T. Windram is sending good outdoor tulips in red and white colors to Critchell's and McCullough's.

There were many floral offerings at the funeral of Cadet Wilson, who was injured last fall in a football scrimmage. The funeral of ex-Councilman Shafer also kept the retailers busy.

H. Schmidt, of H. Schmidt & Co., of Oxford, O., was in town early on Monday buying everything in sight.

Frank Ball has returned from the Shriners' conclave at New Orleans.

E. G. Gillett is still getting in good Beauties.

Eddie Bosmeyer is on the sick list.

Fred Gear has joined the ranks of auto enthusiasts. His is an Elmore car.

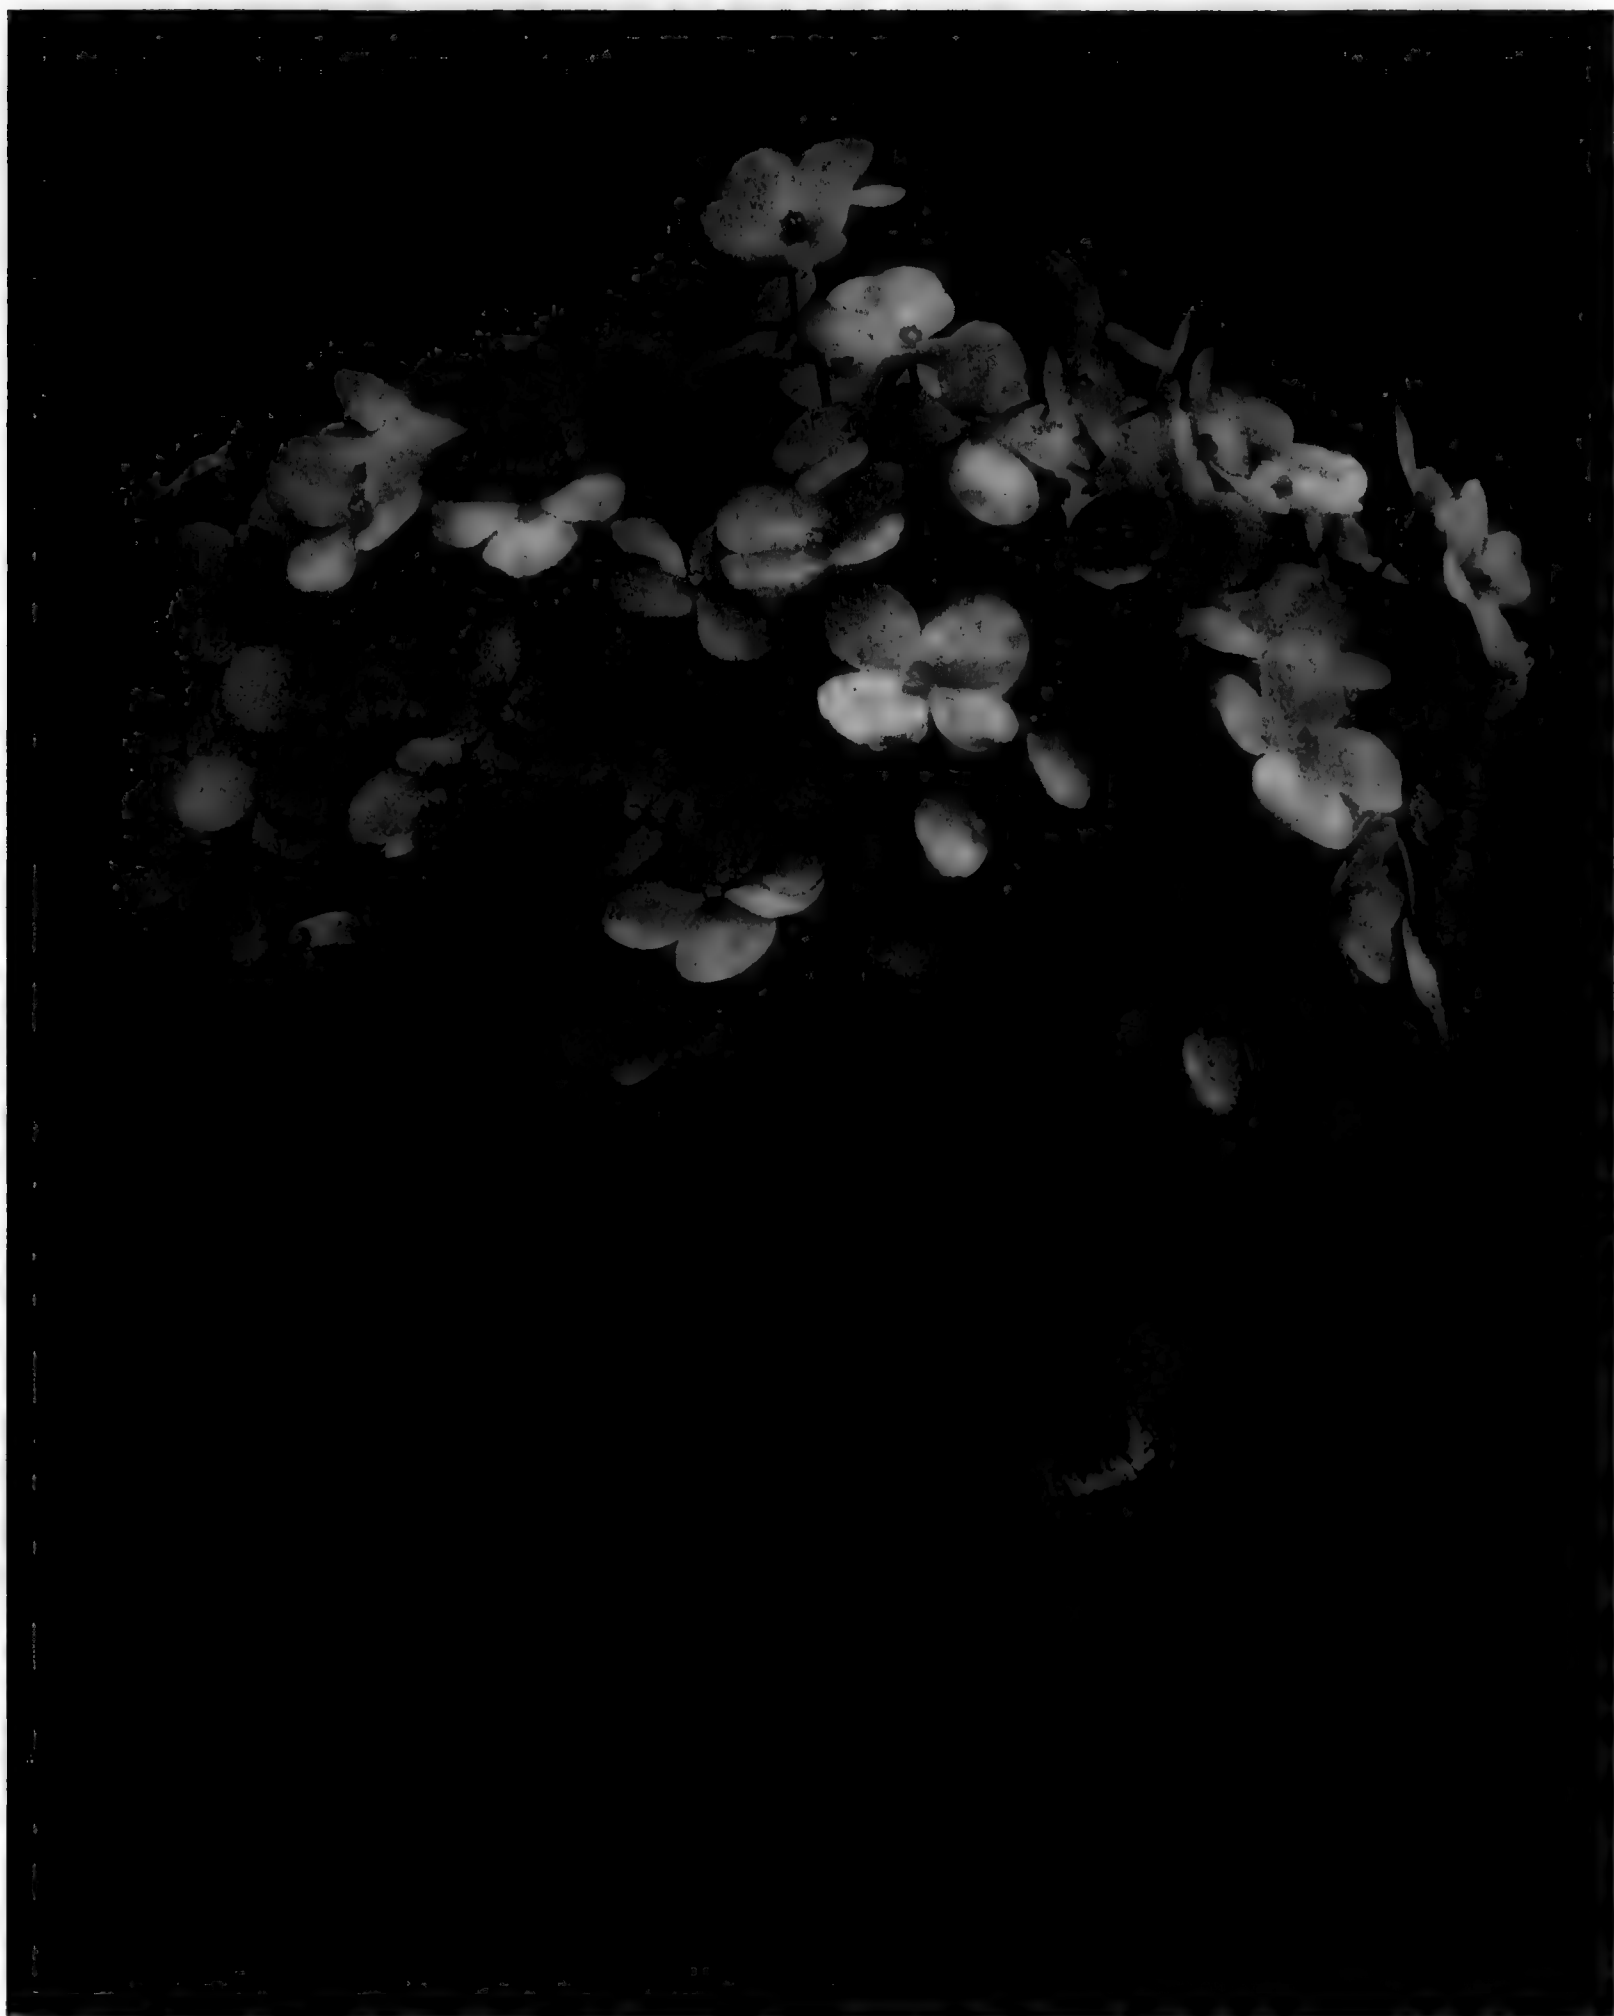

Samuel Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, called on the trade last week.

Weiland & Olinger received a large shipment of Boston ferns from New Castle, April 18.

C. E. Critchell has for four years made a specialty of double white narcissi for Decoration day, and says he will this year be better prepared than ever.

WOBURN, MASS.—Stillman S. Hovey, who for many years was in business at 398 Main street, has sold his establishment to M. J. Aylward & Sons. New Seedling Begonia “Glory of Cincinnati”

Parentage—Socotrana × Sport Gloire de Lorraine Type

Raised by J. A. PETERSON, WESTWOOD, CINCINNATI, OHIO

(Photograph represents plant grown in four-inch pot)

Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati"

What Others Think of It

Cleveland, Ohio, January 4, 1910.

I have tested your new Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati" under ordinary dwelling-house conditions, and without any expert care or advice whatever excepting to see that it had a good light window. Under these conditions, it seems certainly to be a great improvement over the ordinary "Gloire de Lorraine," which I tested at the same time and under practically the same conditions. The common form was spoiled within a few days, the "Cincinnati" was still fairly good after three weeks.

ADAM GRAHAM.

Chicago, Ill., January 5, 1910.

I think this Begonia is far superior to the various kinds of Begonias in size of the flower and keeping qualities. I think the "Glory of Cincinnati" will be a "glory" to you for years to come.

ERNST WIENHOEBER.

Washington, D. C., January 7, 1910.

"Glory of Cincinnati" is one of the best in the market. Its coloring is exceptionally fine, and for robustness and longevity it is unequaled, several of the plants handled by us having been kept in private residences as long as two weeks, during which time they were in perfect condition.

JOHN H. SMALL & SONS.

Rochester, N. Y., February 11, 1910.

We had the plant at the store about ten days before I took it home, where it has been for about two or three weeks, and is still in fine condition. For keeping qualities, it seems to have them all beat.

F. J. KELLER, of J. B. KELLER'S SONS

Detroit, Mich., January 4, 1910.

It is certainly an improvement over Begonia Lorraine. The plant is still at my home, and its blooms seem fresh as ever. I congratulate you on having discovered it.

PHILIP BREITMEYER.

Harrisburg, Pa., February 9, 1910.

It is the most beautiful plant of its kind I have ever seen, surpassing other Begonias of like character completely. I congratulate you on the possession of an extremely interesting and valuable plant, the spread of which over the country will do much to give more people a chance at beautiful flowers.

J. HORACE MCFARLAND.

Chicago, Ill., February 10, 1910.

The three shipments you made to us of your new Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati" arrived in fine condition, and were about the finest we had ever seen. The trouble with Begonias formerly was that they did not last long after they reached our customers' hands; but we have received nothing but the very best reports from these three shipments, nearly every one telling us how long they lasted.

FLEISCHMANN FLORAL COMPANY.

Philadelphia, Pa., February 11, 1910.

A marked improvement over all the Begonias that I have ever seen.

H. H. BATTLES.

Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park,
Pittsburgh, Pa., February 12, 1910.

An ideal house plant, size and color of flowers fine, and has great lasting qualities; and in my opinion, for commercial purposes and also for private and public conservatories, is far superior to any of the Lorraine types.

JOHN W. JONES, FOREMAN.

Buffalo, N. Y., February 11, 1910.

The new Begonia which you call "Glory of Cincinnati" is certainly a gem. The plant lasted longer than any flowering plant I have had in my house, and I wish you success in putting same on the market.

WM. F. KASTING.

Toledo, Ohio, February 12, 1910.

It is certainly a wonderful acquisition, and you are to be congratulated in producing this beautiful variety.

GEORGE A. HEINL.

Cincinnati, Ohio, February 10, 1910.

Its wonderful large flowers, its form symmetrical, compact, yet retaining all the grace possible, make it the most desirable of all dainty blooming plants. The proved lasting qualities of this new variety will at once make it a great favorite with the public.

T. W. HARDESTY.

Cincinnati, Ohio, February 3, 1910.

The bloom and lasting qualities of this variety are far superior to those of any Begonia heretofore on the market.

A. SUNDERBRUCH SONS' CO.

Buffalo, N. Y., February 9, 1910.

This plant was subjected to what I would consider very bad conditions. First of all, it was shipped during extremely cold weather, and second, it was cared for in the living-room with natural gas used for heat; but, with all this, I wish to inform you that this plant has kept far better than plants of the Begonia Lorraine which have been under the same conditions.

W. J. PALMER.

Washington, D. C., January 5, 1910.

Your new Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati," which we have now had for about two months is, I think, a great improvement on any that I have seen, and has been greatly admired by every one who comes through our greenhouses; it is, I think, a great "people's plant."

W. R. SMITH, SUPT. U. S. BOTANIC GARDEN.

Morris County Gardeners' & Florists' Society,
Morristown, N. J., February 15, 1910.

Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati" . . . a grand acquisition and distinct from existing varieties; excellent in color, free-flowering, and apparently of good constitution. Certificate of Merit awarded.

Always An Effective Advertising Medium

Appears this spring to be giving advertisers even better results than usual.

As witness such letters as these, written almost the same day and representing all parts of the country:

We sold out quick. Yours certainly is a great advertising medium.—W. C. Rockwell, Bradford, Pa., April 14, 1910.

A single insertion brought us more orders than we can fill. This was a wonderful result for a 50-cent adv.—Avenue Floral Co., New Orleans, La., April 15, 1910.

Discontinue our adv.; had a stack of letters that took hours to answer.—C. H. Frey, Lincoln, Neb., April 16, 1910.

Had to turn down some orders from the last adv., for they came faster than I could furnish the stock. One mail brought orders for over 2,000 more than I could fill.—E. Bushyager, Jeannette, Pa., April 15, 1910.

We are sold out of everything we advertised in the Review.—Henry Ernst & Son, Washington, Mo., April 18, 1910.

Stop my advertisement of hydrangeas, coleus and ageratums; it brought orders for all the stock now ready.—G. E. Fink, Roselle, N. J., April 14, 1910.

Cut out the advertisement of alternantheras, as it sold them all.—C. W. Espy & Son, Brookville, Pa., April 18, 1910.

Please cut out todeoides; the advertisement sold them all.—B. M. Wichers & Co., Gretna, La., April 16, 1910.

The Market.

Business the first part of last week was a trifle slow, but livened up a little the latter part of the week. Brides, Maids and carnations are showing the effects of the recent warm weather and violets are a thing of the past. Beauties, Killarney, snapdragons and valley are of good quality and in fair demand. Easter lilies and callas are being cleaned up daily. Some few orchids are to be had, but are not at a premium. Fancy peas are moving well.

Various Notes.

E. T. Barnes, the dahlia grower of Spencer, was in the city last week attending the democratic banquet. Mr. Barnes is making great preparations for a big year with his dahlias. He has a wide reputation with this flower, as he ships the roots to all parts of this country and has made a number of shipments to France and Germany. During the flowering season he ships the blooms by the thousands to Indianapolis, Cincinnati, and the other neighboring cities. Mr. Barnes reports a successful season with his outdoor tulips and daffodils, having found a ready sale for most of them.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wiegand and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wiegand took an auto trip to Anderson last week, paying a visit to Stuart & Haugh's greenhouses while there. They found this firm in the midst of one of their busy days. Stuart & Haugh should be commended on the quality of the stock they are growing, as it is equal, as a whole, to any that the writer has seen for some time. This firm probably grows as large a variety of plants as is to be seen at any ordinary commercial greenhouse, and I must say that it is all in excellent condition. They grow a large variety of bedding plants, having at this time about 2,000 vincas and 500 ferns for the wholesale trade, these being in excess of their retail requirements. They also had some good blooming plants on hand, among them being some Crimson Rambler rose bushes, Easter lilies and hydrangeas. They also devote several houses to roses, Bride, Maid, Killarney and Richmond being the varieties grown, and all are in fine shape. Beside this they have considerable space devoted to carnations, the three varieties of Enchantress, Victory, Lawson, Beacon and Perfection being among the varieties grown. Stuart & Haugh state that they are getting the best results from Lawson and White Enchantress, but expect to continue growing the other varieties.

The Pahud Floral Co. reports business good, and is looking for a big spring trade. This firm has a large stock of bedding plants about ready.

Bertermann Bros. expect to tear down their conservatory this summer and replace it with a handsome new structure. They intend putting a basement under the entire conservatory and large plate glass show windows on the Delaware street side.

Hartje & Elder have been sending in some good potted Dorothy Perkins rose bushes. John Hartje says he has some excellent prospects among his many mum seedlings.

Anthony Wiegand celebrated his fifty-first anniversary in the flower business last week with a theater party at the Grand Opera house, for his twenty em-

FUCHSIAS.

While fuchsias are not valuable as bedding plants, as in Europe, there is, however, a place for them on nearly all private grounds. If bedded out, they are of course worthless under our torrid summer sun's rays, but when given moderate shade they grow and flower quite satisfactorily. They are also quite useful in vases or piazza boxes, when these get only a limited amount of sunlight. It is a pity that standard plants of these, used as they are in the big English public parks—that is, dotted over lower growing plants—cannot be used in the same way here, as they produce a most charming effect. Plants in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, carrying a few flowers, are usually in good demand around Memorial day. Any pinching of the young plants should now be discontinued. Do not grow them warm. They need a cool, airy house. Fuchsias want a generous compost and plenty of feeding. Soil which will grow good mums will answer well for fuchsias.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—What is considered the largest single shipment of window glass ever received by a Council Bluffs consignee arrived April 13, billed to J. F. Wilcox. One hundred and twenty-five thousand square feet of glass made up the shipment. This was purchased from the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. through the Midland Glass and Paint Co., of Omaha, and will be used by him in the construction of seven new greenhouses. The grading necessary is already completed and the building material will be on hand by the latter part of this month.

Stock of every description has been selling readily. There has been a steady run of business and stock is good, bringing fair prices, so everyone is happy.

Various Notes.

Experienced greenhouse help is becoming so scarce in our city that it is a serious handicap.

Chas. Warneke, Jr., who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is getting along nicely.

Gus. Knock, of Woodmere, has invested in a Cadillac touring car.

The club meeting, April 18, was well attended. The question box contained some good live questions, which stirred up no little talk. An inquiry as to how much a retail florist should spend for advertising met with many and varied replies. After the meeting the members adjourned to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, where lunch was served.

The Market.

Business was poor last week, being about as dull as we have experienced for many months. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and large quantities are dumped daily.

Various Notes.

A street faker has made his appearance on Fourth avenue, selling Killarney and Richmond roses at 25 cents per dozen. The stock is fairly good, and local growers are wondering where it comes from.

The weather has been rather changeable; it rained for several days and planting had to be stopped; then, Monday, it became cold and windy and a little snow fell, but no frost has arrived as yet. We are all hoping that it will stay away. K. R.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Perhaps we ought not to complain; still, to be truthful, we are obliged to report that a slight decrease in business was noticeable. This was partly due to the fact that the market was loaded with outdoor stock, such as lilacs, which were brought in by the market gardeners, who sold large bunches of them for 15 cents. Lilacs are early this year and are a sort of luxury at present, being a change from greenhouse productions; therefore the people's fancy seems to turn toward them.

Last week's weather continued bright; consequently it brought into bloom great quantities of roses and carnations. The quantity had a tendency to depreciate the value, for in order to cheat the ash barrel it was necessary to make sacrifices, to dispose of the surplus. There is also a quantity of Easter lilies on the market, which are being sacrificed at $1 and $1.50 per dozen. Other flowers on the market at present are lily of the valley, sweet peas, snapdragons and callas.

Bedding plants have started to move quite rapidly. These warm days are an inducement for some people to plant out their yards, but in all probability they will have to buy a second lot, as danger of frost is not yet past. April 16 and 17 we were visited with a shower, which was much welcomed and greatly appreciated; since then we have been able to see things grow.

Club Banquet.

The second annual banquet of the Dayton Florists' Club was held on the evening of April 14, at the Phillips House. Though many of the members were detained on account of sickness, still there was a good representation of florists present. The affair was a complete success and much credit is due to the committee in charge, especially its chairman, Horace Frank.

The tables were profusely decorated with Richmond roses and Miami Queen carnations, while behind an embankment of palms sat the musicians, who rendered a charming program. H. H. Ritter, the president of the club, sat at the head of the table and everyone enjoyed the excellent feast which had been provided.

Informal toasts were then called for, Horace M. Frank acting as toastmaster. H. H. Ritter, the first to respond, spoke briefly on "The Organization and Growth of the Club." George Bartholomew responded to a toast on "Growing." E. E. Schaefer spoke on "The Comparison of Business Ten Years Ago and at the Present Time." Mrs. Young read a paper on "Harmony," which is not only applicable to the Florists' Club of Day-

Other informal talks were given by Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs and Mrs. Cora Haschke. Arthur Schmidt delivered a comic reading, which amused all. At the conclusion of the evening vocal selections were rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Frank, which were immensely enjoyed. In all, the evening's entertainment was a complete success, the only regret being that these "love feasts" come only once a year.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities : If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

New York is the largest flower market in the world. The Easter business at New York surpasses by far that of any other city, followed by Paris, London and Berlin. Growers for the New York market are very critical, because flowers are marketed in immense quantities and must be first-class to bring the best price. It is for this reason they are very particular about Lily Bulbs. There are more Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs forced for the New York market than any other brand, and if you want to know why, ask the man who grows them.

The new 1910 Catalogue is just out. Send for one.

"NOT HOW CHEAP—

in this locality was very unsatisfactory. A number of growers here held a little too long. As the weather right from the beginning of March set in warm and seasonable, these growers started hauling their sets very rapidly and, as there seemed to be plenty of stock both in Louisville and Chicago, the market broke very much. Some growers here who had stock that was not first-class, were unable to sell their sets at all. The acreage in this valley for the 1910 crop will be lighter in consequence. The seed is all planted now, but we are suffering very much for want of rain. We have had practically none since late in February."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending April 9 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	25	$ 273	Millet	200	$ 596
Caraway	5	103	Mustard	300	2,626
Cardamom	93	3,053	Poppy	100	528
Clover	135	3,719	Rape	3	29
Cummin	70	985	Sugar beet	12	180
Hemp	870	3,534	Other		2,202

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $40,305.

PEAS AND BEANS.

The season is many weeks ahead of last year in the pea and bean sections, in Michigan and Wisconsin. Planting of peas for seed is well under way. The ground is a little dry. The seed growers fear late frosts more than usual, because there is no stock seed for replanting. For several reasons it is thought the acreage of peas will be less than usual. Not only is stock seed not in large supply, but farmers feel that other crops are more profitable. The latter factor is also expected to reduce the acreage of garden beans, for the growing of commercial beans has paid better the last few seasons.

In the last few days the REVIEW has heard from several growers in the pea and bean section. Some of the things they say are:

A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids.

We are just beginning to sow peas in the north, April 15. Conditions so far have been favorable, although a good rain would improve things. From our careful observation, the acreage planted will be light. Farmers have found pea growing an unprofitable business for several years past and they are turning their attention to other crops which pay a better revenue.

It is a little too early to say what farmers are going to do about planting garden beans, but we are of the opinion that they will be indisposed to grow garden beans on contract except at good prices. Growing of commercial beans has been a more profitable business than growing the garden varieties and it is only natural that farmers prefer to grow the commercial kind.

We had an ideal winter in Michigan and, in common with all other parts of the country, we are having an early spring and farmers will have ample time to get their crops in the ground in good shape.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.

The season is very forward, indeed, in the pea and bean country, even in the northern part of the state. There are quite a few peas already planted. If we should have some severe weather later in this month it might prove disastrous, as there is certainly no stock seed with which to duplicate the supply to farmers.

No beans, of course, have gone out. Farmers are very slow in contracting this season and are demanding higher prices all along the line.

Broomfield & Colvin, Bay City.

The planting of peas and beans will be done this season under the most favorable circumstances in years. Peas are nearly all in the ground and the preparation of the ground for beans is under way, under climatic conditions which could hardly be excelled.

It has been very difficult for growers to secure farmers enough to plant the desired amount of seed, it being necessary to advance the price all along the line, owing to the high price of other farm products.

W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich.

The pea and bean acreage has been secured after a very strenuous effort and advancing of prices higher than anticipated when contracts were made with the seed trade. Planting of peas is well along and germination so far has been good. Spring is warm but rather dry, and we anticipate a good drop on account of early sowing.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS FINE.

This is the season, above all others, says Charles P. Braslan, for seed dealers to visit California, for the seed crops are fine.

Mr. Braslan reached San Jose about the middle of March, returning from his eastern trip, and spent much of his time in the inspection of the crops of his company, under which there are this season over 4,000 acres of land, as well as those of other growers. He says that never in all his seed growing experience has he seen things in such excellent condition at this date. Speaking April 11, he said:

"We have had something over fourteen and one-half inches of rain this season, which is sufficient to make a crop. The rain has fallen gradually, so that the ground has absorbed all of the water, which has been a great benefit to all of the growing crops. The hoeing of the crops will be completed on all the seed ranches, not only our own, but also on those of other growers in this section, within the next two weeks, and if nothing unforeseen occurs we will harvest a good crop.

"On our Menlo Park ranch we have a field of lettuce of various varieties over two and one-half miles in length and from a quarter to a half mile wide, where we have a magnificent stand. It certainly would be a great sight for any seed dealer to inspect this one field of lettuce.

"All varieties of onion are looking excellent. The critical time for this crop, however, is when the seed is in the dough, at which time, if we should have hot winds, the yield might be injured to some extent; but from present prospects everything is in a most promising condition, the season having been ideal.

"The radish crop is better than it has been for many years. Our various beet crops are looking excellent; also salsify, kale, mustard, celery, carrot and various other crops we are growing on an extensive scale and all in a fine condition.

"We hope that many seedsmen can arrange to pay California a visit this year and look over the crops, not only on our ranches, but on those of other growers, as this is the season above all others for them to make such a trip to California."

MARYLAND'S SEED BILL.

A strange incident occurred in the office of the governor of Maryland, April 11, when it was found that a bill which had not passed the legislature, according to the records of the journal, was before the governor for his approval. The bill is the pure seed bill, and has created considerable stir in the state.

Two pure seed bills were introduced in the legislature, one by Delegate Collier, in the House, and the other by Senator Biddison, in the Senate. The Collier bill, to which there was scarcely any opposition, passed the House, and according to the journals passed the Senate. ture, died in the Senate finance committee. When the measure before the governor was examined by Messrs. William Cabell Bruce and Clarence K. Bowie, whose clients are interested in the bill, it was found that it was the Biddison bill with Mr. Collier's name on it. How this came about no one knows, but a thorough investigation is being made. It is believed that it is the mistake of the printer.

Under these conditions it is not believed the governor will sign the pure seed bill.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

International Exhibition, London, 1912.

At a meeting held in the Royal Horticultural hall, London, April 5, it was decided to hold an international horticultural exhibition in London during May and June, 1912. Sir Trevor Lawrence, president of the Royal Horticultural Society, occupied the chair and moved the resolution to hold the exhibition. This was seconded by Sir Albert K. Rollit, president of the National Chrysanthemum Society.

The last international horticultural exhibition in London was held in 1866, and Harry J. Veitch, senior partner of James Veitch & Sons, Ltd., is the sole surviving member of its committee of management. He is again elected for the 1912 exhibition, and promised to throw as much vigor and enthusiasm into the work as he did on the last occasion, forty-four years ago.

Nursery & Seed Trade Association.

The annual general meeting of the Nursery & Seed Trade Association, Ltd., which has for its object the collection of debts and the dissemination of information to its members regarding the giving of credit to intending customers, was held in London April 1. H. Simpson, of Casper, Taber & Co., Ltd., occupied the chair. The annual report showed that debts amounting to over £5,000 had been collected during the year. N. N. Sherwood was reelected president and H. W. Nutting, of Nutting & Sons, was elected treasurer in place of W. J. Nutting, who has served as a member of committees for thirty years and as treasurer for eighteen years.

Haarlem Jubilee Show.

The Haarlem jubilee exhibition is receiving excellent patronage. On Easter Sunday there were 6,000 visitors, and on Easter Monday 18,200 visitors. British horticultural traders, on their annual continental tour, will visit the exhibition April 23. Then, after visiting many of the bulb farms around Haarlem, Lisse, Hillegom, Leyden, etc., they will travel to Brussels for the opening of the international horticultural exhibition, April 30. Mr. and Mrs. R. Vincent, of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., Maryland, U. S. A., are coming over to Europe this month and will accompany the members of this party through Holland and Belgium, thereafter spending a holiday in England.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade last week was good. The supply of flowers is fairly good. Carnations are in good demand and retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen, while good roses go at $1.50 per dozen. Violets are about done. Most of the growers here are now dividing their stock. Sweet peas of good quality bring $1 per hundred blooms, retail. Snapdragons sell well at $1 per dozen for good stock, but bulbous stock is none too plentiful. Paper Whites retail at 50 cents per dozen. These are pretty nearly over. Tulips and daffodils retail at 50 cents per dozen, callas at $2 per dozen and Easter lilies at $2 per dozen. Jonquils bring 35 cents per dozen.

Funeral work has been good and kept us all busy. Whitmani ferns in 5-inch and 6-inch pots sell well. They retail at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 each.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain reports a good sale of plants.

The street faker is now on deck again with his stock.

The J. V. Spare department store has a full line of shrubs, plants and pansies. The prices are as low as the florists pay wholesale. All the uptown stores are now displaying baskets of pansies, but it is a little too early yet for geraniums, etc.

A. B. Hathaway is still cutting some nice daffodils.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, Mass., had a nice wedding decoration last week. He used large quantities of wild smilax and carnations. He also has a large force of men at gardening work.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society will hold a flower show September 15 to 17. Full particulars will be given later.

A. H. Ashley has one large house planted in ten weeks' stocks.

The Dartmouth Street Nurseries report a good call for shrubs, pansies, etc.

Great interest is being taken in the home gardening contest here, nearly $100 in cash for prizes, bulbs, etc., being now available. As evidence of this interest, nearly 3,000 penny packages of seeds have been ordered by seven schools. Present indications are that from 500 to 1,000 school children will enter the contest and from many of them come enthusiastic reports of what they hope to accomplish in the way of beautifying their home surroundings. The stereopticon slides shown here recently by Harlan P. Kelsey and F. C. Farwell, illustrating what has been done in Salem, will be shown here again next week. It is hoped that more money can be obtained and contributions for that purpose may be sent to Frank C. Barrows, chairman of the finance committee, New Bedford, Mass. It is a matter of interest that the home gardening movement in New Bedford is attracting wide interest throughout New England. Mr. Kelsey states that the movement is one that is spreading over a wide section.

The weather just now is rather cool.

W. L.

OGDEN, UTAH.—B. Van der Schuit is building a store and office, as well as a cool cellar 22x34, eight feet deep, for the storage of the stock cut in his greenhouses. He also is planning to increase his glass area another season.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues most beautiful and outside stock is coming on with a rush. Wild flowers of many different kinds, as well as fruit blossoms, are proving popular sellers. Lilac is on the wane and another week will finish it. Violets are practically over for the season, and daffodils also. Spanish iris, although classed among the cheap flowers, is a good seller. Sweet peas are daily becoming more plentiful and move quickly. The wholesale price continues at $1 per dozen bunches, but it will probably drop in a few days if this good weather continues.

Carnations, although still abundant, are being held at somewhat higher figures than they were last week. There is but little offered at less than $2 per hundred, and from this price upward to $4 per hundred gives a good idea of the market. Roses are good, both in size and color, and move readily at from $4 to $6 per hundred. Beauties are in fair supply and cost the stores from $1 to $3 per dozen.

Wild maidenhair has disappeared and given place to the tame variety, which is now quite plentiful for the first time in many months. Easter lilies move slowly, but valley is in good demand. All kinds of bulbous stock, including late tulips, are well past their prime and another few days will end them.

Business is only fair, which is credited to the fact that all flowers are so plentiful, according to the retailers.

Various Notes.

Philip Murray, recently with Clarke Bros., will travel for C. C. Morse & Co., in the southwestern states.

The park commissioners of Oakland will raise the wages of the various city gardeners ten per cent, commencing May 1.

IONIA, MICH.

Harvey E. Kidder, widely known among florists as manager of the Ionia Pottery Co., was elected mayor of Ionia, April 4. It was a case of the office seeking the man, for there was no opposition candidate, the first time that such a thing has occurred in this city. Mr. Kidder's executive ability has enabled him to build up a manufacturing industry that is one of the most important in Ionia, reaching to all parts of the United States, and his business experience is an excellent qualification for the duties of the office of mayor.

DULUTH, MINN.—W. W. Seekins has been sending out an attractive folder, containing a picture, about sixteen inches long, of the interior of his store at Easter, with smaller views of his sales-rooms and conservatory. The store and conservatory look particularly spacious and artistic.

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

Soil Treatment Under Glass.

Especially in soils like this of our Ohio beach sands type, it is advisable to make applications of ground limestone or other form of lime, to increase the amount of this base in the soil. In addition to liming, whatever applications of manure are contemplated should be made before the soil is treated.

When all this preliminary work is over, we are ready for the actual treatment. Two methods are available; namely, steaming the soil and drenching the soil with formaldehyde.

Where we have to deal with eelworms, nematodes, steaming is the one effective remedy. For lettuce rot or drop, steaming is also a superior method. For the fungus of lettuce rosette, rhizoctonia, which also causes rosette and leaf-curl in tomatoes, as well as small leaves with leaf-curling in cucumbers, either soil steaming or the formaldehyde drench is available.

Soil steaming is a practice involving special preparation and considerable expense. Essentially it consists in burying a series of perforated pipes in the soil, placed at regular intervals, covering the surface of the beds, and passing live steam in sufficient volume into the pipes. In this work either high pressure steam or low pressure steam, generated in hot water boilers, may be employed. The success of the steaming will depend upon the amount of the steam in the pipes, including the pressure and the length of time the treatment continues, since the soil temperature will determine the result.

Before treating with either method, and especially before steaming, it is essential that the soil should be in good condition of tilth. If the soil is permitted to become dry, it must be treated with water and brought back into proper condition, or uneven results may be expected.

Details of Bed Steaming.

The steaming method seems to consist, at its best, of a system or set of perforated pipes, with crosshead and boiler connections. These pipes are connected and buried in the soil of the bed, either with or without partial banking up of the soil; the surface of the bed is then covered with canvas and the steam passed into the system for such period as is required to heat the soil to the necessary temperature. This temperature, for best results, is 180 to 212 degrees, maintained for a period of an hour or more. The time required to attain this temperature will vary with the boiler area, pressure and other steam and soil factors.

This bed method has replaced the former one of a box with steam pipes, into which the soil was transferred.

The length of pipes of the system will be adapted to the beds, being, say, one-half or one-third the total length of large beds. The size of the perforations in the pipes is apportioned to the area of the supply pipe.

R. W. Griswold, Jr., of Ashtabula, O., employs four bed pipes, an inch and a half in diameter and eighty feet long; in these 1/8-inch holes are made in straight lines, one foot apart. The head pipe and main to the boiler are two inches in diameter and the boiler is 100 horse-power. The beds are five feet wide and in these the pipes are evenly distributed by trenching. He starts at eighty pounds of pressure for one hour and then drops to sixty pounds.

On a low pressure boiler, B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., uses four pipes, an inch and a quarter in diameter, in 10-foot sections, with 1/4-inch holes four inches apart; 1 1/2-inch head, with the pipes ten inches apart. These pipes are trenched in about one-half the width of the bed; this area is banked up at the sides with boards and the remainder of the soil thrown upon it, thus increasing the depth before covering and turning on steam. In this manner about four to five hours are required to steam soil as above, with about six to seven pounds of pressure from hot water heating boilers; this soil is left covered over night. Owing to the great size of the holes in the pipes, blowing out often occurs and even heating is at times difficult to secure. Smaller holes in the bed pipes would serve better.

Method of Formaldehyde Drench.

Before applying the formaldehyde drench, the soil is prepared as heretofore described, by bringing it into proper conditions of tilth, incorporating all manures to be applied and spading up the benches in proper manner to receive the drench. Just at the end of the forcing season, when the soil is still fairly well moistened, will be a good time for applying the drench. When ready, it is recommended to treat with formaldehyde drench at the rate of one gallon of the preparation to each square foot of the surface. The strength recommended is from one to 1,000 to one to 2,000—four pints or pounds of formalin in fifty gallons of water for the strong treatment, and two pints in fifty gallons of water for the weaker. Often when the weaker drench has been satisfactory in checking lettuce rosette, it has not killed the organism and it still attacks cucumbers. The strength of three to four pints in fifty gallons has been more satisfactory under these circumstances.

The application may be made by any sprinkling device, such as spray pump, sprinkling can, or, in the case of large houses, through the Skinner watering pipes. It will usually be advisable to apply the liquid at intervals a few hours apart, until the whole amount has been taken up by the soil. After such a heavy wetting down the soil needs to lie without planting for about two weeks, with stirring after a few days. If young seedlings are set in such soil too soon they will perish, owing to the presence of the formalin.

It is believed that this strength of formalin treatment will be entirely effective against rhizoctonia upon either lettuce or tomatoes, and it is expected to be satisfactory in checking lettuce rot. Some difficulty attends the heavy wetting down of the beds between crops in mid-winter. For this treatment one and one-half pints to fifty gallons was the strength employed last winter. This gave entirely satisfactory results with the rhizoctonia, but did not, as before stated, with the lettuce rot, botrytis.

The original edition of "Success in Market Gardening," written by W. W. Rawson, was published in 1892. It was so helpful that it ran through a number of editions and Mr. Rawson was at work upon a rewriting at the time of his death in 1908. The present volume is by his son and describes the latest advances in methods of market gardening practiced at Arlington, where are the Rawson market gardens. In his preface Mr. Rawson says, among other things: "In 1907, a year before his death, my father fully appreciated the fact that any further edition of his work would have to be thoroughly revised in many important details, especially with regard to varieties of vegetables at present under cultivation. With this in mind, he had actually started rewriting the book, doing it in a leisurely way as opportunity offered. It is a keen regret to me that he did not live to complete his labors; death overtook him before he had done much beyond making a number of miscellaneous notes and amendments.

"I have, therefore, undertaken this task of revision in a sense of filial duty

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

CARL SONDEREGGER, Beatrice, Neb., has been working seventy-five men in his nursery and says the season will show a gain over any other.

THE U. S. Forest Service will establish a forest tree nursery on Beaver Creek, east of Kansas, Utah, where it is proposed to grow a million seedlings this season.

THE cooler weather came just in time to save the life of the expiring nursery season. While growth was well under way, the cool weather makes it possible still to dig and plant.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of the veteran nurseryman, Hermann Wild, founder of the Wild nursery interests at Sarcoxie, Mo. He died at the age of 85 years.

THE French Federation of Nurserymen, it appears, holds periodical sectional meetings at which lists of minimum prices for nursery stock are drawn up, and these are binding upon all the members. Members publishing trade and retail lists are bound to allow a difference of at least twenty-five per cent between the two. Members breaking through the rules as regards prices are fined a sum equal to the difference between the legitimate price and the one actually charged.

REAPPRAISEMENTS.

The Board of General Appraisers of the U. S. customs service has announced the following reappraisements of interest to the trade:

RHODODENDRONS.— From C. & T. Cortvriendt Freres, Evergem, exported March 10, 1910; entered at New York. File No. 54294. Invoice No. 28344. Findings of Hay, G. A.: Entered at 10, advanced to 12 United States dollars each. Add cases.

NURSERY HINTS FOR FLORISTS.

J. A. Young, of the Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., says that his travels among and correspondence with florists indicates that a great many of them are not aware of the fact that where nursery stock was heeled in last fall or early this spring and is showing too much growth, it can be kept back by digging out of the trenches and heeling in again, only leaving a little more of the wood exposed than in the first heeling in. As thousands of florists who do garden work are now handling nursery stock, the point is one of value. Mr. Young says that

SWEET WILLIAMS

We offer a choice collection of the newest larger flowering types of this old favorite in crimson; Holborn Glory (many brilliant colors, all with white eye); velvety maroon; Newport pink; red, white ground; scarlet; violet, white ground; pure white, giant mixed, etc. They are extra heavy field clumps, much branched but compact, as near perfect, we believe, as it is possible to have them. They will give a full and immediate effect. 75c per dozen; $5.00 per 100.

AMON HEIGHTS NURSERIES, Merchantville, N. J.

he notes many florists fail to establish shrubs that leaf out early, such as the Tartarian honeysuckle, because they fail to strip them clean of leaves as soon as planted. With this precaution little loss will ensue; without it it is more than likely the shrubs will die.

EVERGREENS.

Removing Mulch From Evergreens.

A far too common practice, when the spring-cleaning fever is on, is to remove the mulching of leaves from such evergreens as rhododendrons, kalmias and andromedas, the excuse being that they look untidy. Even on private estates of some pretensions, the winter mulch is now being taken away and the soil pointed over with a digging fork. Nothing could be worse for the plants. They make roots of a fine, hairy nature, quite close to the surface, and the loosening of the soil disturbs and injures many of them. Mulching of leaves should be left to decay; nothing better could be had for the plants, as they furnish food, besides keeping the soil cool and moist, necessary essentials in the successful handling of these shrubs. If mulching is removed, it will take a lot of watering to keep the plants in even decent condition; besides, the foliage so hides the mulch that it is little noticed. There are droughty periods when even mulched plants must be watered. In such cases, take a hoe and draw the earth away from the stems of each plant, forming a saucer-like space. Fill this up at least twice with water, then push back the earth, firm it well, and replace the mulch. Treated thus, rhododendrons will thrive and give satisfaction. They are also benefited once in two or three years by a mulch of rotted cow manure, which will gradually leach down to the roots. The idea that rhododendrons should not have manure and that it is harmful is utterly erroneous.

Evergreen Plants for Undergrowth.

The value of evergreen plants for undergrowth is not yet sufficiently understood by florists and landscape gardeners. For rhododendron beds on shady banks, or as an undergrowth in woodlands, they are excellent. Vinca minor, the common periwinkle or myrtle, greatly used as a

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

cemetery plant, will grow faster than probably any other low-growing evergreen, and succeeds well in either sunshine or shade. There are both white and blue flowering forms of this vine, which propagates easily by divisions and soon covers the ground.

Vaccinium macrocarpon, the American cranberry, is a supposedly bog plant. While it grows best in moderately damp ground and is useful in marshy ground and along streams, it grows quite well in any good garden soil not too dry. Both foliage and fruit are attractive in late summer and fall.

Shortia galacifolia is a pretty little subject, doing specially well among rhododendrons. The leaves turn a rich, bronzy hue in fall. The well-known partridge vine, Mitchella repens, is one of the most beautiful of low growing evergreens. While it rarely exceeds five inches in height, it forms a perfect cushion of foliage. The little flowers are fragrant in summer, while the brilliant berries remain through the winter.

Gaultheria procumbens, the common wintergreen, is almost too well known to require mention. Its clusters of scarlet, edible berries, with the shiny green foliage, make it a desirable cover plant. It grows best in a soil containing plenty of leaf-mold and will thrive in dry locations.

Epigaea repens, better known as may-flower and trailing arbutus, is a much sought after plant in early spring in the northern woods, its deliciously scented flowers being in great demand in the cities. It is not an easy plant to transplant and it is useless removing it without a ball of earth. It should also have some shade.

Galax aphylla is a charming low-growing evergreen, requiring shade. In addition to the heart-shaped, toothed leaves, which turn beautiful shades of red and crimson in fall, the spikes of white flowers a foot or more in length are graceful and pretty.

Pachysandra terminalis is a splendid low-growing evergreen, averaging a foot in height. While its home is from West Virginia to Florida, it is perfectly hardy, even in northern New England, and for covering banks, or as an undergrowth in woodlands, there could be nothing finer. It also makes a pretty bordering for shrubberies and seems to succeed equally well in sun or shade. It flowers early, its white scented flowers, attractive to bees, being open this season as early as April 10 near Boston. There is no prostrate, dense-growing evergreen better than this pachysandra for covering up bare ground. There is also a variegated form in existence. P. procumbens (moun-

TRIMMING A PRIVET HEDGE.

What is the proper way to trim a privet hedge after planting? I have just planted a California privet hedge 100 feet long, with two rows of plants. The plants were two to three feet high. I set the plants twelve inches apart in the row and the rows are about nine inches apart. I have cut them back within twelve inches of the ground. Have I cut them back enough? I want a dense, wall-like hedge down to the ground and only three feet high.

T. W.

It would have been better to cut the plants down to from four to six inches of the ground. They will readily break and make a good thick bottom for your hedge. As soon as they have made growth six to eight inches long, clip them with a pair of shears. Go over them again a month later and repeat the operation still again before growth ceases. Frequent clipping—three to four times each summer—will be necessary if you want a low, thick and compact hedge.

CAPE JASMINES.

ALVIN, TEX.—J. A. Hall says there are prospects of a good crop of cape jasmine, though much still depends on future weather conditions, as the crop will probably not begin moving till the early part of May.

ALVIN, TEX.—Under the new nursery inspection law now in force in this state the cape jasmine shippers here have had to have their bushes inspected and will attach an inspection certificate to each box or basket of buds shipped. Stevens & Heller, who are successors to W. A. Dennis, have about 6,000 bushes. They say they expect cutting to begin about May 7 or 8, the season being now a few days earlier than last year. The size of the crop will be about the same as last season, the quality generally good.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—After service covering a period of ten years, A. M. Holter, the florist at Liberty park, has sent in his resignation to the board of park commissioners. While he declines to state his reasons for resigning, his friends state that he feels that he can do considerably better in business for himself. He recently erected some greenhouses for his own use.

Without doubt the most valuable of all the new Climbing Roses of comparatively recent introduction. The beauty of the double pink flowers is admirably set off by the rich green foliage, which is free from the attacks of insects.

In addition to this charming kind, we have all the popular varieties in climbing and bush Roses. Our General Catalogue, which will be mailed on request, contains descriptions of all the best Roses—also

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

Business last week, in the cut flower line, was extra good, with a great many funerals and weddings. Flowers have been plentiful, but have cleaned up well.

Various Notes.

The hot weather has made it hard on the nurserymen; they just cannot take care of all the orders.

The M. J. Wragg Nursery Co. says it is swamped with orders and vegetation is coming on so fast that the planting season will be extremely short.

The Iowa Seed Co. is working overtime and getting out an immense lot of orders.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. had two of the largest wedding orders of the season last week, using an immense lot of cut stock.

Some of the florists are now planting out their carnations. BOOSTER.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

One of the local florists remarked a day or two ago that "no one has died and the boys won't get married, and business is slow." The demand has been a little better than a week ago, but by no means is it up to standard. Since Easter the supply of cut blooms has really exceeded the demand, with a corresponding slump in prices. The supply, at present, is just about normal, and prices are adjusting themselves accordingly.

The falling off in business may, in a measure, be attributed to the fact that Rochester is a city of homes, almost every family having a garden of some size, and as early spring flowers are coming on, it curtails the retail florist's business.

Various Notes.

H. E. Wilson recently purchased a tract of sixteen acres in the garden country north of Rochester, where much of his stock will be grown during the summer. Mr. Wilson operates two stores on Main street and one on Hudson avenue, in connection with the greenhouses. E. F. R.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y.—Richard Schafer will build a greenhouse on Church avenue, near his residence, and will grow flowers for the trade.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business was quiet last week. The supply of stock has let up a little, but there is still plenty to go around. Carnations, which have been plentiful since Easter, have fallen off considerably. Violets are still good, considering the season, and find a fairly good sale at bargain prices. Tulips and daffodils are flowering outside and as a result are cheap. Early flowering shrubs and such things are in full bloom and will soon be a thing of the past. From the present outlook, outdoor stock will be out of bloom by Decoration day.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting a short time ago and decided one very important feature; that is, to hold a flower show next fall. The show will be held on an extensive plan, in one of the large halls. A show was proposed late last year, but the special committee decided the time was too short to make the affair successful. With the time the committee now has in which to work up the plans, the show should be the largest ever held in Buffalo and also the most successful. The new officers presided at the meeting for the first time.

The office of the Buffalo Cut Flower Co. was entered by burglars last week, but they found little which they wanted. Fortunately, everything of value was locked up and the loss was slight.

R. A. S.

Club Meeting.

A special meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held at Kasting's hall, April 12, at which it was decided to hold a flower show in the fall. It is proposed to make this one of the greatest and most up-to-date shows Buffalo has ever had. A most able committee has been appointed to arrange all the details, and a report is expected from them at the next regular meeting, May 3.

At that meeting Charles Guenther will read a paper on "Summer Roses," and it is expected that George McClure, Jr., will be prepared with criticisms on the paper recently read by E. A. Slattery on "Color Harmony."

WM. LEGG, Sec'y.

YONKERS, N. Y.

An interesting meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held in Wiggins hall, Friday evening, April 15, with President Bennett in the chair and about forty members present. Six new members were admitted and several applications received. The executive committee reported that prizes have been donated for every class in the June show, also three specials—one of them being $25, given by the Yonkers Nursery Co., to be used as the society thinks best. The schedule for the fall show was adopted; sixty-five classes in all.

The prizes offered by Vice-president Cockrane and Louis Milliot were keenly contested for and the judges decided in the following way: H. Nichols first, for a vase of antirrhinum which were the finest the writer ever had the pleasure of seeing; J. Goff second, on Pandanus Veitchii; H. Scott third, on a vase of Hydrangea Otaksa. The judges were W. H. Waite, E. Berger and W. Shepard.

During the discussion of the exhibits Mr. Nichols explained how he grows his antirrhinum.

Prizes for the next meeting were offered by J. Naughton and Mr. Knapper.

Mr. Nichols read an interesting and instructive paper on vegetable growing, preparing the soil, time of planting and the best varieties for this locality.

Mr. Frankel, of the Standard Nitrogen Co., was present and spoke on the benefit to be derived from using concentrated nitrogen and inoculated humus. The next meeting will be held Friday, May 6.

L. WHITMAN.

WOBURN, MASS.—William Ward, at Montvale, is planning to build an additional greenhouse in the near future.

HASTINGS, NEB.—A hail storm which swept over this section of the state April 14 caused a heavy loss to the local florists, C. W. Sidles, C. B. Tanner and Chas. Winkler. About half the glass on the Tanner greenhouse was broken and at the other two places the loss was from a third to one-half.

A lively meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held Wednesday, April 13, with President Duthie in the chair. Mrs. D. G. Geddes was elected an honorary member. More prizes were received for the fall show. The winners of the monthly competition were V. Cleres, for vase of antirrhinums, and G. Wilson, for cinerarias. Cultural certificates were awarded to E. Fardel for vase of ranunculi, also for three plants of Boddington's Matchless calceolaria hybrid; to Paul Reul, for geranium and for seedling geranium and climbing rose, Hiawatha. Honorable mention was awarded to L. Barton, for spinach; to H. Gaut, for petunias, stocks and peas; to V. Cleres, for vase of carnations, and to Frank Petroccia, for mushrooms. An interesting test of aphine was made during the afternoon. Green fly, white fly, mealy bug and scale were killed in short order, without doing any injury to the plants or flowers. A pelargonium bloom was dipped into the undiluted solution, without showing any sign of injury. It was a most successful test and our genial Glencove florist, H. F. Matz, who has secured the agency for this vicinity, is sure of securing orders. M. C. Ebel, of the Aphine Co., conducted the experiments and was accompanied by our old friend, Austin Shaw, of New York.

J. F. Johnston read an interesting essay on "Evergreens" and was well applauded. OSCAR ADDOR.

CANAL DOVER, OHIO.

Peonies and other items are far advanced at C. Betscher's, so much so that he expects to cut the main crop of peonies before May 30. Lilacs are showing color. Mock oranges are well budded and will be in bloom by May 1. The peonies are in excellent condition and will give a fine display of bloom. A greatly increased stock of all items is being planted this spring. Gladioli are up six inches and will be in bloom by June 10 to 15. Indications are for a phenomenal crop of all fruits and cereals. Never did fruits show a more beautiful bloom. Conditions have been ideal this spring. All lines of business show an abnormally large volume of demand.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE REVIEW is glad to answer in this department any inquiries concerning the heating of greenhouses. Give all the facts.

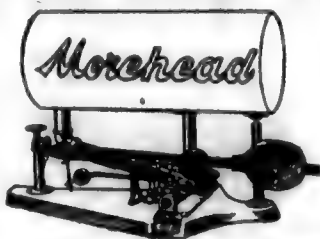

SMITH, LINEAWEAVER & Co., Philadelphia, report the troubles in the bituminous coal field make it difficult to fill orders. Some work is being done, but not enough to keep up with the demand. In the anthracite region, steaming sizes of coal are active, domestic sizes inactive. The collieries are working two days each week.

MODERN HEATING SYSTEMS.

The heating plant of the modern greenhouse establishment is not the crude affair of early days, for florists have come to appreciate that, with the possible exception of labor, fuel is the most important expense incidental to the business. There are greenhouse establishments for which the fuel bill is from $25,000 to $50,000 a year. With such an outgo, a small percentage of saving justifies a considerable investment in improved appliances.

Since return traps and pressure regulators came onto the market, steam has come into quite general use for heating the large plants, and with it have come mechanical stokers, fuel conveyors, refrigerating plants and dynamos for generating electric current, so that the engine-room of an up-to-date establishment resembles the trolley company's power station more than it does the stoke hole of the old-time greenhouse.

But with the development of steam for greenhouse heating, the hot water specialists have not been idle. Where it once was thought impracticable to use hot water in runs exceeding 100 feet, greenhouses 500 feet long and in large blocks are now successfully heated with hot water in the simplest and most easily operated of systems. There has been a steady reduction in the size of the pipes employed for hot water, with a consequent reduction in the cost of installation. Increased efficiency has been obtained by putting the water under pressure and thereby increasing its temperature. Where, as so frequently is the case, house after house is added without any general plan, if the water does not circulate, devices have been perfected that are capable of making a flow even if the water is cold.

The more simple a system is, the more economically it can be operated. The heating apparatus is the last thing put into the greenhouses before the stock goes in, but the careful consideration and thorough planning of the heating system should be one of the first details of building.

CONSUMING THE SMOKE.

As residence neighborhoods are built up around greenhouse plants, the florists find themselves confronted with the smoke question. Economically, smoke is waste, but it is worse than that when the neighbors set the public authorities on the greenhouse owner's trail. So many growers have been forced to contend with a like situation that they will be interested in the smoke consuming device recently put in by Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill.

Bassett & Washburn have two heating plants. The greater part of their range of 720,000 feet of glass is taken care of by what is known as the Eighth street plant and in this there is a mechanical stoker operating under most of the boilers and which reduces the smoke to where it is no longer a nuisance, so long as the boilers are not driven beyond capacity. At what is known as the County Line plant there are four boilers with rocking grates, which give excellent results so far as heat is concerned, but which smoke more than the neighbors like. After considerable study of the subject, $1,500 recently was expended in equipping these boilers so that they now consume the smoke. The system employed is one of superheated steam. The boilers are run at from forty to fifty pounds pressure and steam is piped through a coil in the firewall, in passing through which it becomes heated to an extremely high temperature. After passing through the coil in the firewall, the steam is carried out in a pipe along each side of the firebox, about eighteen inches above the grate. In each of these pipes there are five small holes, making ten in all, through which jets of the superheated steam play with great force upon the smoke and gases arising from the burning coal. A much higher degree of heat is developed than would otherwise be the case and the smoke is almost entirely consumed. Mr. Washburn estimates that in running the boilers at forty-five to fifty pounds pressure, the temperature in the firebox is not less than 1,800 degrees. The fire requires much more air than was the case before the jets of superheated steam were used. First-class fire brick are needed for the firewall, as the high degree of heat makes anything else short-lived.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ORANGE, N. J.

Announcement was made at the regular meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held in its rooms at Lindsley hall, on Main street, Friday, April 8, that Hitchings & Co., the greenhouse builders, had donated a silver cup to the society, valued at $25, to be competed for at the annual dahlia show, which will be held the second Friday in October.

George Smith, the florist of East Orange, gave a most interesting talk on "The Commercial Florist." He said that a florist may not always be a good gardener, and the man that does not love plants is not worthy of the name of gardener. The florist or gardener who finds out what he can do the best, and makes a specialty of that, is the man that always has the greatest success.

Lager & Hurrell, the orchid growers of Summit, N. J., had a grand display of orchids on exhibition, which attracted a great deal of attention and for which they received 99 points.

Foliage and flowering plants, roses, carnations and other flowers, from the private conservatories in the Oranges, were in competition for points, and the results were as follows:

A. B. Jenkins, Albert F. Larson gardener, roses, 97 points.

A. C. Von Gaasheck, John Dervan gardener, roses, 90 points.

S. M. & Austin Colgate, Wm. Reid gardener, roses, 75 points.

Thomas Edison, Frank Drew gardener, roses, 70 points.

Wm. Reid, carnations, 95 points.

Chas. Hathaway, Max Schneider gardener, carnations, 90 points.

John Dervan, carnations, 85 points.

John Dervan, best flowering plant, 95 points.

Wm. Reid, best flowering plant, 85 points.

Wm. Reid, best foliage plant, 90 points.

Cultural certificates were awarded to John Dervan for calceolarias, and to Max Schneider for schizanthus and lilies.

Certificates of merit were awarded to Chas. Ashmead for carnations and campanulas, and to Wm. Reid for calceolarias.

Thomas Jones, of Shorthills, showed wallflowers.

Fritz Berglund, gardener for the Essex County Country Club, showed sweet peas.

NEW ORLEANS.

No other convention ever held in New Orleans brought to the city such a crowd of people as did the convention of the Shriners. They were received in the grandest style and undoubtedly went back home with a good impression of southern hospitality. Among local florists the convention did not create much demand for flowers or decorations. Still, some report that they furnished good amounts of home-grown flowers and plants for the occasion, and as some of the florists were connected with the organization, many members of the trade were visitors. Among them were: Miss Aida Paterson, of Cincinnati; Mr. Fisk, formerly of Fisk & Randall; Mr. Walter, of Walter & Co., of Louisville; Mr. Blake, a nurseryman from Texas; Sherman Cook, of Alexandria, La.; Mrs. P. S. Lowell, of Laurel, Miss.

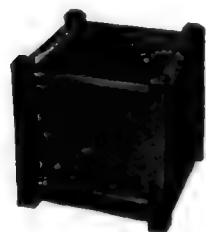

The New Orleans Park Commission is progressing nicely in the planting and growing of trees. One of the large avenues of the city will be planted with oaks, pecan trees and lagerstrœmia, the beautiful crape myrtle, which is quite hardy down here.

Charles Farley has secured a large piece of ground in the vicinity of Gentilly Terrace, a suburb of New Orleans, which in the near future will be the site of a beautiful country residence and where he intends to establish a nursery.

H. C. Doescher has formed a partnership with M. M. Jones, under the name of Doescher & Jones. Mr. Jones was formerly connected with Mr. Quinette, the well-known nurseryman across the river.

At J. H. Menard's, as at many other places, everything is ready for planting chrysanthemums, which from now on will require good attention.

The members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society were invited to the annual banquet at the Rose Villa by A. Alost, April 17. M. M. L.

MOTHERS' DAY.

The White Carnation.

*Arms that held us close when our child-hearts bled with grief;
Lips that kissed the brine-drops from our grimy, childish cheeks;
Eyes that watched our footsteps with a fondness past belief,
This the loving message that the White Carnation speaks:
"Fragrant is the memory rising at the thought of you;
White as driven snow-flakes in the love your love inspires;
Heeded now the lessons that in childhood we were taught of you;
Breathe the incense rising from our praise-fanned altar fires."*

*Ears that heard our wailing when all others slumbered soundly;
Hands that toiled unendingly and feet that never tired;
Heart that will be loyal though the whole world hate us roundly;
Souls that gave, though in return so little you required,
This one paltry payment on the boundless debt we owe you—
Mother, look across the years and see our simple token!
In its snowy fragrance read that, tardily, we know you;
Take from it the message that long since we should have spoken.*

—Book of the Royal Blue.

Get the editor of your local paper to publish this in a Mothers' day article Saturday, May 7. Mothers' day is May 8.

Time to Get Busy.

Well, what have you started to help along Mothers' day? Seen the mayor about issuing a proclamation? Called the ministers' attention? Spoken to the local newspapers? Written any advertisement? If you haven't done at least some of these things you are missing the one best bet of this glad spring season.

We can't expect ready-made flower days—we've got to do something to work them up. Got to push, not sit idly by and say "What's the use? I'll get my share anyway." Everybody ought to help where everybody stands to win.

Don't fail to get your best local newspaper interested. If your leading paper features Mothers' day, the other papers are sure to take it up—always do—simply can't let it alone if their leader pushes it. 'Tis ever thus. Watch and see.

The success of Mothers' day in your town largely lies with your newspapers. Interest them and you interest the churches, the schools, the lodges and the general public.

But the newspaper must have something to talk about—can't simply spin a story out of nothing. The best proposition is to get the mayor to issue a proclamation calling public attention to Mothers' day. Get him to hand this out to the newspapers and they have a basis for a story. Then get them to play it up—to interview the ministers about what special services the churches will have. There isn't anything needs advertising more than a church does and they all will jump at the chance.

The Proclamation.

All over the country last year mayors, and even governors, issued Mothers' day proclamations, but none of them were better than the model set by the mayor of Lincoln, who has the credit of having issued the first one for Mothers' day. The REVIEW printed it last week, but here it is again:

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION.

Office of the Mayor,
City of Lincoln, Neb.

To the People of Lincoln:

The secretary of the Lincoln Young Men's Christian Association having suggested that Sunday, May 10, be observed by the people of this city as Mothers' day, every man to wear on that day a flower in honor of his mother, I have been requested to ask for general compliance with the suggestion.

Therefore, in pursuance of this request and as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., I hereby recommend that by general consent, Sunday, May 10, 1908, be set apart as Mothers' day and the orphans in public and denominational institutions.

It is eminently fitting that in this, as in other worthy movements, Lincoln take the lead. Let us hope that the first Mothers' day observed in this beautiful city will be so successful and inspiring that other cities will, in future years, follow the example.

Witness my hand as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., this 6th day of May, A. D. 1908.

F. W. BROWN, Mayor.

The date is the second Sunday in May, which brings it May 8 this year.

Get busy. Interest all the people you can in Mothers' day. Get something started—and write the REVIEW telling how you did it and how it panned out.

A NEW LOS ANGELES STORE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of The Roserie, the new store of the Roth-Reymond-Muller Floral Co., at 721 South Broadway, Los Angeles. The store was designed by Eugene Roth. It is said to be the lightest store in the city, having three skylights.

The fern arbor, which can be seen through the open gates, has latticed sides and top, from which many large baskets are suspended. Long plant tables, built on both sides of the arbor and through the middle, are filled with ferns and seasonable plants. There is a large workroom in the rear. In the front part of the arbor is a smaller room, used for arranging flowers, while a similar room, opposite, serves as the office. The partitions are of latticework.

The store walls are decorated in old rose and the fixtures are in a light olive green. The two show windows are of good size and are always attractive.

ness can afford to neglect local advertising. Some of our friends will tell us that advertising in local papers is only dragging a high calling in the gutter, and lowering the reputation of the florist who employs it. This would be true if he was perpetually advertising 'Cheap! Cheap!' or 'A Great Sale,' etc., but where the advertisement is dignified in character, the prestige of the florist will be heightened. Purchasers will much prefer to send plants or flowers to a friend which bear the name of a florist made familiar by high-class advertising, rather than those carrying the name of a little-known man, no matter how good his work might be.

"If you only wish for customers to come to your shop, without your moving a finger to get them to do so, you cannot wonder if they stay away. I look at the question like this: The people in your town are going to spend so much money on pleasure and comfort during the next twelve months, and those channels which are advertised and pushed most will most assuredly lure the most money to them. Advertising persuades the public to buy your goods instead of some other fellow's. Do not let the public only think that you have what they want, but rather that they want what you have to sell.

"If all the joys and luxuries of life are being advertised except the florist's, you can bet that the florist is footing the other trades' advertising bills, because he is losing his customers. It's not the man who advertises who pays for the advertisement, but it is the man who does not advertise."

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION.

The trade building efforts of the Winterson's Seed Store, Chicago, have been along the lines of cultivating the home field, rather than an attempt to cover the whole country. But the local field in Chicago is considered to include the towns for fifty miles around. As a means of reaching and interesting the commuters, John P. Degnan has been publishing a series of advertisements, four of which are shown herewith, in the local newspapers of the surrounding towns. The advertisements have occupied four inches double column and have brought excellent results, especially the one entitled "Increase the Value of Your Home." Mr. Degnan says he believes many local florists in small towns fail to take full advantage of their opportunities because they neglect publicity along this line. He says he has no copyright on the method and that it is open to any florist so located that he can reach the people who have gardens. The volume of business being done by Winterson's shows it is not necessary to be in position to actually do garden work to get the spring trade in plants and seeds; all one has to do is to be in a position to supply the stock, and give the people a seasonable suggestion.

STREET CAR CARDS.

At Louisville Jacob Schulz has found that there are many ways of attracting public attention to his business. He is one of those who believes in special window display, and as the seasons roll around his large show window is found dressed in the prevailing styles. Each special event is taken advantage of for a display that not only stops the people passing by, but which causes them to talk about it to those who may not have seen the window. At the same time newspaper space is used along much the same lines that the window display is employed. The advantage of the newspaper space is that it talks to a lot more of people than pass any one window in town. Street car cards also are used, and the accompanying illustration is a reproduction of one printed in three colors, which brings good results.

CARBONE'S LYRE.

The lyre is a design not now often seen among funeral flowers, but made as P. L. Carbone, Boston, makes it, it is among the most successful of pieces. The accompanying illustration shows the lyre as Mr. Carbone conceives it and the form in which he makes the design, no matter what materials are used. The grace of the horns is not lost through making them large, full and round. The characteristic number of strings of a lyre is seven, but artistic license permits the florist to reduce the number to three, for the sake of simplicity. Strings and yoke are wound with white satin ribbon. Given the reproduction of the instrument to work upon, the florist then can add any suitable flowers at the base. It will be noted that Mr. Carbone uses not too many roses and that he carries his decoration farther up one side than on the other.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Obituary.

This week's obituary includes two names that are familiar to the trade here—an octogenarian horticulturist, John Cranston, the founder of the King's Acre Nurseries, Hereford, England, originally known as Cranston's Nurseries, and William Denning, market florist, Hampton, England. John Cranston was known during the sixties as one of the cleverest rose growers in the country and he did much to increase the flower's popularity. He was the author of several useful works on rose culture and fruit culture. William Denning controlled an excellent market growing establishment up to the time of his death, and was a well known personality in horticultural circles. He took an active part in local government affairs. A movement is on foot among British gardeners to perpetuate the memory of the late David Thomson, whose death was recently chronicled in our European Notes.

Registered Under the Trade-marks Act.

Lowe & Shawyer, Ltd., who run an extensive market nursery at Uxbridge, near London, have been granted a certificate, under the Trade-marks Protection Act, for the name of a new chrysanthemum, White Countess. The establishment of the principle that plant names can be registered in this manner should prove valuable to the raisers of new varieties. The advantages are not quite apparent, this being the first plant name registered, I believe, but probably only the raiser can sell a variety under the registered name until such time as the trade-mark claim is withdrawn. It should prove specially valuable to sweet pea growers, as the subject of the selling of novelties by firms other than the raisers has been a burning question for some time. Two or three firms have been offering for sale cuttings and plants of White Countess chrysanthemums, as more than one firm had the same sport last season, but Lowe & Shawyer, Ltd., have probably got the market in their own hands now, and it is a most excellent flower for the florists' trade, and one for which there is a strong demand among growers for next season's sales.

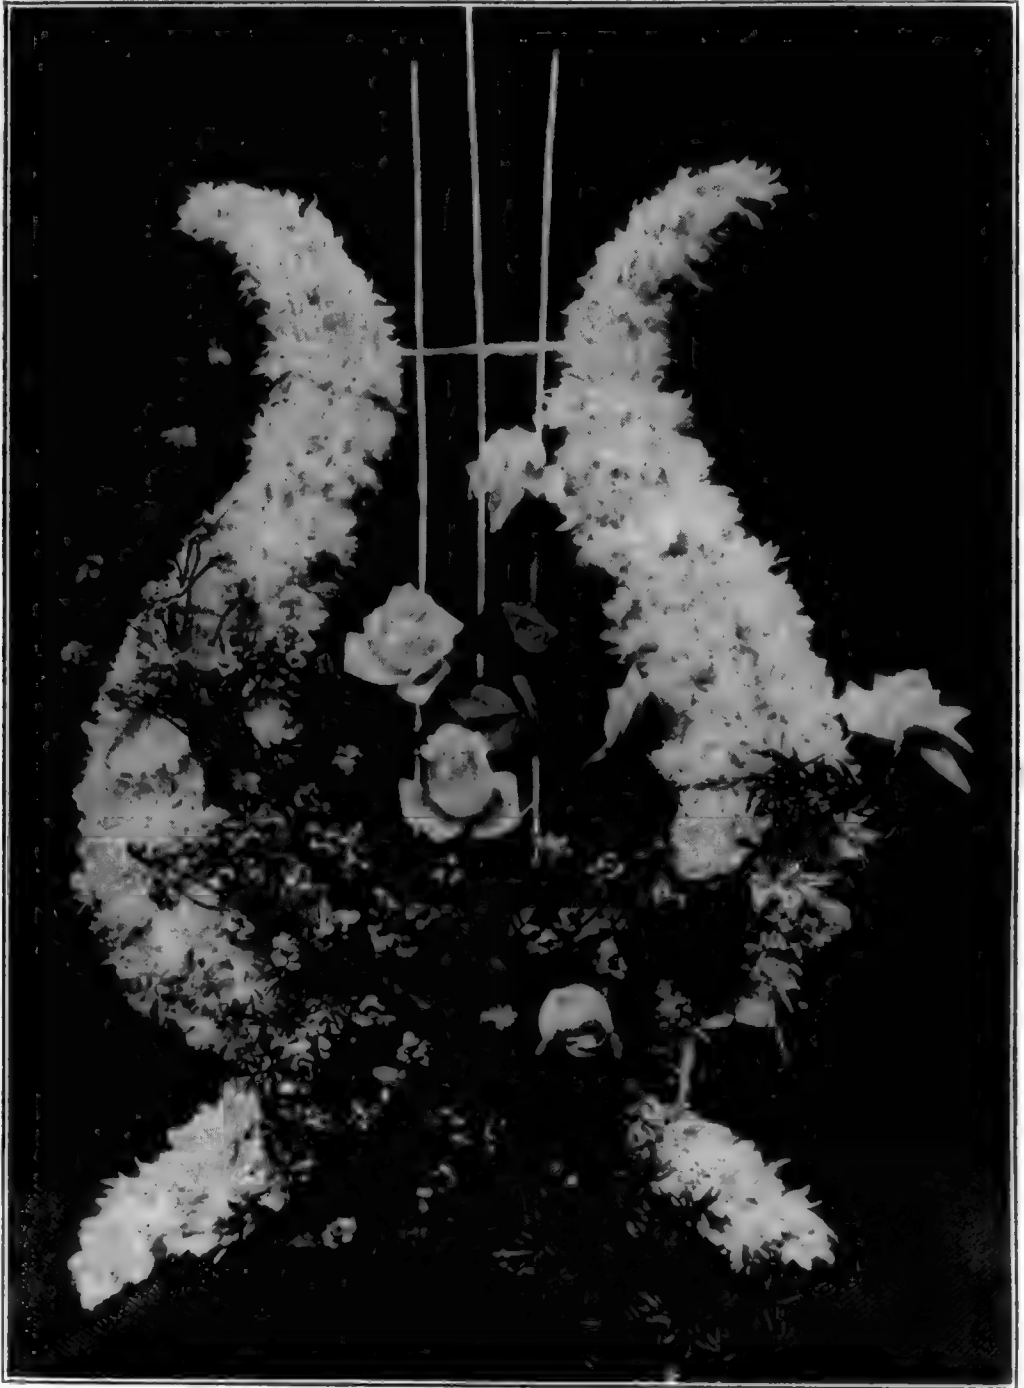

James Carter & Co., seed merchants, London, are busy handling an order received from the minister of agriculture at St. Johns, Newfoundland, for 15,000 packets of seeds of one of their pedigreed English Swedes, for distribution among farmers in that colony.

Hail Insurance.

The fifteenth annual report of the Nurserymen and General Hailstorm Insurance Corporation, Ltd., shows that the area now insured in the British Isles amounts to over 37,700,000 square feet of glass. In fifteen years the premium income has increased from £680 to £2,476. The reserve fund is £16,500. Last year was peculiarly free from hailstorms and the claims were light.

The firm of Polman Mooy, bulb growers, Haarlem, Holland, has reached its centenary. For 100 years it has held, first as a bulb field and later as a trial ground for hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, etc., the same piece of ground which was connected with the tulip speculations in the seventeenth century.

The Dutch bulb growers traveling in England are experiencing one of the worst seasons on record and there is bound to be a slump in prices. Sales cannot be effected, English forcers declining to buy on account of the heavy losses sustained on the flowers. Prices were never so low, mainly owing to the heavy consignments of daffodils from the Scilly Islands.

Lucien Levavasseur, a brother of the Levavasseurs at Ussy and Orleans, France, and director of the firm of Louis Leroy, Angers, has found it necessary, owing to the developments of the business, to find a co-director, and L. Courant, nurseryman, Angers, is now associated with L. Levavasseur in the direction of affairs.

Three New Acacias.

M. Ludwig Winter, nurseryman, Bordighera, Germany, is the fortunate raiser of three new hybrid acacias. One of the seed parents of all three is A. podalyriæfolia. The first, a cross with A. dealbata, is named A. Hanburyana. The second, crossed with A. pyracantha, is named A. Siebertiana, after the director of the famous palm gardens at Frankfurt-on-the-Main. The third is named A. de Neufville, after the manager at the same gardens. They flower from December to the end of February and indicate a new race of acacias, capable of many possibilities. All three are quite distinct in foliage and in the size of flowers, all of which are different shades of yellow.

The international horse show, in London, has now come to be looked upon as a paradise of flowers. It continues for a whole week in June and the floral decorations attract as many visitors as do the prize-winners in the equine world. The decorations are in the hands of Mr. Fortescue, formerly manager in the nurseries of Whiteley's, Ltd., and will cost over £10,000. Roses are to be the dominant feature of the decorations, along with thousands of palms and bay trees from Belgium, and clipped box trees from Holland.

The annual spring show of the French Horticultural Society opens in Paris, May 22, and the Temple show, in London, May 24. BEE.

WALTHAM, MASS.—A big delivery automobile owned by Peirce Bros. was considerably damaged recently while climbing a hill on Beacon street, Boston. The car became unmanageable and, leaving the road, bowled over the sidewalk and crashed into the fence surrounding the Common.

MADISONVILLE, KY.—Three more houses will be added this spring to the Pleasant View greenhouses, making a total of 16,000 square feet under glass, and forming one of the largest establishments in this part of the state. T. L. Metcalf, of Hopkinsville, is the owner, and Mr. Chervenka is manager.

BASEBALL BRINGS BUSINESS.

The opening of the baseball season in recent years has become an important business event for the retail florists, or at least some of them, in every town represented in the big leagues. But it is not often that so large a piece is called for as when the season opened at St. Louis, Thursday, April 21. At that time Ostertag Bros. were called upon to make a harp in flowers that stood ten feet high and for which they received the quite satisfactory sum of $300. It was ordered by the friends of "Jack" O'Connor, manager of the St. Louis Browns. The accompanying illustration shows the mayor of the city making the presentation speech on the diamond. One of the novelties worth noting was that the names of the donors were shown on small ribbon streamers attached all over the piece, each streamer having the name of one of the donors in the regulation gilt letters used for inscriptions on designs. The streamers added no little to the appearance of the piece.

will never give half the satisfaction of one carrying a single sturdy growth. Many growers also plant too shallow. Lay the roots flat and cover to the depth of six to seven inches, and they will do vastly better than if covered to only half that depth.

Evergreens in Tubs.

Such plants as bays, boxes, laurels, aucubas, hollies and other evergreens, which in the northerly states are not classed as hardy, should go outdoors without delay. If kept too late in cool and rather dark storage sheds, they are liable to scorch badly when exposed to strong sunlight. They should be freely syringed for the first few days after being placed outdoors, especially if the weather is warm and dry. No doubt some of the foliage will turn brown after exposure to sunlight, and some judicious trimming and pruning will be necessary to make them presentable. Just as soon as new growths get fairly started, however, any imperfections speedily vanish. Remove some of the old surface soil and give the plants a liberal top-dressing of loam, cow manure and fine bone. Be sure, also, that they never suffer from lack of water at the roots.

Bedding Geraniums.

There never seems to be any falling off in the sales of geraniums as bedding plants. They are sometimes called old and common, but it is the old plants which are most in favor today. Plants in 4-inch pots, the popular bedding size, are, or should be, well established now. If, perchance, any show ruddy foliage, it is either a sign of poor soil or insufficient water. If the former, you can easily remedy it by one or two waterings with nitrate of soda water; a teaspoonful to a 3-gallon can will suffice. This should soon green the plants up. Do not, however, keep on applying either this or animal manures, as they tend to promote a soft growth, which means foliage at the expense of flowers. It is flowers which sell plants at bedding-out time. Did you ever notice—but of course you have—how the plants always move first which carry a truss of bloom, while bigger, healthier plants of the same variety, minus flowers, are left behind?

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Fancy Caladiums.

Fancy caladiums should now be starting into active growth and will require larger pots. A compost that we find good is one composed of equal parts of fibrous loam and lumpy peat, to which is added some dried cow manure, broken charcoal and sharp sand. We like to have water pass freely through the pots and a fairly porous compost permits this. The pots should also have good drainage. Of course, good caladiums can be grown in any ordinary potting soil, but much better ones can be had in the other mixture. These plants revel in heat and moisture, and while requiring some shade, should not be grown too dark, or the leaves will lose much of their high coloring. When the pots are full of roots, applications of liquid manure once in four or five days prove beneficial.

For bedding out in mixed tropical beds, caladiums are useful. In pots they are also excellent for window or piazza boxes, when not too much exposed to old Sol's rays. In late summer, when flowering plants are none too plentiful, these fancy caladiums prove serviceable. Grown in coldframes, plunged to their brims, during the warm summer months, where a brisk, moist heat can be secured by closing early in the afternoon, caladiums grow faster and more luxuriantly than in greenhouses.

Dahlias.

Even with dry roots, it is still much too early to plant out dahlias. Our best success has always been with rather late planted stock, June being a favorite month. While the general run of dahlias are sold in the form of root divisions with one or two eyes each, there are many purchasers who prefer started plants in pots, and we like to sell our customers' plants out of 4-inch pots, averaging nine to twelve inches in height, which have been well hardened and are sturdy. There is still plenty of time in which to start these plants, and, if greenhouse space is at a premium, they will make ever so much sturdier growth in coldframes. One growth to a plant is all that is needed; if any more start, rub them off. A common mistake is to plant whole clumps, instead of single eyes. A plant with half a dozen shoots

The Twa Macs, of San Francisco, and their Orchid Things that Look Like Finnan Haddies.

Keep the plants cooler and airier now. If you have the requisite sashes at service, get as many of the plants under them as you can. Plunge the pots a little, to reduce watering, and they will make grand, stocky plants for Memorial day trade. Unless they are growing in too rich soil, or are being overfed with liquid or chemical manures, all the plants should now be showing flower trusses, and these should now be left on the plants, although up to this time we have removed them.

Winter Geraniums.

Select some of the best plants of popular varieties of geraniums, and if you did not propagate any specially for winter flowering, you can grow along some of the ordinary bedding ones. Any of the scarlets sell well at Christmas and are still something of a novelty in winter at many stores. Plants for Christmas blooming are now sufficiently advanced if in 3-inch pots; later shifts to 4½-inch and 6-inch will be necessary. For the next shift use a heavier compost, good loam, some screened cow manure and bone, but no leaf-mold or sand, and pot quite firmly. Keep the plants on a bench in a light, well aired house. Pinch off all flowers as they appear, and also the top of the shoot, to keep them bushy.

Amaryllis.

The flowering season for the hybrid amaryllis is now over and the plants are in active growth. It is utterly absurd to suppose, as some still do, that with the passing of the flowering season the plants can be dried and otherwise neglected, even thrown under the benches sometimes. Amaryllis is hardly even a deciduous bulb, and usually, when potting it in January, green leaves are to be found on many plants. Provided that the drainage is good and the pots well filled with active roots, liquid manure at least once a week should be given. Spread the plants out. They do not need a warm house, but will grow much better if they can be plunged to their brims in cocoanut fiber, half decayed leaves, or any similar suitable material.

Amaryllis Belladonna, with its beautiful spikes of soft pink flowers, is now almost completing its growth. It is best grown quite cool. Early in June the foliage will show signs of ripening, when the plants should be placed on their sides, either under sash to ward off rains, or outside on a warm, dry bank, where they are to remain until flower spikes show in the fall. This amaryllis does best in rather large pots and does not flower freely until the pots are a mass of roots.

THE TWA MACS.

The Twa Macs, as they are kent a' about here, are twa bonnie bairns. And mind ye, while they belang tae rival clans, they are unlike their forefaithers in this, that they dinna like tae fecht wi' ane anither. In kilts they look rale weel and are a credit tae the land o' the hills and the heather, though sometimes they like tae wear the breeks, as ye will see for yersel'.

The Twa Macs dae all sorts o' things oot oor way, frae layin' oot kale yairds tae importin' them orchid things that look like finnan haddies or saut herrin' strung oot on a claes line, though I never saw a saut herrin' twa feet lang and that was what some o' them shillieriating anes misured.

I dinna want tae say ony mair about them the noo; they micht no like it very weel if I was a bit too fameeliar wi' their affairs. But when ye come oot tae San Francisco ye can jist call in and hae a bit speel wi' them yersel'. The Twa Macs will make ye feel at hame, and will give ye a taste o' their Athol brose, which they import alang wi' them orchid things.

MANURE IMPROVEMENT.

To avoid the fly plague, I adopted the expedient of having the horse manure removed each morning and thrown into the chicken yard. This was easily accomplished by placing a large box beneath the dump door, resting it on an old wheelbarrow. The box was then wheeled to the hen yard and there dumped. So long as this is faithfully attended to, we have few flies. The chickens seem to get a good deal of value out of the manure, as well as beneficial exercise.

When the time for using the manure arrived I found that it had been vastly improved by the chickens' work. It had been so worked over and evenly distributed over the yard that there had been no danger of heating, and it was in such fine particles that it was in ideal condition for mulching. Further, the old and the new had been so thoroughly incorporated from day to day that the whole mass was remarkably uniform in quality. The chicken manure was so evenly distributed through it and so broken up that it could rarely be located, and thus it enriched the horse manure without any danger of undue concentration.

Of course, such manure has to be handled with a shovel when taken out, unless just after a rain, when a fork will take part of it.

Formerly the use of a manure mulch was usually followed by a crop of oats where they were not wanted, these being freely interspersed with various weeds. Manure that has been in the chicken yard a full season seems to be entirely free from seeds of any kind, which is, of course, a great advantage. It is surprising how great a variety of weed seeds manure sometimes contains.

On the whole, I would now put the manure through the chicken process, even if there were no longer a fly problem.

INSIDE-GLAZED GREENHOUSES.

During the last few years the Royal Botanical Garden in Berlin, Germany, has been moved to a less crowded and more rural region, in the royal park, Dahlem, near Steglitz, a suburb of Berlin. The new buildings erected there to accommodate the exotic plants are interesting structures in several respects, but chiefly because inside glazing has been employed, to protect the steel framework. Most prominent among them is a very large steel-arch house for tropical plants, though some of the smaller buildings also are notable.

Inside glazing was adopted for those greenhouses in which fairly high temperature and moist atmosphere would prevail. Its purpose is not only to reduce the attack of rust, but also to make it possible to do successful repainting, inspection, etc., without interfering with the plants inside. It was desired also to get a maximum amount of sunlight, uniformly distributed, which is better attained with framing outside, because the shadows the framing of the large house will be quite evident from the sectional drawing reproduced herewith. The main arches, spanning about 100 feet, with a rise of seventy-seven feet, are three-hinged, of such outline, however, as to give substantially vertical sides for a considerable height, therefore also affording good headroom over the whole floor area. The ends of the house are hipped to half-hexagonal ground plan of the same profile as the sides, instead of having vertical gable walls.

The arch trusses are spaced about twenty and one-half feet apart. The main purlins are two-plane lattice girders (of triangular section), spaced twenty-three feet apart, making a total of four purlins on each side. Each purlin was detailed with one of its planes horizontal, and a footwalk is laid in this plane. From these walks the outside roller shades provided for screening the upper three-quarters of the glass enclosure are operated, and the glazing can be reached for cleaning or repairing. Two intermediate I-beam jack-rafters in each bay tion, as the inside screening for the lower part of the walls, the traveling ladder for reaching the two tiers of heating pipes hung from the trusses, and the longitudinal passage containing radiators for heating air supplied to the building.

The floor was elaborated with special care, to get thorough drainage, good soil, aeration of the soil, etc. The ground was excavated ten to fifteen feet deep, the bottom shaped in furrows and ridges, and concrete drainage gutters laid in the furrows; dry stone walls covered with sod were built over both gutters and ridges to facilitate drainage and allow the air from the outfall to enter the ground. The drains were led off to an open watercourse and not to the sewers, so as to avoid all chance of impregnating the ground with impure air, which it was feared might affect the plant growth unfavorably. The heater passage surrounding the whole body of soil protects it against chilling.

PLANTS FOR EDGING.

Will you kindly give us some information about the varieties of border plants that may be used for formal bed edgings? What plants are best for foundations? Is there any writing or book that treats of this subject to any extent? We are located in Nebraska.

M. & J.

Among tender bedding plants there are quite a number of plants adaptable for edgings. Among dwarf foliage plants, Alternanthera aurea nana (yellow) and A. brilliantissima (red) are excellent. These, of course, will require some pinching or clipping during the growing season. For a very low and formal bordering, Echeveria metallica and E. secunda glauca may be used. Santolina maritima, with silvery foliage, if trimmed, is also a desirable variety. The various forms of coleus are among the more easily grown of the more robust foliage plants. Geranium Mme. Saleroi is also a well known and popular variety.

In the way of tender, dwarf flowering plants, Lobelia Emperor William and Alyssum Little Gem are two of the best. Begonias Vernon and Erfordii are hard to beat where a little more height is desired. Ageratum Little Blue Star is a miniature variety. A. Stella Gurney, somewhat more robust, is popular. Verbenas of distinct shades of color make excellent carpeting plants if they can be pegged down a little.

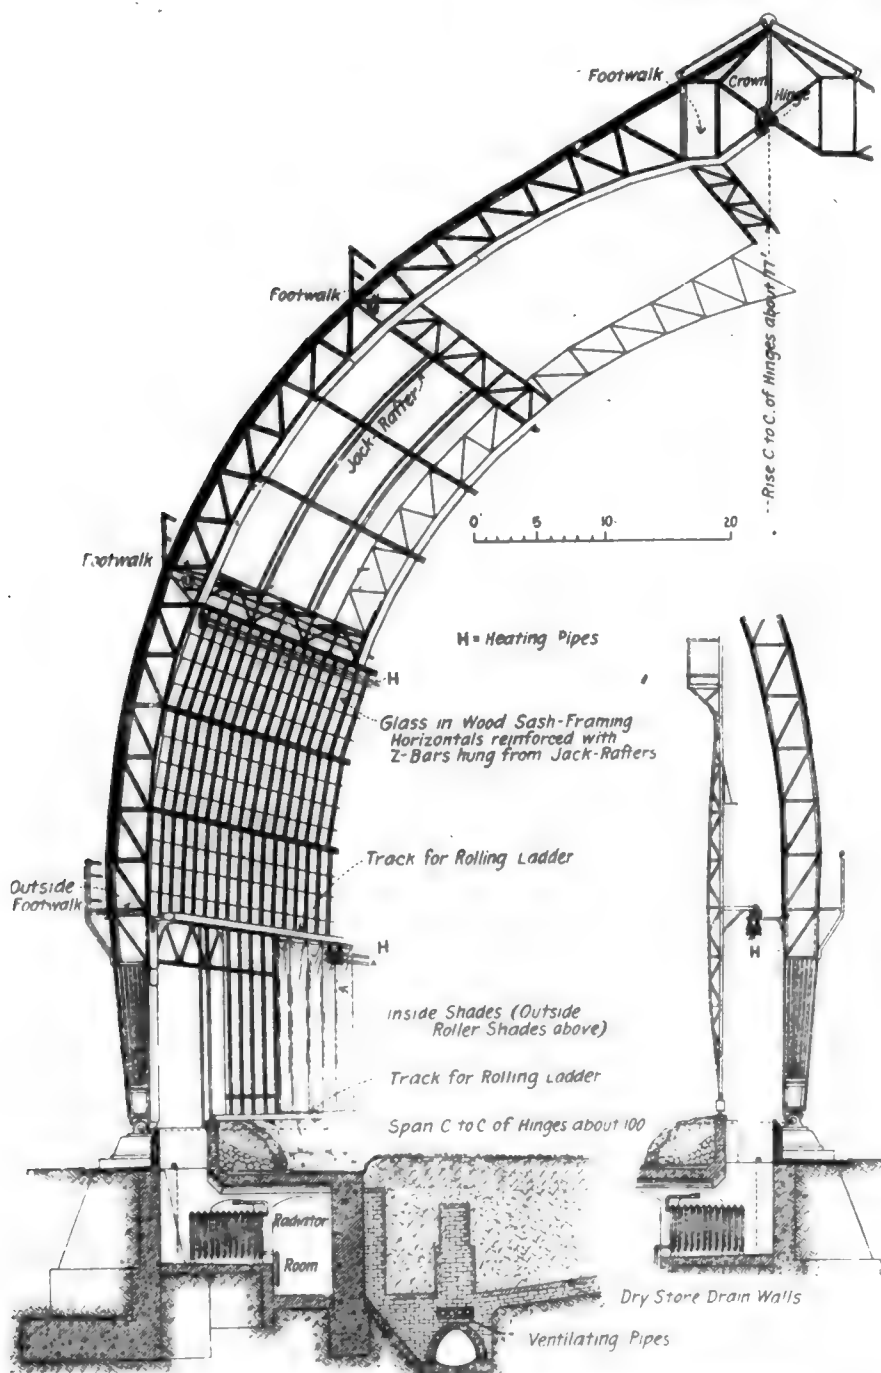

Any or all of the foregoing are adaptable either for borders or foundations of beds. The alternanthera is the easiest of all the dwarf plants to grow.

We do not know of any book making a feature of this branch of horticulture, but there are frequent articles in the REVIEW on this subject. The Florists' Manual would also prove a valuable book for you, as it deals with the propagation and culture of these and many allied plants.

cast by the frame are considerably diffused by the glass. Still another feature of merit, of some importance, is that the whole interior is a clear, unencumbered space, which offers no obstruction to the spread of plants within, such as inside trusses and bracing would necessarily present.

The arrangement and main details of provide means for attaching the secondary purlins, which are single Z-bars, suspended by hanger castings from the trusses and jack-rafters. The Z-bars virtually form a part of the skylight frame, and are the only parts of the steel framework which lie inside the glazing.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

PROPAGATING.

From the end of April until the middle of June is a suitable time to propagate chrysanthemums for bench culture. The earlier rooted cuttings are desirable where specimen or exhibition blooms are wanted, but these are of little use to the average country florist. Medium flowers net more money than the big ones. People may admire the latter, but they object to paying a price commensurate with their value. The warm weather during March caused stock plants to make rapid growth, and it is unwise to allow these to run up too much before using the tops for propagating. We prefer the cuttings which need no shortening back. Those three or four inches long are about right. It will be necessary to keep the cuttings well soaked for the first two weeks. As roots begin to form, reduce the supply gradually. In bright weather several dampings overhead will be required to keep the cuttings plump, and no good grower ever wants to see stock in the cutting bench with a wilted look.

Golden Glow, Pacific, Pacific Supreme, Monrovia, Polly Rose and other early varieties, we like to get in a little ahead of the mid-season ones, and it is these early ones which usually net us the most money. The bench room they occupy is cleaned early and can be utilized for another crop, whereas such as are carried until Thanksgiving, or even Christmas, never bring much more money than the smaller early ones, largely, perhaps, because people have by that time become satiated with them. Nice commercial blooms may be had from cuttings taken as late as mid-June, but we consider the first half of May the best time to root cuttings to produce nice flowers. C. W.

THRIPS ON MUMS.

I am sending two stock plants of Bergman mums from a bed which is badly infected. Several florists here have seen the bed and samples, but can not name the disease. These Bergmans were wintered over in a north bed built on the ground, as are all the beds in this range of five houses. The houses are filled with roses except the two side beds, which are filled with mums. The houses have no artificial heat, being dormant over winter. The north bed has a small percentage of healthy plants, but the south bed, containing Ivory, Polly Rose, C. Touset, Robinson, Virginia Poehlmann and Bergman, shows a little of this same disease only on the Poehlmann. I have seen no snails in the beds, nor any aphids on the plants, and while the tops of some of the plants look to be frosted or sunburnt, the roses across the walk do not show signs of either. L. R. C.

The stock plants reached me in good condition and it was easy to figure out the trouble. It is caused by a yellow thrips, the specific name of which is unknown to me and which is of no consequence, the chief thing being to get the plants clean. If L. R. C. will get a microscope, he can readily see both the thrips and the marks it makes. Vigorous and persistent spraying with clean cold water, washing thoroughly the underside of the leaves, will clean out this thrips.

Tobacco fumigation seems to have little effect on it and nicotine decoctions, if strong enough to catch them, have in my case done considerable damage to the plants. I have tried Aphine for it and it has worked better than anything else on this insect. The best way to use it is to take off the cuttings and dip them in the insecticide before they are inserted in the sand.

As before noted, let L. R. C. get a good sprayer and spray early and often and the thrips will soon disappear.

C. H. TOTTY.

CUTWORMS ON SHASTAS.

We received a shipment of about 5,000 Shasta daisy plants, grown from divided roots. Many of these are dying and turning yellow. We find in the crown of the plants the ordinary cutworm. These cuttings were planted in rich ground, manured heavily two years ago. In this part of New Mexico we irrigate, and do not rely on rainfall; consequently any powdered cutworm killer would be washed away. What liquid or other application would you suggest to use, and in what manner, to kill these cutworms on our Shasta daisies without injuring the plants? R. S. C.

We do not know of any liquid preparation which will clear out the cutworms. For those that are buried in the soil, carbon bisulphide can be effectively used, by pouring a teaspoonful in holes two feet apart each way and covering the holes with soil at once. The fumes are very penetrating and destroy all insects and larvæ they reach, without injuring the plants in any way. You can make a poisoned mash of fresh bran, sweetened and moistened with molasses, to which white arsenic or Paris green is added. Lay this about the haunts of the cutworms. They are fond of it and many will be poisoned thereby. Frequent stirring of the soil will expose the worms to the attacks of birds. Soot and air-slaked lime scattered on and around the plants also help to keep them in check. C. W.

A DANGER TO THE ROSE.

The rapid advance made by the rose in the affections of the American people since the introduction of so many new varieties of sterling merit, chiefly in the hybrid tea class, bids fair to bring true the motto of the American Rose Society, "A rose for every home." Roses that produce fine flowers once a year or roses that produce a crop of small flowers three or four times during the summer will arouse interest, but roses that produce a succession of fine flowers throughout the summer arouse enthusiasm that is highly contagious. The hybrids, with their magnificent, showy flowers once a year, do not always compensate for the appearance of the plants during the other eleven months, but the hybrid teas, with their lovely, fragrant flowers often lasting throughout six months, are a constant delight to every true rosarian.

With the certain increase in the popularity of the rose, certain as the improvement in the varieties, comes the danger—the danger of confusion. This danger has always existed; today it is more real than ever before. The same variety under different names, described in glowing terms by different pens, is scarcely recognized even by the connoisseur in roses. The amateur who carefully selects a few choice sorts, highly recommended, is not encouraged by finding them identical. Such an experience is distinctly discouraging and is calculated to turn the prospective rose fancier to chickens or bees, or even goldfish. Yet this very thing is occurring today.

There is at least one instance, possibly more, of one rose with four names; two and even three plants of this rose, each under a different name, may be found in the collections of amateurs in various parts of the country. This is a disgrace to the profession. The fault occurs in several ways—through carelessness, through a desire for originality, or through a desire to avoid unpronounceable foreign names. The remedy for the evil is simple; our national society has provided a system of registration which it is to the interest of all rosarians to uphold and protect.

Let us look to it that there shall be unanimity in the names of our roses; we owe it to the rose and to ourselves.

PHIL.

TREAT AS DORMANT ROSES.

I have four varieties of roses—Beauty, Killarney, Bride and Maid—which are now under the ground, where I put them last fall in order to prevent their freezing in the house, as I had closed the place for repairs. I shall not have the house ready for these roses till the last part of May. Would it be safe to take them out and uncover them? They are two-year-old stock. Please state the best way to treat them.

J. P. M.

These roses should now be uncovered and treated as ordinary dormant stock. To use them for benching would be contrary to approved cultural methods and they certainly would not be so profitable as young stock.

RIBES.

THE TAFT TAX.

Under date of April 19 the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in an order to internal-revenue agents, outlined the government's plans for enforcing the law providing for a tax of one percent on the net profits of corporations. The order was as follows:

"The following instructions are issued for the guidance of internal-revenue agents in the matter of examining the books and papers belonging to corporations, joint stock companies, associations, and insurance companies subject to the special excise tax imposed by section 38, act of August 5, 1909:

"On receiving from collectors, or from this office, a list of corporations, etc., which have failed to file the required returns, or which have filed defective or unsatisfactory returns, agents will at once proceed to make the investigation provided for in the fourth paragraph of said section 38. They will in each case, after calling the attention of the proper officer of the corporation to the provisions of the statute, request the production of such 'books and papers bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return of such corporation,' as may be found necessary in making the examination here directed.

"In most cases the errors in the returns rendered are probably due to a misapprehension on the part of the officers of the corporation as to the requirements of the law and regulations respecting the preparation of such returns. See T. D. 1606 for list of the various questions which have arisen under the law, and the decisions thereunder.

"In conducting their examination the agents will, except in glaring cases of misrepresentation, proceed on the assumption that all errors in the returns rendered are unintentional; and they will, so far as possible, make their examination in such manner as not to interfere with the company's business, either as to the use of its books or in the general conduct of its affairs. Contentions with officers, employees, or representatives of corporations are to be carefully avoided and no action that may cause friction, that is not necessary in the proper performance of their duties, must be indulged in by officers making these examinations.

"Ordinarily no very extended examination of the company's books will be necessary, as the verification of the particular items to which attention has been called will be sufficient. Where, however, a thorough examination is found to be necessary, and the accounts are so kept as to involve much labor in their examination, the agent may assign two assistants for this purpose.

"Where discrepancies between the company's books and the return made are discovered, the officers of the company should be given full opportunity to explain the same, and to furnish, if so desired, a sworn statement in reference thereto. In such cases the agent will, if deemed necessary, require the attendance of any officer or employee of the company, and there examine such officer or employee respecting the matter under investigation, as provided in said section 38. The witnesses in such cases should be duly sworn by the agent, as specially provided in said section 38, and in case of refusal of any such officer or employee to testify, or in case of refusal to produce the books or papers called for, the agent will at once report the fact to this office.

"A separate report of the investigation of each case should be made, and where an additional tax is found to be due a copy of such report should be furnished the collector of the district.

"The attention of agents and their assistants is specially called to paragraph 7 of said section 38, making it unlawful for any officer or employee of the United States to divulge or make known, in any manner not provided by law, any information obtained from any document received, evidence taken, or report made under the provisions of that section."

GLADIOLI A SECOND SEASON.

I am growing a crop of gladioli that will be through blooming early in June. Can I save the bulbs for use another year?

W. D. H.

Bulbs of the small-flowered gladioli, such as Colvillei alba, Peach Blossom and others of the so-called nanus type, are not much of a success a second season. Bulbs will be produced double the size of the imported ones, but I have found that they bloom poorly. In the case of the large-flowered varieties, like May, Augusta, Brenchleyensis, America, etc., the bulbs can be heeled in a row outdoors and lifted after the foliage dies down. These can be planted outside next season, but are not as satisfactory as new bulbs.

C. W.

ARLINGTON, NEB.—The snow and freezing last week has about killed all of the fruit and possibly killed all of the tender plants which were set out at the Arlington nursery. Winter and spring wheat is looking fine.

STORM DAMAGE.

Reports of storm damage usually are much exaggerated, but there can be no doubt that great loss resulted from the snow and frost that were general throughout the central states last week. The trouble was that after midsummer temperatures in March, all vegetation and gardening operations were much farther along than is usual by April 22. Here are a few of the storm notes that have reached the REVIEW:

MANKATO, KAN.—Alvin J. Kramer reports killing frost April 18, settling the case of much outdoor stock several days in advance of the big freeze farther east.

CARBONDALE, ILL.—E. W. Plater reports heavy snow and frost April 23 and 24, general over southern Illinois, and gives it as his opinion that the peony crop for this year is a total loss.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH.—The west Michigan fruit belt and market gardening district last week suffered the worst spring freeze on record. The loss will not be so large as first reports indicated, but it nevertheless will be important.

DUNDEE, ILL.—David Hill, whose nursery interests bring him in touch with all classes of horticulturists, says the freeze caught fruit trees in full bloom throughout northern Illinois and inflicted great loss. It will require much nursery stock to replace the trees, shrubs and plants that are lost.

MUSCATINE, IA.—Growers on Muscatine Island will have to replant many acres of early vegetables. Ice formed to the thickness of two inches, and in this great gardening center even plants under hotbed sashes were killed. The oldest gardeners never have seen so hard a freeze after the season's work was so far advanced.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—On Friday, April 22, it began to rain. Later the rain turned into sleet, which was followed by several degrees of frost. The following day eight inches of snow fell, and this, with the mercury down to 23 degrees, put on the finishing touches. Outdoor bulbous stock and other flowers were either ruined or so badly blighted as to be of little account.

FREMONT, NEB.—G. W. Welch, of the Welch nurseries, says that the frost was not so damaging in this section of the country as was at first supposed. He ventures the opinion that there will be nearly as much fruit to market, barring further frosts, as there was last year. In the vegetable line radishes, lettuce, peas and others of the hardier plants have rallied. The tenderer vegetables, such as beans and tomatoes, perished, but there is plenty of time in which to plant them over again.

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—The consensus of opinion among the nurserymen here seems to be that, although the damage done by the recent frost was considerable, still it was not as serious as at first thought, but they all agree that it is a little early to tell much about it. Clarence Wedge says that the plum crop was destroyed, and he is much afraid that the early apples have been damaged to a great extent. He thinks that little, if any, damage was done to small fruit. H. F. Hanson, A. W. Massee and O. M. Peterson, of the Albert Lea Nursery Co., make practically the same statements as Mr. Wedge, with the addition that Mr. Hanson and Mr. Massee report that their black raspberries were badly damaged.

A Corner of Dahlia Field of J. L. Moore, Northboro, Mass.

THE DAHLIA BOOM.

Among the flowers which have advanced in popular estimation, none has made such strides in the last few years as has the dahlia. The gladiolus may be a close second, and perhaps for that reason these two flowers are the specialty of J. L. Moore, a corner of whose grounds at Northboro, Mass., is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The importance of these flowers has become such that hundreds of acres are devoted to growing stock for the trade. W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, even have issued a catalogue devoted exclusively to these two specialties, a book of 112 pages, and listing literally thousands of varieties. At Northboro, Mr. Moore grows between three and four acres each of gladioli and dahlias. He says that never in his many years of experience with these flowers has there been so prosperous a season as in 1909, and he looks forward to the dahlia and gladiolus making a still further advance in popular esteem this season. He says that all the trade need to do to foster the business in these specialties, and keep it steadily increasing, is to see to it that planters get the better varieties.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

A. E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, proved a most interesting speaker at the last regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, describing a large number of the better class and new herbaceous perennials. Quite a number of the newer introductions have been brought to this country by E. H. Wilson and are great improvements on some of our older varieties. The majority of these Chinese perennials can be obtained from leading seed and nursery firms in Boston.

The meeting being largely attended, a good many took part in the discussion which followed the lecture and quite diverse opinions were expressed as to the merits of different plants.

On the motion of the chairman of the show committee it was voted to hold the coming rose show at Beverly Farms instead of Manchester, as usual. Although the society has held first-class exhibitions in the past, it has been financially embarrassed by lack of attendance and consequently poor gate receipts. The move to Beverly Farms will be made as a trial, in the hope that the more central location will result in increased gate money. The list of prizes includes two silver cups, three gold and four silver medals, in addition to good money prizes, and it is hoped that the exhibitions this year will be more patronized by the general public. ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Nearly all the retail florists report a better condition of trade for last week than at any time since Easter. The market is not overstocked and consequently prices hold up well, and the retailers are able to clear out nearly everything.

Tulips and hyacinths are retailing at 50 cents a dozen; carnations, 60 cents to 75 cents, and some extra choice have sold at $1 a dozen; sweet peas bring 35 cents a bunch. The prices for roses range from $1 to $4.

The warm weather during the current month has enabled local growers to get a great deal of outside work finished, and the warm rains last week put spring colors on the lawns and shrubs. The rain was greatly needed, as the month of March was exceptionally dry, less than one inch of water falling; the smallest amount for the month on record at the weather bureau.

Various Notes.

An avenue of magnolias in a northern city is notable, and Oxford street, in this city, is famous among nurserymen and florists as showing the finest collection of Magnolia speciosa in the country. The trees were planted about thirty-five years ago by E. H. Hooker, and have developed into fine specimens. At this writing the trees are in full bloom, giving over a quarter of a mile of attractive coloring and making Oxford street one of the handsomest thoroughfares in the city. The buds are sometimes killed by late frosts, but even when out of bloom, the trees are exceedingly attractive in their dress of dark, glossy green. E. F. R.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Michael J. Lynch.

Mrs. Lynch, widow of the late Michael J. Lynch, died recently at her home on the South road, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after a brief illness. She had not needed the care of a physician in twenty years, but a week before her death she took a heavy cold and pneumonia developed. Heart trouble and complications followed.

She was the daughter of John and Mary (Murphy) Powers, of Rhinebeck, natives of County Wexford, Ireland. She married Mr. Lynch about forty years ago and they located on the South road, Poughkeepsie, where she passed away. Mr. Lynch had built up a prosperous trade as a florist, and on his death Mrs. Lynch and her sons continued the business with great success. She is survived by three sons, Thomas M., John M. and James E., and two daughters, Mary T. and Catherine E., the latter attending school at New Rochelle.

John Murray.

John Murray, who for the last twelve years of his activity as a gardener was in charge of the extensive Conant estates, at Pawtucket, R. I., died at his home in that city recently, aged 75 years. He was one of the best known gardeners in New England and was an expert of the old school. Born in Ireland, he followed his father at an early age in working about the large estates there, and when still a young man he came to this country. He made his way into New England and for many years worked upon, or was in charge of, several of the largest estates in the vicinity of Boston and Wellesley, Mass. Later he removed to Pawtucket and took charge of the Conant estates, and under his care and direction they became famous throughout that section of the country.

John C. Wagner.

John C. Wagner, a nursery dealer at Fremont, Neb., died April 14, after being seized with a sudden spasm of coughing. He had made arrangements to leave for Colorado Springs on the following day, for the benefit of his health. He was born in Ohio in 1856.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The market conditions improved considerably last week. The volume of business done was slightly greater than the week before, but the supply of stock decreased considerably and therefore was not much larger than the demand. The buyers bought readily, but not eagerly. The whole business has a better tone than for some weeks heretofore.

There are still more than enough good roses to meet the demand. Carnations are being cleaned up regularly, while the supply of sweet peas is more than necessary. Good forced lily of the valley are offered. The season for callas is about over. Many of the growers have thrown them out, so that they might give room to other stock more profitable at this time of the year. Good longiflorums can be had. Green goods, except smilax, are still plentiful.

The bedding stock in the houses of those who specialize in this line is in fine condition. The growers are anticipating a good season.

Various Notes.

Albert McCullough, president of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., had a pretty thing at his beautiful suburban home at Pleasant Ridge. It was a bed, immediately in front of the veranda, of the named varieties of Azalea mollis, blossomed out in all their glory. Mr. McCullough states that the seed and nursery business was backward during February, because of the inclement weather. Since, however, the lamb-like March opened up, his whole force has been so rushed they have had hardly time to breathe.

C. E. Critchell is receiving some good sweet peas and longiflorums from nearby towns. The forced valley that he gets daily is extra fine.

R. W. Witterstaetter says that his carnations in the field did not suffer in the least from the cold and frost last Saturday night. All they need is rain and sunshine to make them grow right on. His grapes and some other fruits were, however, frozen.

William Murphy is offering for sale the excellent stock of young carnations of Frank Huntsman, who is retiring from business. Mr. Murphy's cut carnations and snapdragons are of good quality. He expects southern peonies this week.

J. A. Peterson's stock of his new begonia, Glory of Cincinnati, is in excellent condition. Mr. Peterson is installing natural gas in his place, to use in the boilers for fuel. His white lilacs bloomed splendidly this spring.

Advices from Hot Springs, Ark., state that Peter Weiland has improved but as the warm weather comes it will sell in a hurry. He has been sending some fine Baby Ramblers to Murphy's.

L. H. Kyrk is offering good Parrot tulips.

Tom Fagan, of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., says that in spite of reports to the contrary everywhere else, there is an abundance of good seed stock in both field corn and sweet corn in this section of the country. Last fall the weather was ideal for the maturing of the grain. The offering of green corn on the market was so heavy and the price so low that most of the truckers allowed their crop to stand. No one grower had a great amount, but collectively a large quantity of good Zigzag and Stowell's Evergreen was produced, and the germination is high.

George Magrie has again put his plant into a tenable condition. It was badly damaged by the hail a year ago.

Max Rudolph has already planted a house in Aristocrat, White Perfection and O. P. Bassett carnations.

Dave and Ollie Honaker came to town last week to see the ball game. They did not notify the weather man of their intention and found rainy weather upon their arrival.

A. Siegel, the St. Louis florist, attended his aunt's funeral here this week.

A. Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., was here the early part of last week.

J. C. Meyer, the silkline man from Lowell, Mass., and L. Baumann & Co.'s representative called on the trade last week.

SUNNYSIDE GREENHOUSES.

The last picture of the establishment of J. T. Conger published in the REVIEW showed the greenhouses destroyed by hail, and the accompanying picture will serve to give an idea of what a transformation has been accomplished since ket. He grows only carnations and plants for bedding and decorative purposes.

It was May 21, 1909, that Mr. Conger's place was practically destroyed by hail. Since then he has built an up-to-date range of houses and the store shown in the illustration. An opening is to be held Saturday, April 30, to which a large number of handsome invitations have been issued. Each visitor is to receive either cut flowers or a small plant as a souvenir.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was not quite so good last week. As a rule the market cleans up pretty well on Saturdays, but April 23 saw considerable stock unsold. We are being favored with cooler weather than was experienced in March, and growers welcome the change, as the continued heat would have played havoc with crops intended for Memorial day. The two leaders in roses are White Killarney and Carnot. Good flowers of the latter are now coming in, also small lots of Kaiserin. Killarney and Richmond are not so good as they were. Maryland continues good and will probably prove useful through the summer. Carnations are averaging a little lower all around, but crops are running out and a decrease in supplies is likely in the near future. The present week sees the finish of double violets. Usually they have lasted until the middle of May.

Sweet peas are abundant and of excellent quality, selling as well as anything on the list. Spanish iris is another popular flower and is now arriving in larger numbers. There are also a good many gladioli, such as The Bride, Blushing Bride and Peach Blossom. Narcissi are still plentiful, outdoor crops being now at their height. Tulips are also abundant. For lilies the sale is slow, candidums being in better demand than longiflorums. Antirrhinums are plentiful, but spikes are running smaller. A good many stocks are seen, but do not sell well. Mignonette is getting small. There is an abundant supply of pansies, forget-me-nots, Spiraea Japonica and marguerites, the yellow variety of the latter moving the best.

Valley is not in good demand. Gardenias sell rather better. There are plenty arriving. Cattleyas are plentiful and a little lower in price. There is still an insufficient supply of Asparagus plumosus, Sprengerii and adiantum of good quality.

In bedding plants, trade is starting up, geraniums being most in request. Pansies are meeting with a heavy sale.

Club Meeting.

The April meetings of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are usually more scantily attended than any others, but over 100 members were present at the adjourned meeting April 26. There was no regular lecturer, but a number of queries from the monthly circular were allowed a few minutes each. "Annals for Winter Flowering" was assigned to William Swan. He described his culture of larkspurs, lupines, Leptosyne maritima, Nigella Miss Jekyll, Nemesis strumosa Suttoni, Centaurea cyanus, antirrhinum and schizanthus. Other annuals spoken of as desirable for winter blooming, in addition to sweet peas, were calendula, Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, Trachelium caeruleum, Clarkia Salmon Queen, mignonette and sweet alys-slightly and it may be a month or more before he gets back to business. Weiland & Olinger's Boston ferns are selling rapidly. The blooms of their roses are much improved, owing to the cooler weather.

E. G. Gillett's stock of roses of all kinds is A1.

Gus. Adrian's houses are well filled with first-class bedding stock. As soon that time. Mr. Conger started in business at Hartwell, a suburb of Cincinnati, about eleven years ago. His trade was small at first, but has grown steadily, so that now he says he has no dull season. His is a prosperous community and his trade demands the best and latest of everything in cut flowers and plants, so that, in addition to what he grows, he is a heavy buyer in the Cincinnati mar-sum. R. W. Curtis opened a discussion on early flowering shrubs and named a variety of forsythias, prunus, magnolias, pyrus, cornus and other varieties. Wilfrid Wheeler discussed fertilizers for outdoor strawberries. Hardy herbaceous plants for early flowering and to be planted in spring were also taken up.

In the question box were queries relative to the culture of begonias and gloxinias, fall or spring planting of evergreens, Sulpho-Naphthol and Aphine as insecticides, the coming S. A. F. national show, and "Are the prices florists get for their productions in proportion to the advance in other lines? If not, how can this be remedied?" The sentiment seemed to be that flowers, not being one of the necessities of life, as are foods and clothing, must suffer when the latter are unduly advanced.

Several letters from congressmen were read relative to the resolutions adopted at a previous meeting, favoring parcels post legislation and opposing free seed distribution. The committee on resolutions on the late treasurer, Edward Hatch, presented resolutions expressing the club's sense of loss, which were unanimously adopted. Two new members were elected.

Peter Fisher was elected treasurer in place of Edward Hatch. John W. Duncan sent a letter, resigning his position as president, owing to removal to Washington. The resignation was accepted with regret.

There was as usual a goodly display of seasonable exhibits on the tables. Peter Fisher was awarded a report of merit for a fine new scarlet carnation. Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, N. Y., was awarded reports of merit for Erica ventricosa magnifica and for Hydrangea Hortensis Avalanche. John Dorgan, gardener for Mrs. J. B. Case, Weston, was awarded a report of merit for antirrhinums. The venerable and popular Mrs. E. M. Gill, of Medford, was present and brought a fine display of calceolarias. R. W. Curtis, Jamaica Plain, had a large display of shrub blooms.

Various Notes.

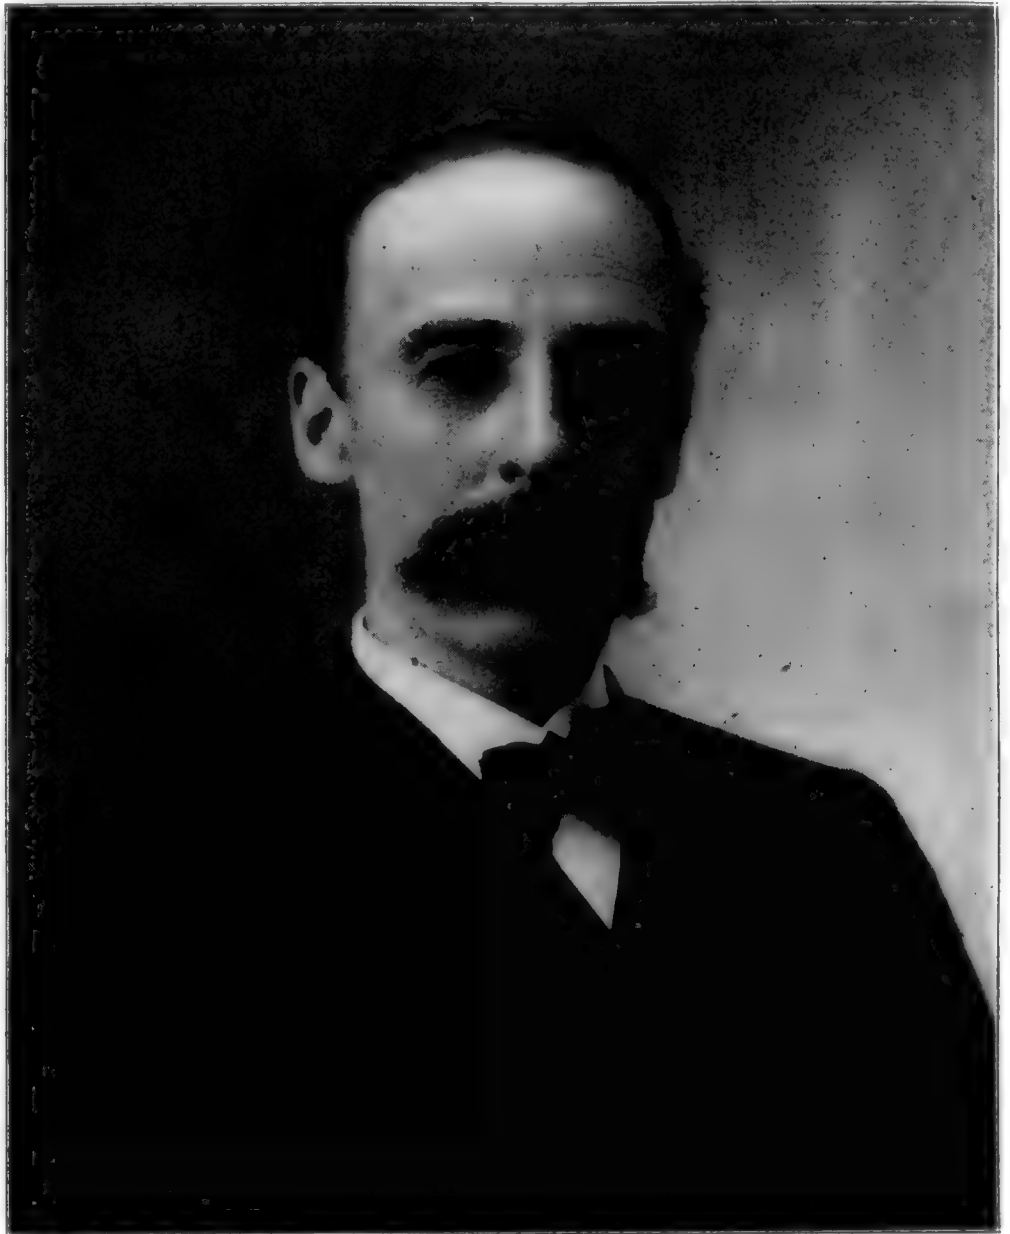

April 26 R. & J. Farquhar & Co. exhibited at Horticultural hall a plant in flower of a pure white, deliciously scented, evergreen leaved clematis, one of the introductions of E. H. Wilson for the Arnold Arboretum. The flowers are three to four inches in diameter, produced four on a panicle. The long, dark glossy green leaves are in themselves attractive. The odor of the flowers closely resembles that of orange blossoms, being identical with that of the flowers of Vanda Amesiana. This should prove a wonderfully popular clematis and is well worth a single Chinese trip to introduce. The plant is as yet unnamed. T. D. Hatfield, gardener to Walter Hunnewell, also showed a box of seedlings in bloom of Azalea Indica of Mr. Wilson's introduction, found growing in northern China at an altitude of 5,000 feet.

Daniel Iliffe is busy installing the boilers and piping in C. E. Holbrow's new King houses at Brighton.

John McFarland is taking in some nice Carnot roses to 2 Park street, also 8,000 valley per week.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, who is one of our leading bedding plant specialists, has his houses filled to overflowing with fine stock, and from present indications will have no trouble in cleaning it all out.

carnation is showing up grandly at present. A prominent society lady is desirous of having her name attached to the new seedling if it keeps up its present reputation. Mr. Barr will plant out 50,000 carnations early in May.

The annual tulip display in the Boston Public Gardens will be at its best during the present week. The following among other varieties are specially fine: Thomas Moore, Prince of Austria, Chrysolora, Vermilion Brilliant, Proserpine, white Pottebakker, scarlet Pottebakker, white Swan, Pink Beauty, white Joost von Vondel.

The weather has been quite raw of late, but we have been fortunate enough to escape the blizzard and cold wave which has caused such widespread damage over the west. The cool, moist weather has been beneficial to all crops, and was much welcomed by the overworked nurserymen.

Leonard Cousins, of Concord Junction, reports the heaviest demand he ever had for pansies, which are a grand sight in his fields at present.

George L. Freeman, of Fall River, reports a brisk demand for all varieties of cattleyas. His firm recently received 150 cases of Trianae in splendid shape. Mr. Freeman is preparing an exhibit of a new white iris, discovered in South America, for the coming orchid show in Boston.

Edgar Bros. are busy propagating their chrysanthemums to follow sweet peas, and are planning the erection of another 200-foot house.

W. N. CRAIG.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Last week we experienced the coldest snap that has been seen here at this time of the year in forty years. The temperature dropped to 4 degrees below freezing. It is estimated that the loss to the fruit growers and farmers of Indiana was about $10,000,000. It is hardly possible that any of the outdoor flowers escaped, and it is safe to say that outdoor stock will be scarce Decoration day.

The recent cold weather has had a tendency to cause people not to be in too big a hurry to put out their veranda boxes and geraniums. The weather preceding this cold snap was exceedingly warm and it was next to impossible to persuade them to wait.

Various Notes.

Glen Moore, son of Geo. F. Moore, of Rushville, Ind., spent a few days in the city last week visiting the different florists. Mr. Moore says business has been good so far this year, and they are looking for a big spring trade.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana will hold its next monthly meeting at the Elks' club on Maryland street, Wednesday evening, May 4. A large attendance is expected, as matters pertaining to the fall show are coming up, in addition to other important business. The meeting is to be followed by a Dutch lunch, which should help a little.

Chas. Volrath, with the Roepke-Rieman Co., has been on the sick list.

A. Wiegand & Sons have been cutting some fine Cattleya Mossiae. H. L. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising. THE REVIEW brings results.

HAIL insurance is again in fashion, for reports of losses are once more coming to hand.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

As an indication of the interest the trade has in the charges of railroads, it is interesting to note that when the United States Express Co. ceased operation on the lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Wells-Fargo Express Co. secured the contract by agreeing to pay to the St. Paul sixty per cent of the gross receipts for the privilege.

BEYOND question the big freeze last week has caused the country at large the loss of millions of dollars, but the grower of cut flowers under glass can preserve his equanimity as well as anyone, for the destruction of outdoor spring flowers has undoubtedly added more than a little to the value of May and June crops under glass. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., registers the following carnations:

Princess Charming, Helen Boseler x Enchantress; salmon pink; three to four inches; very strong, vigorous grower; very free producer of first-class flowers; keeping and shipping qualities excellent.

Christmas Cheer, Alvina x Victory; fiery scarlet; two to three inches; habit, dwarf, though stems reach two and one-half feet after Christmas; extremely floriferous, will produce 100 or more blooms per plant in a season; especially fine for pot culture. Through an error this name is printed Winter Cheer in the judges' report, in the annual report just issued.

CONFERENCE ON OUTDOOR ART.

A conference to discuss outdoor improvement for the homes, towns and cities of Illinois (Chicago included), is called for Springfield, May 26 and 27. All organizations interested in any way in outdoor improvement are invited to send representatives. Also, all persons having the appearance of their homes and neighborhoods at heart are invited to be present.

In politics a party cannot accomplish its purpose without "harmony." A locality cannot secure a clean and beautiful environment without the hearty coöperation of its public-spirited citizens and interested societies.

More still can be accomplished if localities interested in the same things and controlled by the same laws unite to secure new ideas and to study how some of their common needs can be satisfied by related action, even though the object aimed at be the attractive yard or street.

This is the purpose of the conference. Business men's associations and commercial clubs, improvement clubs and women's clubs, among voluntary organizations; and schools and park boards, among official bodies, are especially urged to send delegates. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association.

CALL TO GLADIOLUS GROWERS.

Some time ago I sent a personal appeal to the most prominent gladiolus enthusiasts in this country, for the purpose of ascertaining if a gladiolus society was really wanted. Replies received indicate clearly that a gladiolus society is not only wanted, but is absolutely necessary. I enclose with this letter extracts from replies received, which show the feeling of the American growers.

For the purpose of forming such a society, I now call for the first formal meeting, to take place at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., May 27, at 3 p. m. All those interested in the culture of the gladiolus are hereby invited to be present at this meeting, and to help in the formation of what no doubt will become one of the most influential societies in America.

Readers are requested to kindly suggest a suitable name for this society, and such suggestions should be addressed to

The Great Central Market.

The weather always is an important factor in the affairs of the market, and for nearly a week those who do business in the wholesale cut flower section, and those who frequent the wholesale houses, have spent the greater part of their time in discussing weather conditions and their effect upon the business of the next two months.

Not within the experience of the oldest men in the market has the cut flower industry experienced conditions like those which have prevailed this season. March was like June and growth was as far advanced April 22 as it ordinarily is late in May. The cold wave which swept across the middle west at the end of last week was not exceptional in its severity, but it found growth much farther along than the oldest gardeners can remember it to have been when caught by heavy frosts. What the damage has been can only be conjectured. It is certain that much loss has resulted, but how much that loss has been, and what compensations will come to those who still have crops for market, time alone can tell.

The big freeze was followed by four days of rain, snow and sleet. It has been a period entirely unprecedented at this stage of the season's work, and bad weather always cuts down the retail and wholesale flower business. Supplies in general have been somewhat reduced, but not to any appreciable extent in the rose department. There continue to be plenty of roses of all kinds. Quality has been first-class, but is showing some effect of the dark days. Long Beauties continue plentiful, but an even larger proportion than heretofore are off grade. There is a fair demand for all that are good. Medium and shorts of fair quality are scarce and sell well. Killarney and White Killarney have the lead on other roses. The market regularly is supplied with splendid stock. Mrs. Jardine and Maryland are in limited supply, but enjoy a good sale. The demand for Richmond is not active, though fine stock is offered. Bride does better than Maia, but the thousand lots of seller's selection are largely composed of these two varieties. Prices have improved little under the influence of the unfavorable weather, demand having been reduced fully as much as production.

At the opening of this week the supply of carnations was possibly a third lighter than at the opening of the week previous and prices were slightly stiffer, white being in special request. The quality of carnations generally is good and a quite active shipping trade is being done in them once more. Indeed, were it not for the shipping orders, both roses and carnations would be badly congested; city trade is extremely light and has been so ever since the weather became bad.

Sweet peas continue one of the best selling items. The supply has not increased, bright weather being needed. It has not been possible to fill orders. There is a good demand for the wedding flowers. This includes cattleyas, valley, daisies and lilies, but does not take in the gardenias. The lily glut has passed; they are now on the short side and it has been momentarily difficult to fill orders. Callas also have shortened up.

The market never was so well supplied as now with antirrhinum, or snaps, as most of the buyers call them. These are offered in five or six different shades and some of the pinks are exquisite. Nothing is finer for window display or large vases. There also are some excellent red gladioli, popular for the same purposes. Spanish iris of good quality is not in large supply and orders cannot all be filled. Bulbous stock is pretty well gone, although small quantities of tulips still are received, a few jonquils and rather more daffodils. There is no special demand for any of these.

Plumosus bunches from Florida supply the bulk of the greens. There are few plumosus strings, but smilax is fairly abundant, though really good strings are extremely scarce. Fancy ferns of good quality are selling well, as many coming out of storage are extremely poor.

Damage to Peonies.

Growth was farther advanced than ever before at the date last week's freeze struck the peony fields and when the growers saw their plants, in some instances, so hard hit that they lay flat on the ground they were quick to announce the complete destruction of this important cut flower crop. Word was passed around that even the big crops in southern Illinois that in normal seasons are depended on for a Decoration day supply had suffered the same fate as the local fields. But it now appears things may not turn out so bad after all.

The first gleam of hope came in a report to Kennicott Bros. that at Villa Ridge the temperature had not fallen below 32 degrees. Later Spaulding & Son, the principal growers at that place, wired the REVIEW: "Early stock apparently unhurt; late crops slightly damaged." April 26 Ransom Kennicott, at Carbon-dale, whose crop is a big factor at Memorial day, telegraphed the REVIEW: "Our peonies very little damaged."

From Sarcoxie, Mo., Gilbert H. Wild sent the following Tuesday night, April 26: "We have escaped the freeze to date; our peonies are not injured. The lowest temperature registered was 28 degrees, but we had to our benefit wind and a cloudy morning. Tonight is clear and the temperature is 30 degrees, which means light frosts."

A grower from the southern end of Indiana says he will be ready to ship in a few days and will have several thousands of dozens, being little affected by frost. From Vincennes, Ind., comes word of some frost but no severe losses. New Castle expects to cut part of a crop.

From Fairbury Kring Bros. sent word to E. C. Amling that 21 degrees was registered and that the peonies were flat on the ground.

Locally the peonies were badly frozen, but it appears the damage may not be so heavy as at first reported. William A. Peterson, at Peterson Nursery, says the early sorts were much harder hit than the later ones. Stems on Festiva maxima were split wide open and it does not seem possible the plants can have escaped serious injury. All the plants drooped but most of them have now straightened up and the late varieties do not show much injury. The freeze was much harder than Mr. Peterson ever before had experienced with growth so far along and he is in doubt as to just how much damage was done. He thinks the cold, wet, sunless days that followed the freeze were favorable for drawing out the frost and did much to mitigate the loss on late sorts. Klehm's Nursery, at Arlington Heights, says it is too early to tell what the damage has been; while all bloom may not have been lost, the quality of the flowers may later be found to have been affected. No word has come to them from their Indiana field to enable them to speak with assurance about their southern crop. G. Swenson, at Elmhurst, says his peonies were flat and he doesn't see how they can amount to anything, but James King, in the same town, says he doesn't think all his crop is lost. Frank Schramm, of Arlington Heights, says all his peonies, as well as those of all his neighbors, were drooping, but that most of them have straightened up again. A most discouraging report came from the big Kennicott plantation at The Grove; Walter Kennicott said

April 25 the crop would be a total loss, and they are still feeling decidedly blue about it.

These are reports from only a few of the innumerable growers who supply peonies to this market, but they serve to show that the early crops will be on deck as usual and that hope for the late crop need not be abandoned.

With so many new growers each year to ship in, the natural increase in supply will go a long way toward making up for what has been locally lost by frost.

Carnation Plants in the Field.

Most growers had withstood the temptation to plant out their carnations earlier than usual this year, but several had made a beginning before the big freeze. They think their loss has been small.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had 150,000 plants in the field at Morton Grove. This is something more than half the stock. The stock had been out several days and had become well hardened up before the frost came. John Poehlmann stated at the store April 25 that August Poehlmann had just told him over the long distance phone that he could not see that the plants had suffered a great deal. It is planned to bench about 180,000 carnation plants for next season and approximately 300,000 are on hand, nearly half still under glass.

J. A. Budlong had 25,000 carnation plants in the field and neither A. H. Budlong nor Phil Schupp can see that the plants show signs of injury, although the temperature was as low as 26 degrees. The plants were covered by snow.

Bassett & Washburn had one day's planting out at Hinsdale, about 12,000 plants. Mr. Washburn says the tops were frozen and that it certainly did them no good, but possibly not much harm.

Nick Kruchten began planting the day before the freeze and had about 10,000 plants out. John Kruchten says they have had them out before without injury when the ground froze so hard you could walk on it and his brother Henry says he thinks the temperature must go below 20 degrees to kill carnation plants.

Others who had plants in the field also say they think the injury was slight.

Various Notes.

J. H. McNeilly, who has made a pronounced success of confectionery and ice cream at 1153 Sixty-third street, has taken also the store next door, at 1155, for a retail flower store and a catering department. The location is at Lexing-

The A. L. Randall Co. reports the wire work department as extremely busy. It has been necessary to remove the department to the fourth floor, where large, light, airy quarters were available, and where it is expected to largely increase the output.

John Michelsen, at E. C. Amling's, says snapdragon and iris are two of the best selling specialties of the season, the fancy grade of snaps going especially well. A. C. Kohlbrand is back on duty at this house after an illness of several days.

A. F. Longren, traveler for E. H. Hunt, has returned from three weeks in Michigan. He says he found everybody busy and happy until the freeze struck last week; since then everybody has been busy but blue.

At Vaughan & Sperry's, A. L. Vaughan says he not only hopes but believes that the frost damage will prove not so great as reported. He says peonies and other plants in his own neighborhood at Oak Park have come through in much better condition than one would expect.

It develops that Ole Johnson, who is now selling in the Flower Growers' Market, has for three months been a partner in the Batavia Greenhouse Co., Batavia, Ill. At a new location near Batavia this concern is putting up a range of new houses, 1,200 boxes of glass having been bought, delivered and paid for, according to Mr. Johnson's report. He says half the space will be planted to Beauties and half to tea roses.

Miss Josephine Then, who formerly sold her father's output at the Flower Growers' Market, is now saleslady at the Masonic Temple Flower Store. Anton Then's stock goes to the A. L. Randall Co. and J. B. Deamud Co.

Miss Ethel Douglas now presides over the office of Hoerber Bros. in the Atlas block.

Zech & Mann are in the market for 15,000 Asparagus plumosus seeds or seedlings for one of their growers.

Albert Lies, of Niles Center, was operated on for rupture April 21 and is now progressing finely.

C. W. McKellar has been on the sick list for several days, suffering a bad attack of the grip.

P. Pearson says he finds an exceptionally good mail-order demand for the young stock that he grows. He intends enlarging this department of his business.

Fischer Bros., Evanston, intend investing $4,000 in addition to their glass on Wilder street.

A. L. Randall is at West Baden, on his annual spring trip.

Albert A. Sawyer, Oak Park, reports having sold Sears, Roebuck & Co. 4,500 pansy plants for use in the park in front of their institution. Mr. Lund is gardener for Sears, Roebuck.

Winterson's Seed Store has received a carload of bay trees, including some large and fine specimens.

Wietor Bros. are this year dropping Bridesmaid from their list of roses and giving the additional space to Mrs. Jardine and White Killarney. N. J. Wietor says he thinks he sees signs that Richmond is going back.

store April 21, some sixteen members being present, the committee reported on the official scores and prizes were distributed. The standing of the teams, with number of games won and percentage, was given in last week's REVIEW. Here is the record of total pins and average per game:

Team.	Total pins.	Av.	Prize.
Carnations	58,673	.724	$25
Violets	57,589	.711	15

Each member of the Carnation team, Messrs. F. Ayers, capt.; F. Pasternick, E. F. Winterson, E. Farley and F. Krauss, gets a watch fob donated by Peter Reinberg.

The official individual averages show that John Zech, who participated in the full number of games, won second place from Wm. Wolf by a fraction. Problem in arithmetic: What is the difference between thirty eighty-firsts and seventeen seventy-fifths. Answer: $2 plus the credit of place in the race. The individual prize winners were:

T. C. Yarnall, individual champion, gets the silver cup donated by J. B. Deamud.

The first six men each get a silk umbrella donated by the Foley Mfg. Co.

Victor Bergman had the high single game, 256, and the high average for three games, 204, winning $5 on each.

The Orchid team had high single game, 921, and high average three games, 867, winning $5 on each.

The management of the alleys donated $55 toward the prizes.

Starting Friday evening, April 29, all florists desiring to bowl and make the team to represent Chicago at the coming S. A. F. convention should be at Bensingers alleys, 118 Monroe street, at 7:30 p. m. Every one has a chance to make the team.

WASHINGTON.

Samuel S. Pennock was here last week, intending to pass through the city on his way south. His visit was opportune, as William J. Moore, manager of the Washington branch of the Pennock-Meehan Co., was driven from his post by illness. Mr. Pennock changed his plans, taking the helm in person on New York avenue. Albert Jones, manager of the P. M. shipping department in Philadelphia, now has relieved Mr. Pennock.

ALLIANCE, O.—It is said that the Lam-born Floral Co. had 15,000 carnations planted in the field as early as April 19, and that the prospect of colder weather was causing fears for the safety of the plants.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A week of typical April weather caused a let-down in business, shortened up stock until Saturday, April 23, and found a decided scarcity of carnations and not any too many roses. Outdoor bulb stock was much poorer this season than usual and is about all gone.

Among the retailers there was nothing out of the ordinary last week and even the seed stores let down when the cool weather came.

Various Notes.

E. C. Reineman and family sailed April 23, on the Red Star line steamer Lapland, for a European tour. They found as fellow passengers Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bayersdorfer.

Lloyd Swarthout, who sold his green-houses and store in Washington, Pa., will open the Midway hotel, Conneaut Lake, about May 1. Mr. Swarthout was formerly a hotel man and we speak for him to any of the trade passing that way.

Fred Burki is a victim of rheumatism. He has been confined to his bed for over a week.

William Lowe, the green goods man, had a fire last Thursday night, April 21, which cleaned out his office, but the loss was not heavy.

Archie Wharton, of Water Works road, near Sewickley, a gardener for the Pennsylvania railroad, disappeared from home April 10 and it is feared he has met with foul play. Railroad detectives and the Chicago police have been notified, as his work at times took him to Chicago.

J. B. Murdoch & Co., of Penn avenue, have moved to their new store on Ninth street.

W. M. Steele, Uniontown, Pa., was a visitor last week. Hoo-Hoo.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The unseasonably hot weather came to an end at last, and we are now experiencing the coldest April weather of recent years. Heavy frosts have occurred, not only in this vicinity, but throughout the entire state, and have, according to current report, almost ruined the fruit crop, causing a loss of millions of dollars to Michigan fruit growers. The prospects of a bumper crop, a few days ago, were gratifying, and now the crop is frozen up. All outdoor bulb stock, including peonies and other perennials, is ruined. Even the freshly planted shrubbery that had begun to leaf out is frozen.

That there will be a shortage of outside flowers is certain, and there will be the greatest scarcity of cut flowers for Decoration day that has been experienced in many years. Those who have a good crop of carnations and roses coming on will certainly find a ready sale from now on, and at firmer prices than at present.

Business has been fair, considering the glut of roses and carnations, but the change in the weather is proving beneficial in shortening the crops, though there still is enough to meet all demands. The largest item of trade is funeral work, of which all have had a good share. Shipping trade has been only fair, as the unseasonable weather brought out flowers sufficient for the wants of the small retailers.

Shrubbery planting, which was nearly over, has received a check and will be prolonged for some time yet. So far advanced had the season become that people were even asking to have their bedding done, their porch boxes and baskets filled, etc.

Various Notes.

Mr. Freyling, of the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co., is ill. Two internal hemorrhages have left him extremely weak.

Mr. Bruinslot, Sr., is still in the hospital, where he has been since last August, as the result of running a rusty nail into the sole of his foot. First his foot was amputated; then gangrene set in and it was found necessary to cut a part of his leg off. After that he was supposed to be getting along nicely, but now fresh complications have set in, and for the third time a part of his leg must be removed. If he had not been of robust constitution, he would not have survived under all this experience. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery from his present suffering.

Eli Cross and the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. have all their carnations planted in the field and are wondering "where they are at." Several others have started, but have enough left unplanted should those now out be frozen. Conservative Henry Smith waited; he did not believe that the June weather was lasting, and is now hugging himself as he realizes that his carnations are still inside, and not, like his neighbors' plants, buried under two inches of snow.

It was with pleasure we learned from last week's REVIEW that Harvey E. Kidder, of the Ionia Pottery Co., has been elected without opposition as mayor of Ionia. This is a gratifying tribute to the confidence the people place in his honesty, ability and every sterling quality that

The Market.

The first part of last week found business conditions quite satisfactory, for the supply was moderate and the demand likewise, but the latter part met with a sort of "Presto! Change!" The weather turned wet and chilly, causing a considerable check in the demand, outside of the necessary stock used for funeral work and standing orders. While the weather has not been favorable for the growing of stock, there is no particular shortage in any line, with the exception of carnations. These were a scarce article—that is, the better grades, locally grown—all last week, and this necessitated the cutting of shipping orders, as well as counter trade, most of the time. It seems strange that all the carnation growers in and about Milwaukee are off crop just at this time. They say there are plenty of buds in sight, but that does not help or alter present conditions.

Plenty of lilies continue to come in, and keep pretty well on the move. Sweet peas are diminishing in quantity and depreciating in quality. A few outdoor tulips and hyacinths made their debut last week, but the frost on Saturday, April 23, undoubtedly put an end to this source for this season.

With reference to the weather, we can state that conditions thus far this season are different from any experienced by some of the oldest inhabitants. The unseasonably warm March had advanced all outdoor vegetation fully three weeks, so that all fruit trees and the various shrubs were in the early blooming stages. On Friday, April 22, it began to rain. Later the rain turned into sleet, which was followed by several degrees of frost. The following day we were treated to eight inches of snow, and this, with the mercury down to 23 degrees, put on the finishing touches. Thus outdoor bulbous stock, peonies, lilac, etc., were either ruined, or so nearly ruined, that what Club Entertainment.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club, consisting of Wm. Zimmermann, Fred Holton, G. H. Hunkel and Gust Rusch, with Mr. Rusch as chairman, is busy these days arranging particulars for the annual May ball, to be held in Miller's hall, at the corner of Eighth and State streets, May 12. This is the first chance this committee has had to show what it can do, and the ball is likely to be a "crackerjack." This event is always eagerly looked forward to by most of the members, for past seasons have proved that it is a success.

Tickets can now be had from any member of the committee, from the C. C. Pollworth Co. and the Holton & Hunkel Co., or at the club meeting next Thursday, May 5.

Various Notes.

Gust Rusch, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., was absent the latter half of last week on account of illness caused by dyspepsia, which has given him considerable trouble for some time.

Alex. Klokner, of Wauwatosa, met with an accident, April 21, which badly injured his left foot, while he was attending to some landscape work at Pine Lake. This will confine him to the house for some time, though he is right in the midst of his busy season in handling nursery and bedding stock. He consoles himself by saying, "It might have been worse."

Walter Halliday, of the force of the C. C. Pollworth Co., has in the last two weeks been spending a good deal of his time in serving as a jurymen.

Manke Bros., of North Milwaukee, began to plant carnations in the field April 15, this being earlier than in former years. It is to be feared that, with such unfavorable weather, "haste makes waste."

Aug. F. Kellner, president of the Aug. F. Kellner Co., has the sympathy of his friends in the loss of his father, Herman C. Kellner, who died April 22, at the age of 66. He was one of the best known men traveling out of Milwaukee, a calling he had followed for thirty-five years. The funeral was held under the auspices of the E. B. Wolcott post, he having served four years as member of the Sixth Wisconsin, Iron Brigade. The interment was at Union cemetery, April 25. E. O.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The rains of Quaker week, carried over a little longer, have not destroyed the improved tone in the market. All kinds of roses are more plentiful and are selling better than at any time since Easter week. Beauties are an exception to this rule. The height of the crop has been passed. The good Beauties are selling well, with prices holding satisfactorily for the season. Carnations are not so plentiful as a week ago, the demand remaining about the same, resulting in better average prices for much of the good stock. Sweet peas are of improved quality, due to the new crop of a number of growers. The vines just coming into bloom give some splendid flowers in all colors. The spent vines do not produce stock that will compare with these new crops. Fine peas are in active demand on the wedding days. Cattleyas, chiefly Mossiae now, are more plentiful and lower in price. The drop has not yet accelerated the demand.

There is not much doing in gardenias, owing possibly to the absence of their bosom friends, the violets. Lilies of the valley are the liveliest flowers on the list today, a genuine scarcity in really fine valley sending the wholesalers to the wires connecting with the specialists, a condition as unusual as it is exhilarating for the late spring. The price has moved up under active buying for critical orders.

All kinds of green are plentiful, even dagger ferns being quite equal to the demand.

Snaps are fine and plentiful; quite a good demand has been developed at extremely moderate prices. White lilac has been reinforced by outdoor-grown stock of excellent quality. There are still a few daffs, but tulips are over.

Long-stemmed lilies find a better market now; Easter lilies have firmed in price, while callas are not nearly so plentiful.

Spring blossoms are abundant when not spoiled by the rain.

The East End.

Phlox divaricata is just coming into bloom on the eastern slope at Horticultural hall in Fairmount park, lightening the dark masses of low-growing evergreen with a pale glory that is fully a fortnight earlier than usual. The beds facing the east end are extremely fine this year; the combination is of tulips and pansies with the white English daisy, Bellis perennis, planted effectively as a border. The central bed, where the tulips are just falling with the rain, now appears a solid carpet of pansies in shades of blue edged with the pink tinted white daisies, a combination most pleasing. The other beds show the possibilities in pansy planting, the powers that be rightly believing the best effects can be made with single varieties in a bed rather than by a riot of color.

The sun is just setting on the beauty of the parterre planted, as last year, in tulips, beds and festoons filled with the best varieties, the planting closely following the graceful lines laid out on the velvety green grass.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer sailed April 23 from New York for Antwerp on the Red Star liner Lapland. Their son, Sydney Bayersdorfer, went over to see them off.

Howard Thompson, Kennett Square, Pa., will rebuild this season, erecting four new houses, 28x200 each, connected, to be devoted to carnations and mushrooms. Mr. Thompson has placed his order with D. T. Connor, of Lord & Burnham Co.

A. B. Ellsworth, Allentown, Pa.; Mrs. C. Blackman, Reading, Pa., and Mrs. A. S. Dimson, Reading, Pa., were visitors recently.

M. Rice and Mrs. Rice have written to friends in this city from Vienna.

David Feurstenberg is gazing thoughtfully at the mushroom field.

and prove a welcome addition as the old crops wane.

George David and R. A. Stewart, Jr., have been important factors in the lilac market during the last week.

S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., has been in town lately to get a little change after a slight illness. Mr. Reuter is an enthusiast. He believes that Sangamo is a coming commercial carnation, and, further, that Pink Delight and May Day will finally displace Enchantress.

The Thornhedge Nurseries are sending in some of the finest white lilac seen in the market. It is outdoor-grown.

A few years ago H. H. Battles was obliged to send south for apple blossoms to grace a wedding during the last week in April. The earliness of the present season is strongly brought out by the fact that blossoms were over here by the end of the third week this month.

The Robert Craig Co. is shifting over 60,000 Lorraine begonias this week.

Henry F. Michell is pleased with the public support given five-eighteen. The first vegetable plants from his new Torresdale place are excellent.

Walter P. Stokes reports a brisk demand for valley. PHIL.

WEST GROVE, PA.

The D. & C. Company.

Edward Parker pointed with pride to a comparison between the express shipments of the Dingee & Conard Co. during April, 1909, and the present month, whereby was shown a gratifying increase in number. Mr. Parker then proceeded to show what P. Joseph Lynch asserts is the finest stock of roses ever gathered together in America. Phil was so much impressed by the sight that he felt affirmation or contradiction of this broad statement would be equally foolish, unaided by the census bureau. The stock was in remarkably fine shape. Many varieties difficult of propagation were seen in quantity, while the general standard of quality was high. A glance at the propagating house showed the rear guard to be ready to march into 2¼'s with scarcely a vacancy in the ranks. To one who had known Mr. Parker at the Penrose Nurseries it was astonishing to see the complete mastery of every detail of the business at West Grove; it takes a bright man to lead well in two wholly different branches of our profession.

Mr. Parker drifted easily into a discussion of what might be termed floral metaphysics, responding to a few rather difficult questions with a readiness most surprising. One of the practical improvements imported by Mr. Parker from the Penrose Nurseries to the Dingee & Conard Co. is the arrangement of the stock house, wherein every variety used in filling orders is spaced and labeled. Thus, though an expert keeps this house supplied, a novice can readily fill any order from it if he keeps his mind in the building. This arrangement has been noted before in this column; it is a labor-saver worth thought.

Cannas.

Roses are, of course, the leading feature of the large business of the Conard & Jones Co. at West Grove. The packing shed was full of them and Robert Pyle, president of the company, said that stock in some sizes and varieties was already running low. But it is of cannas that I want especially to write today.

Antoine Wintzer, vice-president of the company and one of the leading canna specialists of the day, whose work has been described from time to time in this column, has a seedling canna mentioned under number last fall. This canna is now in bloom in an end of one of the rose houses, where a dozen or two plants, all in flower at once, form a beautiful picture. The canna is of the gladiolus type, a cross between Wawa and a numbered seedling. The color is superb, resembling the old La France rose more nearly than anything in cannas. The flowers are of immense size, the trusses so large, well proportioned and exqui-

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held Monday evening, April 18, at its rooms, 98 Westminster street, this city. James King was elected to membership and the business session was brief. At its conclusion President Robert Johnston extended an invitation to the members to adjourn with him to his home, 21 Meader street.

The party was received by Mrs. Johnston, assisted by Mrs. William H. Barrows and Mrs. Ray Davis, and later a supper was served, the table and house decorations being Killarney roses. The affair was entirely informal and much enjoyed. Those present included William E. Chappell, William Appleton, Eugene Appleton, Eugene McCarron, James Hockey, H. R. Bellows, Clarence G. Hartstra, James P. Dillon, Owen McManus, H. Howard Pepper, Alexander Macrae, Michael Sweeney, William H. Barrows and Sheldon Davis.

Various Notes.

Some of the finest pansies seen in the local market this spring are being brought in by Noonan Bros.

Johnston Bros. had three decorations at Brown University last week, at one of which they used 5,000 Winsor carnations.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, has been elected vice-pressitely shaded as to indicate another step in advance in the evolution of the canna. The starting of the canna seed was in progress and was entrusted by Mr. Wintzer to his son for the first time—an honor better understood when you know that Mr. Wintzer has always done this himself. These pedigreed seeds are soaked in water after chipping the shell, and then sown in the propagating bed vacated by the roses. Only the best of these seeds are sown, the crosses being made for definite purposes, to secure certain colors or shades of color of certain type. Mr. Wintzer is doing a splendid work for the canna, a work which is appreciated wherever known. PHIL.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business continues good—no boom, but just straight, steady business. Outdoor work is well started and all the growers are commencing their annual clean-up and preparing for the propagations for the fall and winter. There is considerable talk of new glass, but the price of the lights is causing several would-be builders to hold off.

The talk of a flower market still holds attention, but nothing definite has yet occurred. There is a good supply of everything and prices rule moderate.

The Market.

The week opens with clear, warm weather again, and shipments will surely increase before May arrives. There was a general clean-up on Saturday and prices were steady at last week's quotations. Beauties were all taken and the selected ones brought 25 cents to 30 cents. The medium grades of all roses were low enough in price for buyers and a more cheerful tone prevailed than has been the case for a long time. Killarney still holds the record for abundance. Everybody has them, and there has been no decadence in their popularity.

Carnations are none too plentiful and prices are a shade better. The cool weather is in their favor. Prices of orchids have held up steadily for several weeks, the select still holding the top at 75 cents. The wedding demand has been persistent. May promises a moderate observance of the marriage celebrations, but most of the bon ton florists have their books already well filled for June, and there will be something doing every day. There seems to be plenty of lilies yet, and $4 per hundred was the best the most of them commanded. Callas were higher, one wedding last week calling for 2,000 of them. Gardenias retain their popularity. The finest sweet peas the New York market has ever seen are now arriving. Lilac has departed. The street merchants have turned to roses and arbutus. Violets have pulled down the curtain for the season. The few arriving brought 35 cents per hundred. Snapdragons, stocks and pansies round out the display in the wholesale windows. Smilax continues a profitable need.

Various Notes.

Monday evening, May 10, is the next meeting of the Florists' Club. The club is growing rapidly in numbers. There should be an average attendance now of 150. The May session will be one of the most important of the season.

The wholesalers of Twenty-eighth street begin to see daylight—some of them. George Saltford has secured the property next door to Traendly & Schenck's and Walter Sheridan's new quarters, an excellent location, and a little nearer Sixth avenue. Ford Bros. have taken an entire house, which will be thoroughly modernized; the upper stories probably will be turned into convenient offices. Both these firms have secured long leases. continued auction crowds. The suburbanites have just begun to plant. Nursery stock of any kind is in wide demand. The clarion voices of the auctioneers will be heard all through the month of May.

Alexander McConnell's decorations for the Gould-Drexel wedding, both at the church and house, were elaborate and beautiful, and many of his brother florists congratulated him on the success achieved. Great banks of palms, immense groups of daisies, white lilac, callas and pink roses without number turned the big church into a veritable bower. At the house Beauties predominated. The whole effect everywhere was charming and the city papers devoted columns to its description.

Saturday, April 23, the church at the corner of Seventy-third street and Madison avenue displayed one of the most charming decorations I have ever seen. M. A. Bowe, of Broadway, had charge of both church and house, and the artistic hand of Arthur Merritt was evident in the graceful and beautiful effects accomplished. It was a spring wedding in more than name, and the whole wall and chancel and galleries were a mass of spring flowers, white and pink, carefully blended to the minutest details. Huge palms, blooming plants and great trees of apple blossoms, flowering plums and cherries completed the picture. It was a triumph of floral decorative art.

The biggest affair in the future is the fancy dress ball of the Goulds, May 2, at Georgian Court, Lakewood. It will be a wonderful affair and Alexander McConnell will have another opportunity to beat his own record. The finest palms he used at the Gould wedding were the New Zealand Cyathea medullaris. Mr. McConnell's conservatories at New Rochelle are filled with fine kentias.

Importations last week were numerous. H. Frank Darrow had many cases of trees. William Elliott & Sons had fourteen boxes of plants and trees for the auction; Julius Roehrs, over 200 large laurel trees; Wadley & Smythe, 150 of the same; McHutchison & Co., plants and trees, and so on through the list of importers; nearly 3,000 cases altogether in a single week.

Mothers' day, May 8, is receiving deserved consideration in the big New York dailies.

Albert Holmes, with A. W. Smith, of Pittsburg, has been visiting friends in New York, a guest of Mr. Reidel, of A. J. Guttman's. Mr. Smith also arrived Monday, April 25, and will visit all the large growers in the east.

J. K. Allen has been quite ill during the last week, his worst experience, a fight with several of Job's comforters. Like the old prophet, his stock of patience seems inexhaustible. George E. Bradshaw is now one of his force of salesmen.

The committee appointed by the Cut Flower Exchange to confer with the other committees with reference to the market at Fifty-ninth street and First avenue, under the new bridge, consists of President John Donaldson, ex-officio, and P. Einsman, J. A. Leach, V. S. Doryal, A. S. Burns and C. Beckman.

The Market.

The cold dark weather has put a decided crimp in the supply of all kinds of cut flowers. Prices are on the rise, but there is still not enough to fill orders. Carnations that have heretofore been plentiful are not to be found at 2½ cents and 3 cents. Roses have also moved up in price and are bringing from 3 cents to 8 cents. There are quantities of sweet peas, valley and lilies sent in daily, but the carnation shortage makes the demand for them good. Violets are about done for this season, the last being received April 25.

Various Notes.

Knoble Bros. report good business last week, having had some large funerals. This firm advertises steadily in the daily papers and are more than pleased with the results derived therefrom.

C. A. Bramley, of Superior avenue, is handling great quantities of pansies this season. He stated that he expects to market 5,000 baskets.

Euclid avenue establishment of Smith & Feters. The big display room was a bower of roses, artistically distributed over the walls and ceiling in honor of the reorganization of the company, which was enlarged to take in some of the employees.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock a reception for the patrons of the company and the general public was held, and the ladies were given favors of large bouquets of violets.

The officers of the concern are Frank Monroe Smith, president and treasurer, who will also continue as supervisor of contract work; William S. Krusen, vice-president; Louis A. Koons, Jr., secretary; Clarence A. Myers, decorator, and Timothy Smith, manager.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

The sudden change from summer to winter weather here has shortened up the supply in most flowers, besides killing all outdoor stock, such as lilacs, tulips, daffodils, etc. Carnations, that were planted in the field a week ago, are looking bad and some fear they are ruined. Retail trade last week was exceptionally good with all the downtown stores.

Various Notes.

The Des Moines Floral Co. closed up April 22. There was not enough business to make it go. We understand that William Trillow has taken over the store of the Des Moines Floral Co. and will remodel things in general for a first-class store, which he intends to run in conjunction with his greenhouses on Woodland avenue.

The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. is setting posts for a new greenhouse, 18x200 feet, expecting to have it finished in time to plant to chrysanthemums. BOOSTER.

WEST SHARON, MASS.—The greenhouses of Joseph Poirer, on Wollomolopog street, barely missed destruction by forest fires which raged in the neighborhood, April 14.

The Market.

Last week the market was in good condition. There was plenty of everything the trade wanted and the wholesalers report the demand much better than the week previous, although they were not able to dispose of all their stock any one day. Shipping orders also improved somewhat. The consignors to this market have done well for the trade this season, and little complaint is made as to not being able to obtain first quality in roses and carnations.

Last week a lot of first-class Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond, Ivory and Bride were seen, also plenty of extra good long Beauties, as well as medium stems and shorts. Carnations of the lighter shades had a good call all week. In these Enchantress had the best call. Thursday, April 21, all whites were cleaned up. Of these Boston Market and White Perfection have the call. Rose-pink Enchantress and Beacon, when fancy, sell well; $2 per hundred was about the price on fancy stock last week.

Bulbous stock is becoming scarce. Indoor and outdoor valley is plentiful, as well as callas and Harrisii. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are scarce. Sweet peas are not so plentiful and they sell well.

April has brought us bad weather. The cold weather continues with snowstorms and biting winds and the temperature down to freezing, and it is feared that all outdoor stock is a loss. Snowballs were out in full bloom, but were black Monday, April 25. Outdoor stock, no doubt, will be scarce this season.

Various Notes.

Chairman C. DeWever, of the bulletin committee, will call a meeting of that committee early next week so as to prepare a report for the next Florists' Club meeting.

Kalisch Bros. report that they will go in heavy on orchids for next season. They now have a large collection and are supplying the local trade with some fine cut blooms.

Ostertag Bros. had a busy day Thursday, April 21. They made a 10-foot harp costing $300, which was presented to the manager of the local American League team. They also disposed of some 5,000 green carnations for the same occasion.

Adolph Welz, a gardener at 6442 Gravois avenue, had a loss by fire to the extent of $500 last week. The fire started at midnight, and sent thirteen people, comprising the family, out into the rain and snow. They were taken care of by their neighbors.

All the downtown florists had a good supply of green carnations Thursday, April 21, which sold like hot cakes, the occasion being in honor of "Jack" O'Connor, the new manager of the American League team, which opened that day with the Chicago team of the same league. Those who had made big preparations for them say that the sale far exceeded that of St. Patrick's day. The boom was started by the St. Louis Star, to which the local florists are much indebted, and specially to "Billy" Murphy, the sporting editor.

Walter Weber, who has charge of the greenhouses of the H. J. Weber & Sons' Nursery Co., is consigning to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. a fine lot of carnations and roses. This firm had a large trade in nursery stock this season, both local and shipping.

The downtown seed houses of the Schisler Seed Co., St. Louis Seed Co. and Tinsley Seed Co. have all had a busy season. The snow and rain gave them a breathing spell for a day or so. Everything in this line is selling well.

The plantmen at Union market say trade was not so good last week, owing to the cold spell. This also slackened up the trade with the greenhouse men, who say that the planting out will not begin until May 1.

The Briz Floral Co. made a pretty show last week of blooming plants and cut flowers. Mr. Brix says funeral work has been heavy with them all week.

The florists' bowlers have not of late been having their regular bowling games Monday nights, owing to the busy season. Carl Beyer, with the Western Rowing Club league; C. A. Kuehn, with the Commercial league, and J. J. Beneke, with the Royal Arcanum league, say their season will end next week. All have good averages this season.

The cemetery florists have been busy of late, preparing ground for planting. F. H. Meinhardt and the Koenig Floral Co., who do the biggest part of the work in the two large cemeteries opposite their places, will, when the warm weather starts, have all they can attend to.

Mr. Hill, representing L. Baumann & Co., of Chicago, spent a few days here calling on the trade with florists' supplies.

Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, called Saturday, April 23, and reports trade in Belleville fairly good in cut flowers and rushing in plants. J. J. B.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

C. C. MORSE & Co., San Francisco, are reported to have purchased a ranch of 900 acres near Hollister for seed-growing purposes.

L. W. WHEELER, secretary of the Peters-Wheeler Seed Co., Hollister, Cal., says all the crops in that vicinity are looking fine, except onion, on which there is some mildew.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is this season operating four retail stores, three of them located in market gardening districts in the city, and reports the largest business ever experienced in this department.

JOHN MICHIE, formerly with H. W. Buckbee at Rockford, Ill., but now with Reichardt & Schulte Co., Houston, Tex., says a good many northern seedsmen do not appreciate the way the seed trade of the southwest has developed in the last few seasons.

ORDERS for seeds for replanting are coming in from the central states frozen up last week and market gardeners find that their usual sources of supply are no longer able to deliver favorite sorts. This is particularly true of peas. Much lettuce and radish was frozen.

H. A. BERTOLI, who has been with Bromfield & Colvin, Bay City, Mich., for the last four years, has resigned to go with a wrecking company on the great lakes and probably will not return

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

Absolutely Guaranteed

Money Refunded if Not Satisfactory

It has always been assumed by growers that Easter was about the only time Lilies were wanted and they bought accordingly. Recently, however, a few men believed that Lilies were salable at any season of the year the same as other flowers, and these men have made money. If a market for an article does not exist, make one. The men who make markets are the leaders and the successful men of today.

to the seed business. James H. Goodby, also employed by Bromfield & Colvin, has gone to Chicago to accept a position.

REPORTS from Holland speak of a satisfactory blooming season in the bulb fields.

NOTES on storm damage of interest to seedsmen will be found on page 12 of this issue.

J. W. JUNG, of the Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis., was a Chicago visitor last week.

THE Rochester Canning Co., Rochester, Ind., is a concern just starting. W. C. McReynolds is manager.

THE canners as well as the seed growers had planted a considerable proportion of their peas before the April blizzard. Losses will be important, for seed is not available for extensive replanting.

L. H. ARCHIAS, Sedalia, Mo., will sail from New York May 14 on the S. S. König Albert for three months' visit to seed growing sections in Europe. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Archias and their daughters, Elise and Edith.

THE A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, last season put out a lawn grass mixture, in bulk and cartons, selling principally through retail florists, and reports the business this year promises to be nearly if not quite ten times what it aggregated the first season.

THE firm of Polman Mooy is celebrating, May 1 of this year, its centenary as bulb growers in the same place, Kleine Houtweg, Haarlem, Holland, and on the very spot where the so well known tulip speculation took place in 1634 to 1637, of which an interesting booklet has been published by the firm, both in the French and German languages. In its garden may be seen a brick-built greenhouse constructed two centuries ago and which is still used in almost its original form.

THE thirty-third anniversary of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, under the management of Charles N. Page, was celebrated April 16. Mr. Page entered the employ of the company when he was 16 years of age. Since then it has grown until it now has a retail department occupying two floors, three warehouses, a mail order building four stories in height, thirty-three greenhouses, the Iowa Bird Co., said to be the largest in the world, the Iowa Floral Co., and large testing grounds at Altoona.

MICHIGAN PEAS ESCAPE FROST.

In last week's REVIEW contract growers of peas spoke of much of the crop having been planted and of the fact that stock seed is not available for replanting should mishaps befall. So when the blizzard swept over the central states April 22 inquiries were addressed to several growers to see how the peas had fared. Here are the replies:

ucts, especially pea growing. We have had no unseasonable weather up to this time, except that the season is six weeks ahead of normal and very fine; no blizzard here, only a good seasonable rain is now on duty."

ONION SETS AT CHICAGO.

Referring to onion seed sown for sets at Chicago, D. J. Tamminga, who is one of the principal operators south of the city, had this to say of the effect of the blizzard of April 23 and following days:

"The onion seed for sets had all been sown in this vicinity. Of the earliest plantings they may have some setback on account of the blizzard, but I believe it will be slight. The acreage is about the same as last year; possibly a little less, on account of the unusually early spring and the unprofitable and unsatisfactory ending of the business on the previous crop."

FROST DAMAGE AT CHICAGO.

Speaking of the damage by frost at Chicago, the Leonard Seed Co. had this to say April 25:

"At this date, the extent of the damage to early crops in the Chicago garden district cannot be fully determined. In most cases the gardeners are optimistic and hope for the best.

"It is generally conceded, however, that the first planting of radishes is lost and that carrots and beets that have broken through the ground will stand a poor chance of making a crop. Head lettuce, which has been transplanted to the open ground from the hotbeds, will be greatly damaged. Early cabbage and cauliflower, similarly set out, will likely stand the adverse condition, but the serious check to the growth will lessen the uniformity of the crop and cut it down considerably. Onions and onion sets will not be hurt to any extent. Peas may pull through, but any beans that were sprouted will perish. Early sweet corn and other half hardy vegetables, where sufficiently advanced to be above the ground, will not recover. Spinach, which in some places was about ready to be cut for market, is wilted and practically unsalable. This will entail considerable loss, as many of the gardeners have been depending upon this for early money returns.

"In the localities where the soil is somewhat sandy and where early planting is the rule, the crops are much farther advanced than in the cold clay soil. It is a question whether this advanced condition will be of benefit. Some of the gardeners seem to think that the farther advanced the small vegetables are, the greater the damage will be. On the other hand, some of them are of the opinion that where the crops are the farthest advanced, the damage will be less. Taken as a whole, the loss will be

LETTUCE ROT.

I am sending you a box containing one head of Big Boston lettuce, the edges of which are dark and look as if they were affected by mildew. Every plant in the house seems to have the disease. It seems to begin during the night and in a few days the whole head is rotten. Please state what is the trouble and what I can do to stop it. During these warm days I keep the house as cool as I can, and at night the ventilators are all open. My soil is mixed, consisting of a cart-load of manure to two loads of soil. I also placed a little slaked lime on top when I put the soil in the greenhouse, and then worked the lime through the soil.

I am also sending in the same box a bottle of insects which I caught in one of my coldframes. They were numerous along side the edges of the frame. I shall appreciate any information that you can give me. M. E. A.

The head of lettuce received as a sample was affected with the lettuce rot, which is one of the most common diseases of this crop. It is a fungus and therefore spreads from the spores. Even though a house of lettuce may have been well cared for, the disease will sometimes appear and do much damage, but it is more frequently brought on by a little neglect or carelessness, especially in having the foliage too wet or having it wet much of the time. Insufficient ventilation at times, causing too high a temperature, is also a cause of weakness of the plants, which makes them more susceptible to any disease to which they are subject.

There is nothing one can do for plants when once they are affected, but it can be checked somewhat from spreading to plants not yet affected, by cleaning the house, removing all plants that show the disease and scraping off a little of the soil where the diseased plants were.

Lime which has been air-slaked, so that it is fine like flour, can be dusted all over the soil around the remaining plants and where the dead ones were, and will help exterminate the disease. In the summer the soil should all be changed for some clean, new soil, that has never been used inside. This will save much trouble from diseases that would be held over in the soil if the soil were not changed.

If your lettuce crop is badly affected now, perhaps it would be well to tear out the entire crop and use the house for something else. Space in greenhouses is valuable at this time of year.

The insects in the bottle are the same that I have often noticed around my place, but I do not know their name and never investigated, because they never seemed to do any harm. If they are too numerous, you might soak the ground with some liquid tobacco insecticides and dust plenty of lime around, too. They will not bother you then. H. G.

EXTRA EARLY CABBAGE.

Kindly let me know what variety of cabbage can be grown for extra early spring use here, in the southeastern part of South Dakota. I want a variety that can be left in the field all winter. What methods do the large growers use in preventing the ravages of worms or caterpillars among cabbages in July and August? Can late cabbage be sown directly in the field and grown with good success, so as to avoid transplanting in June? C. L.

You are too far north to plant cabbage plants out in the late fall and leave them out all winter, as is done in the Carolinas and other states of the upper south. You will have to start them in the spring in hotbeds or greenhouses and plant them out as soon as you can get on the ground to work it after the frost is out. If grown cool and healthy, they will stand the spring frosts well.

The best extra early cabbage is the Early Jersey Wakefield, but the Charleston Wakefield has a much better and larger head and is only a few days later.

Late cabbage should be sown in the open garden in rows, like radishes, and transplanted only once; that is, directly to the big field. To plant the seed in the big field would certainly not be advisable.

For cabbage worms I find Slug Shot insect powder about as satisfactory as anything, and not expensive. We seldom need to fight worms here, as they do little damage to the cabbage if the season is wet enough to keep them growing. It is in dry seasons that they get the best of the plants. H. G.

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

Dangers in Steaming.

There has been little trouble from after effects from soil steaming, where the soil is of rather coarse, sandy character, like this about Ashtabula. Wherever soils are less sandy in character and contain appreciable amounts of silt or clay, the steaming may change the soil texture greatly. In cases of this kind the soil does not produce well immediately after steaming. Certain silty soils may, indeed, become so altered that extreme care is needed to avoid overwatering and water-logging after steaming. The newly steamed soil of this kind is easily overwatered, and on all heavy soils, after steaming, great care is required in getting them dried out evenly and securing a full restoration of the water relations of the soil. Even in somewhat sandy soils, like this about Cleveland, the results of steaming are often irregular. It has been observed where soil from one-half of the bed was thrown up over the pipes in the central portion for steaming, that the growth of Formaldehyde and Steaming Compared.

While there are certain advantages in steaming as well as certain disadvantages, the formaldehyde drench treatment must still be given a place of real usefulness. Other circumstances than the inherent differences in the results will often determine whether one method or the other is to be used. A grower will sometimes be caught in the middle of the season and will have to do what he is prepared for in the way of soil treatment. Both methods have their fields of usefulness, and both have certain disadvantages which have before been pointed out.

The cost of treatment is about the same by either method. The danger is about the same from either method in sandy soils. The danger in silty soils is much greater, in my judgment, from the steaming method than from the formaldehyde drench.

HAIL.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—A heavy storm on the afternoon of April 15 is said to have broken a good deal of greenhouse glass in this vicinity, especially in East Huntsville.

HILLSBORO, ILL.—Hail, April 15, broke nearly every pane of glass in the greenhouses and frames of F. C. Winklemann. Practically all his stock, both under glass and in the open, was cut down by the hail storm. A photograph, in which a dozen or more hail stones were shown side by side with hens' eggs, shows the eggs to be the smaller.

DIXON, ILL.—N. H. Long recently presented a bouquet of a dozen carnations to each of the teachers in the South Side High School.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions are about what they should be and everyone is getting his share of the trade; funeral work is up to the standard and many times the forces are taxed to get it out in time. Flowers are plentiful of almost every variety. Carnations are of unusual form and quality. Roses are all that could be asked, and are gaining in popularity. Sweet peas and violets are scarce, with the former advancing in quality and the latter diminishing, and the Crimson Ramblers, Hiawatha and Lady Gay are in elegant display. Calceolarias and cinerarias are the only things to be had in small blooming plants.

Unusual activity is noticeable in all outdoor work and gardening. Seedsmen and nurserymen report sales far in advance of former years.

Various Notes.

William Sibson claims the honor of picking the first outdoor rose. It was of the Lady Battersea variety and of fine form.

A. Peterson, of Seattle, spent a few days in our midst and reports business as satisfactory in his city.

R. C. Cook has opened an artistic store at 122 Third street. The sides and ceiling are entirely covered with mirrors and lights.

Mrs. Frank T. Barlow, of Oregon City, is quite an enthusiastic rose grower, and attributes much of her success to the REVIEW, of which she is a constant reader. E. R. C.

NURSERY TRADE IN CALIFORNIA.

The present season, from the standpoint of the Pacific coast nurserymen, has been one of the most satisfactory that has been experienced in many years. Not only has the demand for almost all kinds of stock been heavy, but the season itself has left little to be desired. This is one of the most important points to be considered, for no matter how good the demand is in this line, if the weather is unfavorable, there is bound to be a great loss in the digging and planting of stock. For the last several seasons we have been treated to an exceedingly short spring; we have had successions of drying winds, commencing usually about March 1, which closely followed an excess of rain in the two earlier months of the year. As the season in the central portion of the Pacific coast is practically over by the middle of April, it can be seen that we had but a small margin on which to do our season's trading. This season, however, has been a banner one, and if there is to be any fault found at all, it will have to be on the score that there was a shortage of stock in almost all lines.

Although we are well on toward May at this writing, we have yet experienced no drying winds, and the rainfall has been so even and so gradual that there has been no delay in either the digging or planting of stock. Excessively wet winters are often followed by the meanest sort of drying winds in the early spring; for weeks and weeks it will be so wet that it is impossible to put a foot on the ground and in a couple of days the north winds have so hardened the surface that nothing less than dynamite will stir it.

In the line of fruits, the indications are that the crops will be quite heavy. In some localities it is possible that a little damage has been done to the blossoms by the late rains, but in a general way the climatic conditions have been so favorable that no one cares to find any fault. Such dealers as had a heavy stock of ornamentals on hand have cleaned out well, and the sale of roses has been phenomenal. Never in the history of the coast trade has there been a better demand or a better stock on hand to fill it. The same may truthfully be said of almost everything grown or handled here that pertains to the nursery or gardening trade. This has given a great impetus to all these industries on the Pacific coast, and from all sides come reports that there will be a much greater acreage devoted to these lines for the coming season than ever before. ket and, although an effort has been made to keep prices up, by some of the growers, it has not been successful except for a few articles.

Carnations are cheap again, but the same can not be said of roses. Beauties are not plentiful and the wholesalers hold them at rather stiff prices. Liberty, Richmond and other red sorts share the general scarceness and are likewise bringing good figures. Orchids are only in fair supply and there are not quite enough to fill all requirements. Bulbous stock has almost entirely disappeared, except some long stemmed, late flowered tulips. There are some iris, anemones and ranunculi shown, but these are only used in cheap decorations. Gypsophila has made its appearance, to the great delight of the retailer, who has been sorely tried for the last six months in getting enough greens to mix with sprays and bunches. Asparagus and maidenhair ferns have been scarce and rather high priced, and the general public expects such quantities of these commodities gratis, that the problem becomes serious with the florists in their efforts to give satisfaction.

Various Notes.

The city of Santa Rosa, Cal., will give a rose festival to last for three days, commencing May 5.

The G. A. R. coast encampment, held April 19 to April 23 in Oakland, developed a healthy demand for bright colored roses and carnations, which the local dealers had some trouble to fill.

WOMEN'S GROWING PROJECT.

The women's flower growing project which has been so much talked of by San Francisco papers, while never taken very seriously by those in the trade, appears to have encountered difficulties rather early in its career, as witness the following from the Post of April 18:

"Directors and officers of the fashionable California Flower and Plant Society have scattered to the four winds, leaving Mrs. Thomas H. Stevenson, president, in full possession. The society was incorporated about one month ago. The incorporators, with the exception of Mrs. Stevenson, were of the opinion that the mission of the society was to grow orchids, American Beauty roses and other flowers to be sold merely at cost, and to revive the old-fashioned flowers of our grandmothers. They considered the society a sort of floral philanthropy, a something that would do some good to the poor of the world, as well as to those lovers of flowers who are not so poor. The claim is made that Mrs. Stevenson did not care to waste her time—that the society meant business to her, especially as her husband is in the retail flower business. The directors had ways of their own by which the flowers could be disposed of, but the claim is made Mrs. Stevenson wished them disposed of through her husband's store.

"Therefore, the directors and their money and social prestige dropped out of the society, leaving Mrs. Stevenson in possession. That there was a quarrel among the women is strenuously denied by every one concerned. They simply agreed to disagree, and the resignations followed."

NEW LONDON, WIS.—O. G. Guelson, formerly of Brodhead, Wis., is now in business here, having purchased E. H. Olson's range of houses, known as the New London Greenhouses and containing 14,000 square feet of glass.

QUINCY, MASS.—J. E. Derringer had charge of the decorations for the eighth annual ball of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, in Music hall. The decorations were elaborate and artistic and included a large shield representing the button worn by the society.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

MANY a nurseryman who thought his season over, finds it rejuvenated.

A PARK nursery has been started at Utica, N. Y., with young stock from D. Hill, Dundee, Ill., and Thomas Meehan & Sons, Dreshertown, Pa.

THE Reading Nursery, of Reading, Mass., has not been sold, as was reported in local newspapers there, but is still owned by J. Woodward Manning.

THE East Texas Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Tyler, Tex., with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are E. W. Mims, C. C. Crews, J. M. Mims and others.

NURSERYMEN of the central states never before went up against a season like the present: From winter to mid-summer almost in a day, and then, after growth had started, back to winter again.

T. E. CASHMAN, president of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., is campaigning for re-election to the state senate, where, from reports, he has effervesced regularly and continuously, enjoying himself immensely.

B. E. GAGE, of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, had a carload of nursery stock and six men at Oshkosh, Wis., April 22, on what was thought would be about the last job of the spring season, when over eight inches of snow fell on them.

M. P. BYRD, of the Byrd Nursery Co., Omaha, Neb., says he has never before known a season that would equal this one for the large quantity and high quality of the stock purchased. "People have seen the folly of using cheap goods," he says, "and are this year putting in the finest quality they can buy."

JACS SMITS, nurseryman at Naarden, Holland, who arrived at New York April 20, was arrested by Marshal Henkel on the charge of presenting a false consular invoice for a shipment of blue spruces, Japan maples, rhododendrons and other plants which arrived at that port April 11 on the steamship Rotterdam. The complaint against Smits, sworn to by Customs Inspector Howard D. Esterbrook, states that the value of the imported plants was stated falsely to be $163, whereas their true value greatly exceeded that amount. Smits was arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields and held in $2,000 bail for examination.

NURSERY WINS AT LAW.

In the district court at Council Bluffs, Ia., April 20, a verdict for the defendant was returned in the suit of John A. Moyer against the Council Bluffs Nursery Co. and others. The trial lasted over a week. About $5,000 was involved in the claim of the plaintiff that an order given by him for fruit trees and other nursery stock was not properly filled. Moyer lives near Boone, Ia., and the first trial of the suit took place there. It resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for about $3,100. This verdict was set aside by the supreme court, on the ground that the Boone county court did not have jurisdiction. A second trial resulted in a verdict for the defendant. This was directed by Judge Wheeler, who took the case from the jury. The supreme court set aside this verdict on assignments of error, and the case was sent back to the district court at Council Bluffs for another trial, with the result of a second verdict for the defendant nursery.

EVERGREEN HEDGES.

A well kept evergreen hedge is a charming feature. Not only are they desirable as boundary lines, but make admirable windbreaks. The late T. C. Thurlow, of West Newbury, Mass., situated in a bleak part of New England, many years ago recognized the value of evergreen hedges for windbreaks and some of the finest Norway spruce, Picea excelsa, hedges probably to be found in the country are to be seen at the Cherry Hill Nurseries, West Newbury. Mr. Thurlow also found that the hedges proved desirable shelters and nesting places for numerous robins and other insectivorous birds, which so far kept destructive insects in check that he had lit-

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

the spraying to do. One of the hedges here is no less than fifty feet high, but the general run is eight to ten feet high, and nearly as much in diameter, receiving one good yearly trimming. Where a high hedge for a windbreak is wanted, the Norway spruce is unexcelled.

Thuja occidentalis, American arborvitæ, is a well known hedge plant which can be kept moderately low and dense by close trimming, or can be allowed to reach large dimensions. The larger sized plants can be allowed more space in the rows than the smaller sizes. Sometimes a heavy snow will flatten down this evergreen, especially when in a young state, but it invariably straightens up again.

Tsuga Canadensis, the well known hemlock spruce, makes an admirable hedge plant. It is more graceful than the Norway spruce and stands close shearing. While not equal to the English yew, Taxus baccata, as a hedge plant, it is the best we have of a somewhat similar character, hardy in our coldest northern states. Plants of hemlock spruce which have had some shearing in the nursery make the best hedge plants.

For a low hedge there is nothing to beat Buxus sempervirens, dwarf box. This is a feature in thousands of European gardens and in many old colonial gardens in America. The plants can be kept quite low, or can be allowed to grow two to three feet or more in height. As an edging or border plant, the hedges should not be allowed to exceed six to eight inches in height. May is the best month to plant box, and those who already have hedges of this evergreen can readily increase their stock by simply pulling the plants to pieces, planting them lower than they previously were, watering well and pounding the soil firm. Clipping should be done soon after the young growths start, usually from the beginning to the end of May.

On Long Island many of us have seen some pretty naturally grown hedges of Azalea amoena. In the colder states this will not winter, unless well protected, but on Long Island and farther south it grows beautifully. The flowers are of a claret color and produced in thousands in June. The color closely resembles that of Firefly or Hexe, a popular Christmas azalea, which has some amoena blood in its veins. The foliage of A. amoena turns bronzy in late fall. I have found it to withstand 15 to 20 degrees below zero in New England when protected by other thick evergreens.

A plant generally used as a creeper to cover walls, rocks and fences and the best of all the reliably hardy evergreen climbers is Euonymus radicans. This also can be utilized for hedging purposes. Planted in the open, it assumes a more shrubby habit and one of the neatest hedges I ever saw was of this plant, not too closely trimmed. There is a variegated form, but it is far inferior to the green one. This euonymus is of easy propagation in summer. Any of the shoots of current season's growth, cut off, planted closely together in a cold-frame, shaded and kept well watered, will soon root and make nice plants to set out the following spring. Shoots cut from plants against walls will usually be found to have plenty of roots when cut off and these establish themselves quickly.

Retinospora plumosa, the green plume cedar, is often used as an evergreen hedge plant. It stands shearing well and has a nice, compact habit of growth. The golden variety, plumosa aurea, is particularly striking in winter, when its golden color comes out well.

Of course, there are many who would strenuously object to the "mutilating" of a number of the plants named for hedging purposes. In parkways and on large private estates there can be little use for any of them, but formal gardens are liked by many and on places of small area they are often a necessity. Without in any way desiring to ape the Italianesque style of gardening adopted in America, there are many places where trimmed evergreen hedges would be in perfectly good taste.

May and August are the ideal months for planting evergreens, but the work can be successfully done during any cool, cloudy spell in summer. The great essentials are to have good balls on the roots, keep them from drying and water well after planting.

ANOTHER PRESS SERVICE.

The Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association has inaugurated a press service and the first sheet mailed to editors throughout the state is strictly horticultural, "On Pruning Shrubbery." It goes out over the signature of A. P. Wyman, secretary, 17 East Van Buren street, Chicago, and is as follows:

"Sometimes the most simple matters urge one into unnecessary work, and pruning shrubbery is one of these.

"This last winter was unusually severe, and half hardy plants like the privet and weigela were killed back or killed to the ground, the roots remaining alive. The only thing to do is to cut back each branch to live wood, leaving no dead wood at all. The new growth will come out in surprising fashion this summer, and you will soon hardly realize your present loss.

"The vital part of the plant is the root rather than the stem, and if the root is sound, the stem may go. A large, ungainly shrub may often be made handsome by cutting it to the ground and allowing it to grow up again.

"Most shrubs not planted in hedge form are better in appearance if not pruned at all. With ordinary shrubs pruning should be the exception rather

Pink Climbing Rose—Dorothy Perkins

Without doubt the most valuable of all the new Climbing Roses of comparatively recent introduction. The beauty of the double pink flowers is admirably set off by the rich green foliage, which is free from the attacks of insects.

In addition to this charming kind, we have all the popular varieties in climbing and bush Roses. Our General Catalogue, which will be mailed on request, contains descriptions of all the best Roses—also than the rule. If in planting, there has been a loss of roots, the top should be cut back enough to balance them, but usually shrubs are hardy enough so that they are as well let alone. At other times there must be very good excuse for pruning. Cutting back spiræas or lilacs in winter or spring is only cutting off their flowers, without helping the plants much. Most of all, no shrub other than a hedge plant should be sheared round or flat. Nothing can equal in beauty the natural form."

CHERRY NOT FRUITING.

A customer has an Early Richmond cherry tree growing on his lawn. It is about 8 years old, a good grower, leaves out nicely and none of the branches ever winter-kill. Every spring it is just loaded with blossoms—a perfect bouquet—but it never yields as much as a tea-cupful of cherries in any one year. Please tell me what I can do that will assist the fruit to set. R. G.

The cherry tree would undoubtedly produce more fruit, if, instead of being in grass, it were cultivated around. Make a circle six to eight feet across and keep this stirred up. It will materially assist the tree. As a fertilizer, turn in any green crop like clover for nitrogen, and use a little muriate of potash and dissolve Carolina rock as the other elements of a complete fertilizer. Fruit trees almost without exception crop much better in cultivated than grass land. C.

MANCHESTER, MASS.—William Kiss, gardener at Mrs. W. Scott Fitz's estate, Smith's Point, will retire this month. His successor will be Joseph Rogers, of Pittsfield.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—It is stated that 200 Enchantress carnations belonging to L. W. Acheson, on Hamlin street, were recently stolen from the cellar where they had been stored, and the thief was found to be a rat, which had completed the robbery in five hours, carrying the flowers a distance of twenty-five feet and depositing them under a board walk. And one of the most remarkable facts is, that the rat showed great discrimination and æsthetic taste, or some other sort of taste, choosing the Enchantress blooms and rejecting the other varieties.

The Market.

Trade has been good in the cut flower line for the last two weeks or so, with stock of some kinds scarce.

Roses have been coming in rather slowly and the demand has been heavy, so that at no time has there been a surplus. Maids, Brides and Killarney are more in evidence than anything else. What few of other varieties are coming in cut but little figure. Carnations are not plentiful, as the cool weather has cut the supply down considerably and the demand has been heavy; so they are cleaned up daily. Sweet peas are coming in heavily and they find ready sale, especially since the bulk of bulbous stock is out of the way. There are still some lilies in the market, both Harrisii and callas, but the demand for them is light.

Pot plants have been selling well, especially ramblers, ferns and hydrangeas. There was quite a demand for geraniums and bedding plants during the warm weather we had a week or so ago and some even planted out their bedding plants, but found it necessary to take them all up again. Saturday night, April 23, the mercury went down to 30 degrees between 8 and 9 o'clock, and before morning it went down to 26 degrees, doing considerable damage. Even lilacs are all blackened.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's dance, April 22, proved to be an enjoyable affair and a good crowd was present.

Sherman Stephens reports trade a little quiet out his way during this blustering weather.

G. Drobisch says funeral work has been quite heavy and at times it has been hard to get enough stock to fill orders.

Messrs. Halbrooks, Miller and Thompson have incorporated under the name of the Columbus Floral Co. They have two houses, each 37x400 feet, all ready for the glass and report things moving nicely.

The Livingston Seed Co. says the seed trade dropped off suddenly when the cold snap set in, but that the trade in cut flowers is heavy.

The board of agriculture is contemplating quite a few improvements in the state fair grounds for the Centennial and will put a man there shortly to look after the work.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports a heavy business in rooted cuttings of mums and carnations and young rose plants. J. M.

STAATSBURG, N. Y.—Three large green-houses are being erected on the Dinsmore estate.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Chilly and cloudy weather is still the rule in this latitude, and there is not much doing in garden work. Plants are slow in growing and the market stands look as full at night as when they open up in the morning. Saturday, April 23, we had one of the worst rain, wind and hail storms we have had for a long time. Some little glass was broken, but only in certain sections of the city.

The cut flower business was moderately active last week. A great deal of hardy stock is coming into the market, but the lilacs have held full sway for the last ten days; it was considered that this year's crop was the largest in ten years; they could be had at 2 cents per bunch wholesale and good large ones at that.

Cut flowers are in heavy supply. Carnations are beginning to show the effects of hot weather and some are exceedingly poor and can be had in the street for 10 cents per dozen. Valley is arriving in fine shape and sells readily. Roses are plentiful, but are mildewed badly, which is caused by so much cloudy weather. Violets are practically over, and what can be had are a disgrace.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Bauer, of Govanstown, has been cutting some extra fine valley, which is eagerly sought after.

John R. Donn, one of our prominent growers, has offered his place for sale and intends to retire on account of ill health.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. has had an exceedingly busy spring, having had to put on an extra force to handle cannas and vegetable plants. Their cannas are the best they have had for a long time.

Halliday Bros. planted out over 40,000 carnation plants last week. Q.

GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Roy, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lubin, who recently opened a flower store here, died April 19, after an illness of only about twenty-four hours. The little victim, who was a bright, lovable lad, had been out playing the day before and went to bed Monday evening in apparent good health. He was restless at night, however, and had a fever in the morning. Medical attention was secured, but the little fellow grew worse. That night he was seized with convulsions and died at about eight o'clock. The case was diagnosed as cerebral spinal meningitis. The funeral was held Friday afternoon, April 22, with services at the home on Washington street.

NEW ORLEANS.

With the last days of April we are coming to the end of the spring rush for plants at the markets. As last winter was quite cold, we expected more business than developed, but it is hard to tell whether the competition between the florists, or a lack of desire on the part of the buying public, was responsible for the lack of trade. Cut flower prices have been low and stock sold slowly.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society met Thursday, April 21. A few peonies were exhibited by the Metairie Nursery Co. The blooms were good enough to demonstrate that this beautiful flower can grow in New Orleans, but they were far from being what they should be. A new rose, Chateau des Clos Vougeot, introduced from France by E. G. Hill, showed a nice deep red color, but must be grown more extensively to determine its real value as a greenhouse rose. The society endorsed highly the proposition to have New Orleans chosen for the site of the Panama exhibition, and, judging from what happened at the St. Louis fair, no other city in the Union can offer a better inducement as far as the horticultural display goes. M. M. L.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The greenhouses at 213 Helen street, formerly owned entirely by G. M. Phillips, are now conducted under the name of Phillips & Koehler.

BLACK SPECKS ON FOLIAGE.

Under separate cover I am sending you a calla, with a leaf, and also some other foliage, on all of which you will see numerous minute black specks, which appeared on everything in two houses recently fumigated with cyanide according to the regular formula. The gas injured some tender growth, but not seriously. We do not notice any especially bad results from the black specks, but we should like to know if the gas caused them, or if it is traceable to some other cause, of which we are ignorant. If it is any evidence of mismanagement, we should like to know it; or, if it is of no consequence, we should feel relieved to know it. My foreman, a man of long experience, says it is new to him.

The houses were run on the dry side for a day, preparatory to using the gas in the evening, and was freely syringed the following morning. On the morning of the second day after, as I was making the round of the houses, I called my foreman's attention to it and he thought it might be due to a free use of animal manure on the callas, but when we went into the plant house and found it on fuchsias, salvias, gladioli, smilax, ferns and everything else, I felt convinced the gas had something to do with it. I had a small batch of antirrhinums in one of the carnation houses and these were badly burned, but there were none of the black specks either on them or on anything else in that room; so we are puzzled again.

If you can give us any light on the subject we shall greatly appreciate it.
R. S. E.

We do not think the cyaniding had anything to do with the small black specks, resembling thrips marks. A more probable cause was the use of strong animal manure in the houses, the specks being caused by small insects attracted by the manurial odors. These specks brush off readily, do not in any way injure the flowers or foliage, except in so far as they spot them, and are commonly seen after manure, either as top-dressing or in liquid form, has been freely applied.

Cyaniding should be done with a temperature below 60 degrees, if possible. The higher the temperature, the greater are the dangers of injury. You seem to have used the gas correctly and your damage has been comparatively trifling. There is no plant more easily injured than antirrhinums. The tops of the shoots will droop after quite a mild fumigation with gas. Even adiantum, mignonette, freesia and schizanthus, all susceptible to damage from even nicotine fumigation, will withstand heavier gas fumigation than antirrhinums. We always like to ventilate freely before the sun has a chance to strike the plants after using gas, and to give them a good spraying over with the hose. C. W.

Greenhouse Heating.

THIS is the time to plan the changes to be made in your heating apparatus for next season. Figure it out now, before the fires go out; then you will be ready to go ahead during the summer. THE REVIEW will be glad to answer in this column all inquiries regarding heating. Give all the details of your problem and sign full name and address, though the latter will not be used.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We would like to know the heating capacity of a tubular boiler twelve feet long and forty-two inches in diameter, with thirty-six 3½-inch flues and a grate 48x48. Will such a boiler, properly fired, heat economically 18,000 feet of glass to the ordinary temperatures for general greenhouse needs, in the latitude of St. Louis?
 C. H. W.

Your boiler would be rated at about thirty horse-power and should be able to carry about 3,500 square feet of radiation under ordinary greenhouse conditions in your climate.
 F. R.

YOKING BOILERS.

We added another boiler to our regular one, but have not been able to yoke the two together in such a way as to get good service from them, as one boiler forces its water into the other. Can you offer any suggestions as to what will remove the trouble?
 C. L.

This is evidently a case of one boiler heating much more rapidly than the other. We judge, from what you say, that these are steam boilers, although there is no statement to that effect. If steam boilers are in question, a good way will be to yoke the flow pipes together and to connect both with a common water leg into which all returns empty. The water leg should then be connected with each boiler by an independent connection in which a gate valve and a swing check valve are placed, so as to shut the boiler off entirely when not in use and to prevent the water from leaving the boiler when the two are not steaming alike.
 F. R.

STEAM FOR RANGE.

I have seven parallel houses, partitioned. Six houses are each 27x100, four for carnations and two for roses. The other house is 10x100. The location is the latitude of Indianapolis. The large houses each have four 5-foot benches, with three 1½-inch flows overhead, eight 1¼-inch returns, and one 1½-inch return, with valves on each one. Is this sufficient?
 H. O.

In heating this range of houses with steam, I would suggest the use of nine lines of 1¼-inch pipe in the 10-foot house, for a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees. Twenty-two lines of 1¼-inch

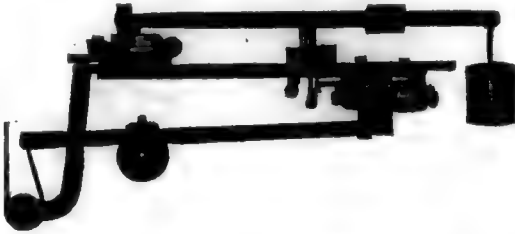

Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?INSTALL*A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Are not facts like these worth an investigation?

pipe will be needed in each of the 27-foot houses to be used as rose houses, in which a temperature of from 65 to 70 degrees will be required. In the 27-foot houses to be used for carnations, the installation of fourteen 1¼-inch pipes will be sufficient. A 2-inch main flow will be sufficient for the 10-foot house; a 3-inch main should be used for each of the rose houses and a 2½-inch main in the others, in each case to be carried under the gable.

The meeting was opened by an address of welcome by Mayor O. B. Smith, after which there were short speeches by different members of the association. At one o'clock the visitors adjourned to the American restaurant, where they partook of an excellent lunch, as guests of J. H. Shelton and W. S. Kircher. Then the informal meeting was continued at the club rooms.

Among other matters of importance considered was the adoption of articles of incorporation, at the suggestion of Judge Conner, of Wabash, in order that the organization may have legal standing. The incorporation will be effected at the next meeting place, to be announced later. Resolutions were passed on the demise of Mrs. Conner, the late florist, of Wabash.

Visits to the local greenhouses were made by the visitors, who expressed themselves as delighted with the work accomplished by Rochester florists.

A trip to the lake and various points of interest had been planned by Messrs. Shelton and Kircher, but by request of the assembled florists the plan was abandoned, in order to give each one better opportunity for interchange of ideas.

Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, exhibited a new variety of tuberous-rooted begonia, with large scarlet, single blossoms. It was developed by Mr. Haugh and is regarded as a pleasing and wonderful variety.

On the whole, in spite of the fact that the meeting was not as largely attended as was anticipated, it was a pleasant and profitable time for all concerned.

From Another Correspondent.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Northern Indiana Florists' Association was held in the Commercial Club rooms, of this city, on Wednesday, April 20. The meeting was well attended and was full of interest from start to finish. Mayor O. B. Smith gave the address of welcome, and the reply was made by President W. W. Dederick.

The two sessions were broken by a fine dinner, due to the hospitality of the local florists, Messrs. Shelton and Kircher. After the afternoon meeting, visits were made to the greenhouses of these two gentlemen and all were gratified to see that two such large and well stocked ranges could be supported by so small a city as Rochester. After a vote of thanks had been tendered to these gentlemen for their entertainment, the association adjourned, to meet at Winona, Ind., July 3.

Among those present were the following members: W. W. Dederick, president, Warsaw; Harry White, vice-president, North Manchester; J. H. Shelton, secretary-treasurer, Rochester; A. J. Wagoner and D. Before adjournment, resolutions of regret were offered on account of the death of one of the members, Mrs. J. D. Conner, of Wabash.

The Northern Indiana Association is a growing one and promises to be of much benefit to its membership.

EVANSVILLE.

The Market.

Business has been variable for some time. At times there is a big rush, then nothing of much consequence for several days. Cut flowers, especially roses and carnations, are poor, showing the effects of the warm weather in March and the cold weather this month.

It is seldom that we have snow in April, but we are getting it now. Sunday morning, April 24, we had about four inches of snow, with a temperature of 33 degrees. Some of the growers have their carnations in the field, which will be more or less set back by the cold weather. Outdoor roses are almost ready to bloom and the buds will probably be injured considerably.

Julius Niednagel & Sons have their carnations in the field and they have been worrying considerably over the weather conditions, but are hoping that no serious damage will result. Their roses are looking well, but are a little off crop. They are cutting some excellent carnations. They have several benches of smilax that are looking fine. Mr. Murphy and Frank Woelz, growers here, have been confined to their homes by sickness for about a week.

Geo. Blackman was kept home for a few days by sickness.

Henry Seymour has been cutting a large number of carnations, but there is not much demand for them.

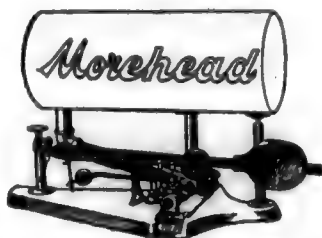

Nellie Goodge has a fine lot of plants for the spring trade. Her carnations are in good condition.

J. C. Elspemann has had considerable funeral work of late and has used lots of flowers.

Royston & Fenton are selling off their old rose plants and will soon be ready to plant the young stock. They have only a few My Maryland, but the flowers being cut are fine and away ahead of the Maids.

E. L. F.

KENNEBUNK, ME.—Jackson O. Elwell, who has been in business here for the last twelve years, has found it necessary during that time to build several additions to his greenhouses, but his stock is still too small for the demand. Mr. Elwell was born in Lyman, in York county, and came to Kennebunk more than twenty years ago. His chief assistant is W. P. Gaw, an expert florist from Scotland.

The Market.

The month of April is living up to its reputation. We have had much dark, rainy weather of late, causing a scarcity of stock. The temperature has also been quite cool, and has resulted in much sickness. A heavy run of funeral work is continually creating a demand which at times is hard to meet.

The market would be badly crippled for pink roses, were it not for a heavy crop of best quality La Detroit.

Bulbous stock is hanging on well, which helps out considerably. The first lot of peonies arrived Sunday, April 24, at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Iris and miniature gladioli are selling well for the numerous social affairs. Some of the florists are still fortunate enough to have some good pots of tulips, azaleas, etc., that are selling readily.

Various Notes.

For some time it was thought that John Breitmeyer's Sons would give up their Mack avenue greenhouses, in this city, a manufacturing plant having had an option on the property. It has now been decided to continue running these greenhouses for a few years at least. The oldest houses, built of hotbed sash, will be torn down to make way for modern houses.

Charles Plumb and Michael Bloy went to Chicago Friday evening, April 22.

What is considered the largest sale of laurel trees ever made in this city was closed by B. Schroeter last week for one of Detroit's finest roof gardens.

The call for hanging baskets is taxing the William Hielscher Wire Works. Many thousands are being made to supply the demand from the various points of the compass.

William Berridge, the well known representative of the Kenneth Anderson Manufacturing Co., after suffering a serious attack of pleuro-pneumonia, is now rapidly regaining his strength. He left last week for the western part of Michigan, to stay on a farm until entirely well.

W. B. Brown is repairing and painting his establishment. Business is booming in that end of the city.

James Carey, of Mount Clemens, will shortly put up two new houses.

Jerry K. Stock has been fortunate enough to be able to help supply a big demand for Boston ferns. The call for this popular plant is continuous.

Charles Hufford, who conducts a flower stand in the Standard Drug Store, is doing a flourishing business. H. S.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—A. Pagenkopf, of the firm of Pagenkopf Bros., at 1486 Seventeenth street, was unable to attend to business for some time on account of illness, but he has now recovered.

Campbell's Patent Sulphur Vaporizer

Best remedy extant for destroying Rose, Vine, Carnation and all other mildews and diseases of plants in greenhouses; also kills Red Spider.

Extract from paper read by John H. Dunlop before a convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association: "Campbell's Sulphur Vaporizer is an English patent and a trifle expensive, but very effective, and eliminates almost all of the danger of ignition. We are using eight of them at present with excellent results."

ST. PAUL.

The Freezing.

Veni, vedi, vici! I came, I saw, I conquered! This was the song of Jack Frost as he rode on a hurricane gale across the northwest on Friday and Saturday of last week. But the damage to floricultural interests in this vicinity was not great. A few early peonies and some late tulips were ruined, but no bedding work has been done, though there were many demands for it in the heat preceding the cold. March and April have been the driest on record, with less than a quarter inch of moisture since March 1.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held in Pillsbury hall at the State University Tuesday evening, April 19. The report of the flower show committee was presented and the premium list was printed and ready for mailing. It contains some good offers and as the expenses and premiums are backed up by a guarantee fund of $15,000 raised by the Minneapolis florists and Commercial Club, a successful show is assured. All intending exhibitors should communicate at once with J. P. Jorgenson, secretary, 3500 Portland avenue, Minneapolis.

Prof. Clemans, of the State University, gave an interesting talk on landscape work, with especial reference to the work at the university grounds. There were no exhibits and after a discussion of the paper by several present the association adjourned to meet in May.

The executive committee met with the State Fair directors and was assured of a liberal increase in premiums and an increase of space at this year's fair.

Various Notes.

Work on Holm & Olson's new range is progressing finely and glazing will soon begin. This additional range will contain about 18,000 square feet of glass and will be devoted principally to mums, Easter and bedding stock.

The grand opera season the last half of the week created some demand for orchids, gardenias, sweet peas, valley, etc.

Spring weddings have been coming along with clocklike regularity and funeral work has been brisk.

Otto Will, formerly of Will Bros. Co., Minneapolis, whose health was greatly improved in California, is reported on the way to recovery. His many friends in the trade will be gratified to learn this cheerful news.

Holm & Olson had the decorations for the opening of the new Hotel St. Paul, using 6,000 American Beauties, aspara-

HOSE UNDER GLASS

"Electric" Hose is perfectly adapted to the hard, constant service required in a greenhouse.

Increase in our sales to florists during the last few years has been enormous.

"Once a customer, always a customer," has come to be the rule.

The hose is made of alternate tubes of pure rubber and jackets of braided seine twine. The tubes and jackets are vulcanized by tremendous pressure into a unified fabric.

This process of manufacture is protected by basic patents.

It produces a hose that will outwear, three to one, a hose of ordinary, "lapwelded" construction.

It will be economy in every way for you to use "Electric."

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Bleak and desolate, a cold wave struck us and blighted almost everything in blossom. A week or two ago the first hard frost touched the leaves and blossoms, but the hardest frost arrived April 22 and caused a great deal of damage—just how much will not be known until the warmer weather comes again.

Bulb stock is flooding the market, but carnations, roses and lilies are scarce. Outdoor work on hardy stock is in full sway, and business appears to be good in that line, as the nurserymen seem satisfied. Bedding stock is advancing, and though there may be a shortage, if the usual demand exists, still every greenhouse is showing a good supply and good stock.

Various Notes.

April 19, the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Association took place in the Pillsbury building, at the university, where Prof. F. C. Clemens gave an illustrated lecture on landscape gardening. The meeting was well attended, and the lecture was enjoyed and found highly profitable. The fair grounds committee was to meet at the state fair grounds, to arrange for better space and accommodations next September. The premiums for the state fair exhibitions have been tripled and this will be an incentive toward a fine display.

S. M. Robinson, of Vine Hill, Excelsior, has thrown his thirty-five acres into nursery and greenhouse stock, with William Gray as manager. M. E. M.

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

FLORIST.....

DON'T KILL THE GOOSE

That Lays the Golden Egg.

Mothers' day has taken hold as never before.

Rapid as was the development of the interest in preceding years, the broadening of the general observance this season promises to far eclipse what has gone before. The governors of a dozen states have issued proclamations, mayors innumerable have done the same, churches, societies and individuals all over the country have taken it up and Mothers' day seems already firmly established as a national institution.

It is confronted by just one grave danger.

In too many instances emphasis has been put upon the designation of the white carnation as the flower of the day.

We must get away from that.

It is a manifest impossibility to supply white carnations for everyone any one day in the year.

We have just taken a census. It will show this country has 90,000,000 people. Suppose one in five wants white carnations May 8, just one flower to a person. That would be 18,000,000 white carnations.

Where are they to come from?

They simply can't be had.

Naturally, the extra demand for white causes a sharp advance in price. A few days before Mothers' day it looked as though the price of white carnations would be limited only by what the buyers will pay.

That isn't right.

To make the day the big thing that is possible, prices must be kept reasonable. There must be no extortion from the public.

Up to the Retailers.

This part of the proposition is up to the retailers.

The retailers must turn the demand to other flowers than white.

The commission man is helpless. He is always between the devil and the deep sea. Growers are not sentimental. They insist on getting all the money the stock will bring. If a wholesaler sells his stock below what other wholesalers get, he promptly loses his growers. Concerted action to keep prices down is impossible; competition is too keen.

The only course is for the retailers to turn the demand into general channels:

A white flower for mother's memory.

A bright flower for mothers living.

It isn't easy to turn the tide of popular demand, but since you can't sell everyone white carnations, there not being white carnations enough to go around, you have got to sell them something else.

"A bright flower for mothers living."

Have several large cards painted, for your window and store, and do your part to make possible a flower day that will rank with Christmas, Easter and Memorial day.

A LAUREL WREATH.

The accompanying illustration shows a characteristic laurel wreath as made by Philip L. Carbone, Boston. The emblem of victory usually is made other side up—to lie, or recline, with the bunch of flowers at the base, but Mr. Carbone's to wear on their heads. Cypripediums are the only flowers used in the cluster at the top of the wreath illustrated, the green being fronds of Boston fern, Sprengeri and plumosus.

BRIDES' BOUQUET PICTURES.

Florists, unless perhaps it is the lady florists, are not included in large numbers among the readers of that estimable publication, the Ladies' Home Journal, but not a few of its million copies of the May edition have found their way into the hands of the retailers because of the full page given to illustrations of brides' bouquets. The inscription is "Photographs by R. Irving Gresham," and if truth be said, a good many florists who admired the bouquets took it for granted idea is to show off the wreath to better advantage by hanging it on a standard, like those the millinery stores use to display the flower gardens it pleases women that Mr. Gresham was the man who pushed the button, instead of the one who built the bunches. He is, in fact, manager of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., one of the best known retail florist concerns in the south. The bouquets illustrated are Mr. Gresham's work. It is related that Mr. Gresham decided to get out a booklet for the purpose of showing the possibilities of the Dahl establishment in the matter of wedding work. He made up a number of bunches and had them photographed in Atlanta. The photographs were sent to Philadelphia to have halftones made and one of the Ladies' Home Journal people chanced to see the pictures in the engraving house, where he also was having work done. The publication asked to have the opportunity of reproducing the pictures, but declined to use the name of the Dahl Co., consenting, however, to publish Mr. Gresham's name with the pictures.

That these excellent bouquets should be brought so prominently to the attention of the public is, of course, a compliment to the Dahl Co. and Mr. Gresham, but it also is of importance to the whole trade. Many a bride outside of Atlanta this spring will point to Mr. Gresham's work and say, "I want one like that." Also, the more people see of first-class work the better their taste will be, and the higher their requirements.

AT MARKET RATES.

It probably still is the practice of nine-tenths of the florists to charge practically the same prices week after week, but in the larger cities, and to a certain extent in the smaller towns, those florists who follow the principle of small profits and large sales are turning toward the practice of regulating their retail prices by the wholesale values of the stock they offer. In line with this is the advertisement of A. Lange, Chicago, which appears in the leading morning daily. There are many arguments in favor of estab-

THE CROSS.

In the larger cities leading florists make few of the more common designs such as are made up on wire frames. The stores that cater to the fine trade make sprays, instead of pillows; or they make wreaths. In smaller places the reverse is the case and more pillows are called for than anything else. Next to the pillow, possibly the most popular design is the cross, it being capable of a great variety of treatments. It may be made with almost any flowers in season, affording the florist an opportunity to use up the stock on hand and obviating the necessity for buying material specially for the design. It may be simple or elaborate, according to the sum the customer is willing to pay. The accompanying illustration shows a somewhat elaborated cross made by W. F. Snyder, Hopkinsville, Ky. The garland of roses and the dove perched on the top of the cross made the piece distinctive.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

There are two classes of advertisers to the general public, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser (English), the constant advertiser, and the spasmodic advertiser. It's only the former who invests his money; the other largely wastes it, and would almost as well not advertise at all. It is the continuous drop of water that wears away the stone.

How to advertise is, of course, an individual matter, but plain common-sense talk is the best kind. You must be sensible to attract sensible people. No boast, but business-pulling truths. Be courteous. Remember that a request is tenfold more powerful than a command. Do not talk price, talk quality.

Select the paper which circulates among the majority of your class of customers and stick to it, changing your matter the words of Roosevelt, "Tell the unpleasant truth rather than a convenient lie."

And lastly, do not give long credit. It is a curse to any business and quite unnecessary in ours. A lady with a long bill up against her will fight shy of your shop for months, perhaps for ever.

CUT FLOWERS TO CANADA.

The cut flowers exported by the United States practically all go to Canada. How small this trade is may be shown by the figures of the U. S. Treasury Department, which gives the value of the cut flower exports for the last five years as follows:

1909.....	$4,338
1908.....	1,784
1907.....	2,579
1906.....	3,496
1905.....	4,522

THE BIG HOUSE.

Interest in the big greenhouse of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, ran high in the summer of 1907, when the convention was at Philadelphia. Many of the members from all over the country went out over the Reading railroad to see the house. Some admired and some criticised, according to their temperaments, but all wondered. Since then, in a short space of a little less than three years, the Florex Gardens have increased enormously. The additions are well known to REVIEW readers; they have been chronicled from time to time in this column. The last addition, the greatest of all, was made last fall and is now in full swing; it is 172x700. It is an easy matter to give the figures, but an extremely difficult one to convey an idea of the house.

It is simply vast. I have been in the range of Poehlmann Bros., at Morton Grove, Ill.; I have been in the range of Peter Reinberg, in the suburbs of Chicago; I have walked through the 1,000-foot house of the Waban Rose Conservatories, at Natick, Mass., and through the 1,360-foot house of William H. Elliott, at Madbury, N. H.; yet in none of these places have I experienced the feeling of the immensity of the space covered by glass that I have in the new house of the Florex Gardens at North Wales. The reason is simple. At Poehlmann's and at Reinberg's the houses are of moderate length in ranges; the ridges and furrows that break the view from the corridor house detract from the impression of size. At Montgomery's Waban Rose Conservatories and at Elliott's the impression of length is almost boundless, but that of height and width is circumscribed. In the Florex Gardens length, width and height are in such proportion as to increase the impression of size. You stand in the middle of that house and feel your utter insignificance. You also feel a growing admiration for the mind whose ability conceived and whose courage carried into execution this step in advance of the times.

The new house of the Florex Gardens is larger and better constructed than the house erected in the summer of 1907. It is not necessary here to go into the various structural improvements, beyond saying that experience has shown the weaknesses in the earlier house and brains have suggested improvements.

The house is entirely filled with tomatoes. I never saw so many growing tomatoes at once. They were all planted in the field, so to speak, there being no beds or benches—simply a row omitted for the paths, which are depressed by the constant tread of feet. The vines are supported by long cords, as in smilax. Part

Flower Values

Inasmuch as flowers fluctuate daily in quantity of stock and price we are constantly in the position to quote reliable prices.

Complete facilities enable us to place fine flowers, correctly put up and carefully delivered within a radius of 1,500 miles, at remarkably reasonable prices.

We are filling orders for flowers aboard steamships. Every day a fresh bouquet during the entire voyage. An entirely new and original conception thoroughly tested and found entirely satisfactory.

Retail Cut Flower Prices Governed by Market Changes.

lishing a reasonable retail price and maintaining it unchanged throughout the season, but Mr. Lange believes a large part of his success, and no one questions that he moves great quantities of stock, has been built upon giving his customers the advantage whenever low prices are to be had in wholesale markets.

frequently from plants to flowers, etc. Every advertisement should be a piece of salesmanship, and that with a direct purpose.

The personal study of the peculiarities of each customer is your shopman's business. Never encourage your florist to sell stale plants or flowers as fresh ones. In of the crop is from the October planting, while part was planted in March. The former has quite a lot of fruit, some nearly ripe, some partly ripe, and picking is done daily; the latter is just setting the fruit for the first crop. Whether the house will remain in tomatoes for another season or will be used for Beauties, as at first planned, is still undecided.

The mammoth house of 1907 is planted in Beauties; the next range of four houses, smaller in size, is in carnations, while a new stock house, 32x100, built last winter, is used for young carnations in pots, soon to be planted in the field. The corridor house, connecting the handsome offices and cooling room with the mammoth houses, is filled with tomatoes in pots for planting outside.

The proximity of the establishment of the Florex Gardens to the Philadelphia & Reading railroad station at North Wales is of never-ending value as a labor saver. Every box of flowers, every car of coal, costs a little less in taking to or bringing from the station than almost anywhere else.

PLANTS FOR CARPET BEDDING.

I should like to do some carpet bedding, such as placing a name in a border twenty-four feet long and three feet wide. There are fourteen letters in the name which I should like to write. Any advice as to height, color and quantity of plants and the varieties to use in filling such a border will be much appreciated.

R. P.

The most suitable plants for carpet bedding, being of rapid growth, so that they speedily cover the space in which they are planted, are alternantheras. We would suggest that you use a groundwork of either A. brilliantissima, red, or A. nana, yellow. If you use the one color for the groundwork, utilize the other for the lettering. We would prefer to use the two varieties, rather than plant a larger assortment. If you want a bordering of some different material, Alyssum Little Gem would be suitable if your groundwork were red alternantheras.

Plant the alternantheras four inches apart each way. They need not exceed six inches in height if trimmed when necessary. The alyssum grows about four inches high and flowers all summer. The soil in the bed should be rich. The variety used for lettering should be allowed to grow higher than the groundwork. The letters need not exceed six inches in width at any part. The bed, to plant it properly, should have 600 alternantheras from pots or flats, and 200 alyssums in addition for an edging, or 800 alternantheras if used alone.

ANNUALS FOR WINTER BLOOMS.

[A paper by William Swan, of Manchester, Mass., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, April 28, 1910.]

Among the best annuals for cut flowers in winter are larkspurs and lupines. We sow these the first week in August for cutting in February and March. A later batch is sown in September, to follow chrysanthemums. These flower from the end of March until May. Of the larkspurs we like the rosy scarlet the best. It flowers ten days ahead of the blue and white varieties. These are sown in flats of light soil and, as soon as they can be handled, are put in 2½-inch pots. They must be planted before getting pot-bound. If, perchance, the benches are not ready, we shift into 4-inch pots.

The Cross.

We mix some bone and sheep manure in an old chrysanthemum soil and plant the larkspurs eight inches apart each way. When the plants have branched we pinch out the central spike, as it would bloom ten days before the side shoots and its short stem would make it worthless.

Lupines are given the same treatment as larkspurs, except that they are sown in 3-inch pots, thinned to three plants in each, and no pinching is done. L. mutabilis is the variety mostly grown, but Hartwegii is much the best. Its long spikes of pure white and light blue flowers can be cut close to the ground, and, if red spider is kept off, a second crop will be ready in a month.

Leptosyne maritima is another desirable annual. Seed sown in September will flower at Christmas and continue through the winter. We find these do better in 8-inch pots than when planted out. They will keep a week in water when cut.

Antirrhinums are handled by some as annuals. Ours are grown from cuttings taken from plants which have been carried over winter in a cool house, and not allowed to flower. These are planted outdoors the first week in May. An early batch of cuttings is taken in June, to flower in January and February. More cuttings are taken in August, to follow chrysanthemums. These are potted as soon as rooted. The earliest batch is planted out and lifted and benched in August. The later ones are put in flats and kept in frames until chrysanthemums are gone. We plant them ten inches apart for fine spikes, leaving three to four shoots to a plant. These are kept disbudded and, when they are eighteen inches high, manure water is given every two weeks.

Schizanthus Wisetonensis is a fine plant for winter flowering. These are mostly seen in pots, but anyone planting them out and giving them the same culture as stocks will be more than satisfied with them.

Centaurea cyanus flowers freely if red spider is kept off it. We sow these in boxes seven inches deep, two rows to a box, and keep them outdoors as long as possible.

We grow each year a small batch of Nemesia strumosa Suttoni and Nigella Miss Jekyll. These may be of little value to the florist, but to the private grower, who is looking for something in early spring when his employers are tiring of the flowers they have had all winter, they prove useful.

There are probably other desirable annuals suitable for winter flowering under glass, if they were only given a trial. We find a carnation temperature suitable for all the annuals named.

ROSES PAST AND PRESENT.

[A paper by Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia May 8, 1910.]

My first lessons with the rose came when with the Parsons nurseries on Long Island, where I very well remember helping to sell some hybrid perpetuals at $1 a plant. It was about then that Parsons set out to emulate the European growers, importing a man for the purpose and laying out five acres in fine style, and costing them no less than $10,000.

One old rose then in use was Baronne Prevost. Up to that time roses had been grown on root grafts. Parsons' were using William's Evergreen for that purpose. Own root roses were not grown to any extent until 1860 to 1865 and from 1865 to 1870 marked the introduction of many excellent hybrid perpetuals still in existence, and then as always the breeders seemed to follow the line of demand in the class of roses they worked upon.

Work of the Breeders.

Eugene Verdier, of Paris, was the foremost breeder of the day, often introducing as many as twenty-five new varieties a year.

It is now the hybrid teas that are being annually introduced in large numbers; i. e., more hybrid teas than all other classes combined, and we have some excellent ones in La Tosca and Wellesley. Mme. Eugene Marlitt is an excellent and most vigorous grower.

Baltimore Belle, Prairie Queen and Russell's Cottage were prominent climbers during my first years in the business, but this class has been wonderfully improved with the addition of the Rambler and the hybrids of Wichuraiana. Famous in the work of hybridizing these are such men as Dawson, Manda, Van Fleet, Walsh and others. Prominent among the kinds they have given us and valuable for our use today are Lady Gay, Farquhar, May Queen, Ruby Queen, Dorothy Perkins, Minnehaha, and others. This galaxy was led by the Crimson Rambler, first introduced by Turner through the Kew Gardens.

We must not overlook the single roses, because for the last ten years they have grown to be much more popular. The most popular single climber is the American Pillar, originated by Dr. Van Fleet and introduced by Conard & Jones Co. Its introduction into England by Cannell & Sons marked its first real recognition. Brilliant carmine with white eye, a most vigorous grower and entirely hardy. Such roses as this are being used by men on large estates for embankments.

Classes that are Neglected.

Classes of roses that are being sadly neglected by hybridizers today are the Bourbon and China, such as Souvenir de Malmaison and Agrippina, which are fine. I believe that in this class there is likely to be some good work done in the future among rose breeders.

Another class worthy of note is the Scotch briers, Harrison's Yellow, Persian Yellow, Austrian Brier and others, but of these Harrison's is best, easily growing five to six feet high and as thick through. I like Stanwell's Perpetual very much, with its fragrant foliage and fine little flowers.

The landscaper's rose for shrub and hedge use is Rosa rugosa. Conrad Ferdinand Meyer is a good one, also Sir Thomas Lipton, New Century and Rosa rugosa magnifica. For use in a cold climate these are especially suited.

In the breeder's work, imagination plays an important part. It helps him to see what he is striving for, and if such aim is conscientiously followed the result is almost sure to come out right.

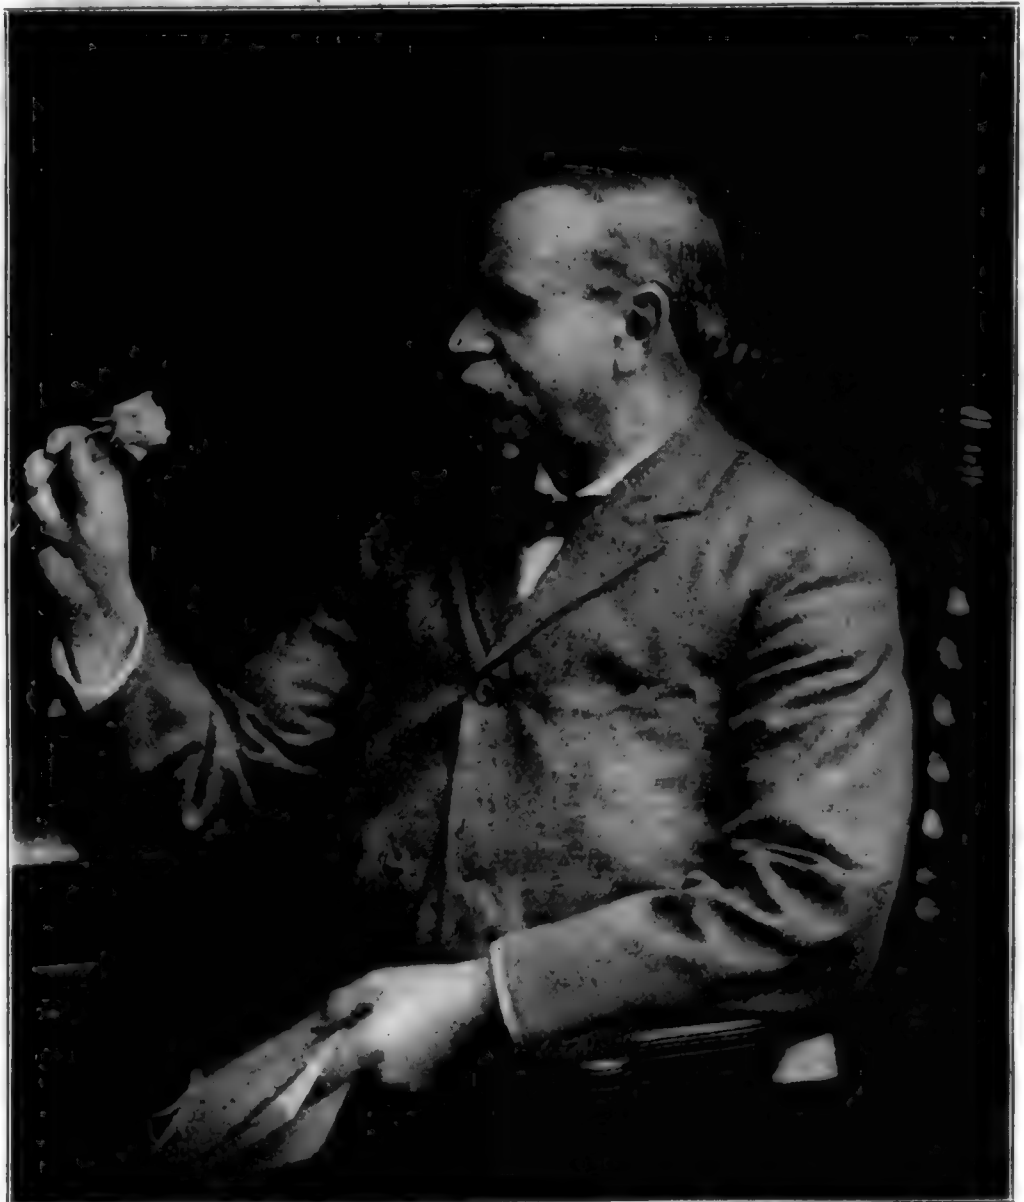

The Grandest Work of All.

Of course we must have money; we cannot work without it, for we must have our three daily meals and dress. But among rose growers, a grand work is being done in this world, because they love their work, and their work will benefit the world. Dr. Van Fleet is a man of this type and I am glad there is now a good rose named for him, because he is one of God's noblemen. We want more such work and those of us who bring ourselves to do some such good work, and to leave the world better for that work, will achieve as much human happiness as any.

The rose-growing industry is still in its infancy. Where we grow one rose our children's children will grow a thousand. When the first 40,000 roses were produced people asked "Where will you sell them?" but even now 40,000 is a mere drop.

Has the rose a future? Where is the man who will say "No"? Isn't it grand to help beautify the world? Isn't it better for us thus to devote ourselves to work of peace, and indeed, dear friends, what will do more to promote peace than just such work as we are doing?

Let me close by quoting Dean Hole: "He who would have fine roses in his garden must first have fine roses in his heart."

Antoine Wintzer.

TRAINED ROSES.

Eccentricity in gardening is to be avoided, but a feature, now and then, out of the ordinary will serve to attract favorable comment. The rose will lend itself readily to such work.

The variety illustrated, Mrs. F. W. Flight, is a free-flowering garden rose, of the multiflora type. It can be grown in any form, and is suitable for every purpose for which climbing roses are employed. The flowers are semi-double, of large size, and are borne in huge corymbs of from twenty to thirty blooms each. The color is bright pink, paling to white in the center, and the individual flowers retain their beauty for a month, withstanding the effects of sun and rain with no apparent loss in color, and showing no evidence of decay until the last. The standard shown was budded in Walmsgate Gardens, Louth, Lincolnshire, England, where Thomas Smith is gardener, in July, 1905, and planted in its present position in January, 1907. The picture was made in 1909. The bed beneath the rose is of Viola William Neil.

Among climbing polyantha roses are many varieties of surpassing beauty; in most cases the growth is vigorous, so that the weeping habit may be most rapidly developed if assistance is given by tying the shoots down to a skeleton framework in the first instance. These artificial supports will be completely hidden when the specimens have made two years' growth.

FUMIGATION FOR SWEET PEAS.

Kindly inform us if there is anything that can be used to fumigate where sweet peas are grown. We grow sweet peas and carnations in the same house, but understand that tobacco smoke is injurious to the sweet peas. The lice are hard to keep down by spraying, or, in other words, it is hard work to keep the plants sprayed enough to get rid of the lice.

W. C. F. C.

While tobacco stems are liable to burn sweet pea stems, as well as take the color from the flowers, there are other preparations which will rid them of aphids. The nicotine papers are excellent. You can use any of these with perfect safety and they leave no disagreeable odor behind them, as do the stems. Spraying, if thoroughly done, with any of the many nicotine extracts on the market, is efficacious. It should be done once a week to keep the plants clean. Many large growers now never fumigate, depending entirely on spraying, using a force pump and fine spray nozzle for this purpose.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

My outdoor sweet peas for the last two years have bloomed beautifully for a few days; then I notice the flower stem below the blossom seems to wither away, allowing the flower to droop away unopened. Commencing with just a few peas, this disease spreads rapidly and in a short while all my peas are gone. The pea ground is located on a sunny, fertile spot and the peas have had every attention. Can you tell me what the trouble is?

L. M. W.

Early sowing, frequent cultivation, thinning seedlings where they have come up too thickly, a summer mulch of old manure, straw or marsh hay, and change of soil each year are a few essentials of successful sweet pea culture. Hilling up the plants, as often advocated, does more harm than good. A well manured soil, deeply plowed, a sunny location, plenty of water if it can be afforded, and a removal of all seed pods are all necessary. Are you using the same soil each year? If so, change it; others have had this same trouble and the cause is usually the same—planting on one piece of ground year after year. If you will change your ground, keep it well mulched and afford the necessary moisture at the roots, we do not see why you cannot grow first-class sweet peas outdoors.

C.

SUPPORTS FOR SWEET PEAS.

What can I use instead of sticks for sweet peas? I had to cut 1,500 sticks this year. Can I use netting stretched on posts?

E. W. P.

Sticks, or brush, as they are commonly called, make the simplest and best of all supports for outdoor sweet peas. However, where brush is expensive or difficult to obtain, wire netting of a coarse mesh, fastened to stout posts, may be used. You will require netting six feet in height and the two end posts of each row should be stout and well braced. No matter how carefully you fasten the wire, there will be a certain amount of bulge to it. Many people support their sweet peas in this way. There is, however, always a temptation to use the same fence each year when once it is in place, and this flower succeeds much better when given a fresh piece of ground each year.

MAGGOTS IN COW MANURE.

I mulched my benches with cow manure one month ago. The manure was about eight months old. It is now one mass of maggots. What can they be and how can I exterminate them?

B. J. P.

The maggots are probably larvæ of the May beetle, which are often found in cow manure if it is used in too fresh a state. Give the beds a good dusting of lime and soot. Should they attack the roots of the plants, use carbon bisulphide, pouring a little in holes twenty-four inches apart each way. This will suffocate them, especially if the soil is damp.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Show Pelargoniums.

Show pelargoniums are now in fine condition and, with proper care, should remain so for a number of weeks. While not adapted for outdoor culture, nor persistent bloomers like those of the zonal section, the large, many colored flowers are attractive on these pelargoniums, and it is not surprising that exclamations of delight arise from visitors who see a good batch of them for the first time. By keeping the plants cool, the glass shaded and the atmosphere not too moist, the plants will be in good shape for Memorial day, at which time they sell well. Show pelargoniums make good house plants if given a cool room. In a close, stuffy apartment they will soon drop the flowers and become smothered with green aphids. For window boxes, which are pretty well broken from the sun, they are quite desirable, a solid box of one variety being effective.

Carefully avoid any syringing over the plants while they are in flower, or the petals will spot badly. Also, in fumigating avoid the use of tobacco stems. One dose of the latter will cause every petal to fall. Water freely and use liquid manure every fourth day. At this time no propagating of show pelargoniums should be done. The proper date is later in the season, when the flowering period has passed and the plants are ready for a rest prior to being cut back.

Asters.

The early asters can now be safely planted outdoors. The ground previously should have been kept well harrowed. Constant stirring of the surface kills many weeds, as well as insect pests. In grass and the cutworms often cause great trouble, and the free use of the cultivator is one of the best ways of lessening their numbers. There is still ample time to make sowings of asters for late crops. These will now do well outdoors. Seedlings raised in the open are less spindly and more likely to give good returns than those coddled under glass. Always be sure to have the balls of earth damp on asters when planting them out, and for that matter this applies also to all other plants. Never allow anyone to plant out any stock with dry balls, as, with a succession of warm, dry days, many are tolerably sure to die.

Hotbeds.

To get a rapid growth on coleus, achyranthes, alternantheras and other heat-and-moisture-loving bedding plants, there is nothing to beat a well made hotbed now. Closed early in the afternoon with plenty of moisture, the growth they will make in a few days is astonishing. Alternanthera, especially, revels under such conditions and, if stock rooted is as yet inadequate for one's needs, pull a lot of plants to pieces, get them in flats in a hotbed and their growth will surprise you. Heliotropes, lemon verbenas and other plants which it is desired to increase in size, if partially plunged, will respond quickly when given a genial hotbed in which to make their growth.

Primulas.

After the middle of May, primulas, such as Sinensis, obconica and Kewensis, are better grown in coldframes, where they will be close to the glass. Some shade will be necessary during the hottest part of the day, but it is better to use cotton cloth or lath shades, rather than shade the glass. If the latter is done, the plants will become drawn and soft. Prepare a good bed of coal ashes for the flats or pots to stand on. Give them abundant ventilation and fumigate once a week to keep the plants clean. Primula seed wants a brisk, moist heat to germinate, but the plants themselves should never be subjected to any forcing conditions, or they will become weak and puny. Frost, dampness, harsh winds and bright sun are all to be guarded against. It is not too late to make a sowing to produce plants of Sinensis and obconica for late winter and early spring sales, but it is too late to get Christmas blooming stock.

Gladioli and Iris.

The cool weather experienced over a large portion of the country during April, and the serious losses sustained on peonies and other hardy stock which are usually to be had for Memorial day, added to the fact that some indoor crops intended for the last of May cannot be held back until then, make it tolerably certain that all flowers will sell at excellent prices the coming Memorial day. Tulips, narcissi and similar stock will all be on the wane before that time, but, among bulbs, the Gladiolus nanus varieties and Spanish iris are each desirable. Flat culture is much the best for each. Do not try any hard forcing on these bulbs; they do not like it. As they expand, if somewhat early, it is easy to move the flats to a cold cellar, or cut them as soon as the first flowers expand, placing them in a cool cut flower room. For bouquet work and sprays few flowers can equal these irises and gladioli. The large flowered gladioli benched in February promise to be in good crop for Memorial day. Weather conditions are uncertain, but it is possible to keep the spikes a long time in a cold room. They should always be cut as the first flowers open.

Linum Trigynum.

Although Linum trigynum is not as much seen commercially as it might be, this is a charming and easily grown greenhouse sub-shrub, and an old favorite for conservatory decoration. It is better known botanically as Reinwardtia. As the flowering time is midwinter, when plants with golden yellow flowers are scarce, they make a welcome addition at Christmas and during the month of January. Basal cuttings are the best. These root as quickly as chrysanthemums and should be kept potted on and flowered in 5-inch or 6-inch pots for the following winter. It is not too late to get in a batch of cuttings now. Plants can be carried over two or three seasons and do well divided, using a compost of sandy loam with some dry cow manure. During the warm summer months they can be stood outdoors. Old plants can also be planted out and carefully lifted. In this way they make good sized specimens. A Croton Edwin Lonsdale.

Temperature of 55 degrees at night will lower the plants at Christmas, but they will grow well in 10 degrees less heat. These linums are now little seen and would be something of a novelty for Christmas trade.

Bedding Plants.

Continue the propagation of any quick rooting and rapid growing bedding plants. Coleus, alternantheras, heliotropes, ageratums, salvias and some other varieties make salable plants in a few weeks. Many of the hardier plants can be moved into coldframes. Plan to give each plant space so that it will not crowd its neighbors. To have good, healthy plants, care in watering is now a vital necessity. The man who can be depended upon to water a batch without skipping a few dozens daily is a jewel. It is possible some plants may show signs of yellow foliage, indicating root starvation. Give these weak liquid manure, or a mild dose of nitrate of soda, to tone them up. Except where newly potted stock is being grown, the plants should have full sun, and, as the time for bedding-out approaches, the amount of ventilation should be increased and the temperature gradually lowered.

Compost for Vases and Boxes.

There will be many calls soon for the filling of cemetery vases, window and piazza boxes, and it is necessary to have a good heap of compost prepared for these purposes. Plants to be grown where root run is restricted must have a rich soil, or they will speedily show signs of starvation. Two-thirds fibrous loam, one-third dried cow manure passed through a coarse screen, and a 3-inch potful of fine bone to each bushel of soil will make a good compost. Chop the sod down and, after adding the manure and bone, turn it over a couple of times to mix it properly.

It is the most economical plan to fill all vases and boxes at the greenhouses, unless they are too heavy for convenient handling. Some customers prefer to have their window boxes kept in the greenhouses a few days after being filled, for which, of course, suitable charge must be made.

Dutch Bulbs in Beds.

Beds of Dutch bulbs will now be mostly on the wane. Where a groundwork of pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots or other spring flowers has been used, it is best to cut the dead blooms from the tulips, hyacinths or narcissi and leave them for a time, but where the bulbs only were used, they can be lifted and heeled in until the foliage dies down, when they can be taken up and stored in boxes until next fall. Choose a piece of ground out of the way, where some shade can be obtained. Of course, all bulbs are better left until the foliage matures, but this is impracticable where tender bedding plants are required to follow them. In mixed borders they can be left to ripen; other plants set out near them or even among them will speedily hide them. Hyacinths are of little value a second season, but narcissi do well, and a fair proportion of the early tulips are all right. The late tulips, if left undisturbed, are better the second and third than the first year.

CROTONS.

Spring and summer are the seasons at which crotons enjoy their greatest popularity and they are now coming to be used much more generally than heretofore in high-class work. Long recognized as among the most attractive of large decorative plants for the conservatory, in the latitude of Philadelphia and southward they now frequently are used for summer bedding and make a splendid effect, whether planted alone, in sub-tropical or mixed beds. It has been found that crotons will stand much more unfavorable conditions than once was thought, but a protected situation still is advised. They also dislike to have their roots chilled with cold water, and repeated doses of cold water will soon show by a drooping of the foliage.

Retail florists seeking to add color to their plant combinations have found the croton invaluable at Christmas and Easter, but to handle it satisfactorily at those seasons it must be guarded against chill. For spring work nothing is better. The bright foliage adds immensely to the appearance of any mixed basket of blooming and decorative plants.

Crotons are rapidly propagated from the tips of the young growths in warm sand in March and April. The sand must be kept moist and sun and draughts kept from the cuttings. Growers of large quantities plant out on a bench in five or six inches of good, rich soil, the young plants in a light house, where during the summer months they make a fine, quick growth, and in the fall they are lifted and potted, and when established are ready for sale. Indeed, the plant specialists now find so good a sale for crotons that propagation is carried on as steadily as possible.

To grow crotons at their best, they should not go below 70 degrees at night at any time of the year, but for a short time will endure 20 degrees lower than that. Unlike a palm or dracæna, however, anything near the freezing point for an hour or two will greatly damage them.

They are subject to the ravages of the mealy bug, red spider and thrips, but there is no excuse for either, as they delight in syringing; the proper use of the hose should banish their pests, or rather they should never appear.

For soil they like a strong, turfy loam with a fifth or sixth of rotten cow manure, and should be firmly potted, and when the water passes properly through the soil, which it always should, they want lots of it. Bone meal has been added to the compost, about one pound to a bushel of soil, with the best of results.

There are a large number of good varieties, but the croton specialists keep their lists down to a limited number. Two of the best sorts, in the estimation of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, which is probably the largest grower in this country, propagating some 5,000 a month, are those shown in the accompanying illustrations, Edwin Lonsdale and Falcatum. The former originated with the gentleman whose name it bears, but was not christened until after the stock had been sold to the Craig Co.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

The express company refuses to settle in full a claim for a shipment lost by delay in transit, on the contention that its liability is limited to $50. We are told that if a greater value than $50 existed, it should have been shown on the receipt, where no value at all was recorded. We claim payment at the full value of our goods, which is easily shown by the invoice enclosed. I have an impression that I have read of some lawsuit in which the express company set up this same claim of $50 limit of liability and

PLATYCLINIS GLUMACEA.

Platyclinis glumacea, also called Dendrochilum glumaceum, is a graceful and interesting orchid. It is one of the few members of a genus peculiar to the East Indies and the Malay Archipelago. The variety glumacea comes from the Philippines. The pendulous, elongated spikes of white flowers are deliciously fragrant. The small pseudo-bulbs are crowded, the younger ones being generally covered with reddish scales. The solitary leaves are lanceolate and taper into the long footstalk.

blooms in summer, and P. Cobbiana blooms in early winter.

TANKAGE FOR BENCH CROPS.

How much tankage can I use on a bed 5x150 feet, and how often?

B. J. P.

The quantity of tankage and the number of times to apply it depend so much on the crop for which it is to be used that an answer is difficult. There are also some brands with fifty per cent more ammonia than others. Carnations and Asparagus plumosus should not have this applied earlier than January, nor more frequently than at intervals of a month. We should prefer to change the food, rather than use one only. Do not use over one pound per twenty square feet at a time in late winter or early spring. Later in the season the plants, owing to more frequent and copious waterings, will take up rather more plant food.

W. C.

CARRIED OVER AZALEAS.

What is the best treatment for azaleas after blooming?

F. J. V.

Pick off all seed pods. Keep the plants carefully watered and syringed. About the middle of May, or as soon as danger of frost has passed, you can plant them outdoors. There is no need to give them any shade. We prefer a sunny spot. Have them where you can use the hose on them freely; two or three sprayings a day in extremely hot weather will be appreciated. Lift and pot the plants about the end of September. Any good garden soil will suit the azaleas, but they grow specially well where some leaf-mold, decayed cow manure and gritty material, such as sharp sand, have been added. If kept well watered, you will in the fall have plants better budded than those you may be in the habit of importing.

A NEW NEW HAMPSHIRE FIRM.

There are few business concerns in the city of Manchester, N. in which the judgment was against them. Can you tell us what our rights are in the matter?

J. & T.

The receipts issued by express companies usually have printed upon them the stipulation that the company is not to be liable beyond $50 unless the value of the package is stated to be greater than that. This document is both a receipt and a contract. The shipper is supposed to have read it, as every man is supposed to read his contracts, and, whether he has read it or not, he is bound by it. The courts have frequently held that the stipulation in question is a reasonable one and that the shipper is bound by it. The position of the express company is that it is entitled to know the value of a package in order that it may take extra care of unusually valuable packages, and also in order that it may make an additional charge for such extra care and unusual liability.

The case you have in mind where a greater sum than $50 was collected was probably that of an incoming passenger on a train who has given to a local expressman who came through the cars the check for a trunk and asked him to take the baggage to some designated address. The passenger is likely to be more or less inexperienced, the cars are dimly lighted, the transaction is a rapid one, and the courts have held in such cases that the local expressman is bound for the full value of the trunk, notwithstanding a $50 limitation on his receipt, unless he calls the passenger's attention to the fact that the document is a contract, as well as a receipt, and that the limitation is part of it. In the ordinary case of shipment by express the rule is otherwise.

This species grows well in pots or pans of fern fiber, to which may be added a little sphagnum moss. The receptacles should be half filled with drainage. The plants are also well adapted for culture in baskets, the graceful, drooping racemes showing off to good advantage in them. Potting or basketing should be done soon after flowering. A temperature of 60 degrees at night in winter and a moist atmosphere, with overhead syringings in hot weather, suits them. They need but little rest, as compared with the bulk of orchids, and should never be allowed to become very dry at any time. At the warm end of a cattleya house the platyclinis will do well. The flowering time of P. glumacea is early spring. Another species, P. filiformis, progressiveness are already clearly shown in the management of the business.

Their range of greenhouses, a part of which is shown in the accompanying illustration, now contains 40,000 square feet of glass, including a carnation house 340 feet in length, and the proprietors express their determination to make the place in time one of the largest and finest in the state. They grow a general stock. The greenhouses are easily accessible, being on the Lake line of the electric road.

A START IN VIOLETS.

I should like to know which is the best way to grow violets, by planting them out like carnations or by making a new bed and planting them in it in the spring. I should also like to know whether the heat in the summer would hurt them if they had to stay inside all summer. I live in the state of Indiana.

L. E.

Single varieties, such as Princess of Wales, Luxonne, Baron Rothschild and Kaiser Wilhelm, should be planted out and kept well cultivated all summer, removing the runners when they begin to form in late summer. These succeed much better if not housed until they have had a moderate freezing, say 6 or 8 degrees below freezing point, on one or two occasions. If lifted before they have had any frost, they will make a tremendous crop of leaves, while the flowers will be few and of poor quality. The freezing checks the growth of foliage, and such plants, when housed, will at once start to flower freely. The time to house depends on the weather in your state. I should say it would be best not to house before October 15, and many growers leave them out, to follow chrysanthemums.

Double violets, of which Campbell, Marie Louise and Farquhar are well known sorts, are much less vigorous and more tender than the singles. They also more easily fall a prey to leaf diseases. Some growers plant these out and lift during the latter part of August or early in September, getting fairly good results. The best specialists, however, plant them in late spring, in the houses where they are to flower. In most cases these houses have removable sashes. In all cases they get a maximum of air on the sides and at the ridge. Doubles are better under glass by the last of August, and if they can be grown in the beds where they are to flower, all the better. A thin shade can be given during the hottest months.

C. W.

ALEDO, ILL.—Chas. McChesney reports that business has been so good that he has had no time for recreation.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—William Bock is having a greenhouse, 27x200, erected here for violets. Charles Mitchell has the contract.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

CARTHAGE, Mo.—Stephen Hyde is erecting two more greenhouses, each 28x390 feet, on East Thirteenth street.

WEST DE PERE, WIS.—A. Van Gemert has decided to add this season a house 24x150, using concrete walls and benches.

CLEVELAND, O.—G. M. Naumann is building new houses this season and will equip them with 4,200 square feet of tile benches.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y.—The greenhouse of William Kemp, on Division street, was recently damaged by fire to the amount of $300.

WESTERLY, R. I.—A local newspaper contains the report that George L. Stillman recently sent a shipment of dahlias to Africa.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—Robert Bebb, formerly in the business at Des Moines, Ia., has bought the Muskogee Carnation Co., of A. Z. English.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.—J. S. King, the florist at the Home, has taken a thirty days' furlough and is visiting his son at Hornitos, Cal.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Albert Lasch, the South Warwood florist, furnished some handsome decorations for the wedding of Louis Eis and Miss Flora Lasch, at Loveland, W. Va., April 21.

WAKEFIELD, MASS.—Otto B. Runge, who carries on his business under the name of Runge The Florist, is doing some effective advertising in the local papers. He owns greenhouses at Pleasant and Cordis streets and recently opened a store at 101 Albion street.

POCATELLO, IDAHO.—A. H. Lindquist, who for a number of years conducted a flower store in connection with his undertaking establishment, in the Wrensted building, has moved his flower department to the store of the Independent Electric Supply Co., on North Main street, where a fine display window has been fitted up for his use. He handles part of the output of W. A. Staley's greenhouses.

FARMINGTON, UTAH.—The Miller Floral Co. has purchased ten acres of land in Davis county from Nathan Clark, and the construction of two greenhouses is under way. The company is capitalized at $100,000 and will grow roses and carnations during the first year, rapidly branching out into other lines. The officers of the company are: Robert Miller, president; W. E. Tarbell, vice-president; Louis L. Barton, secretary and treasurer.

SARCOXIE, MO.—Gilbert H. Wild, as already reported in the REVIEW, expressed the opinion that peonies in this vicinity were not injured by the recent frosts and storms. At a later date—April 27—Mr. Wild said again: "The frost damaged strawberries and bit potatoes to the ground, but left peonies unharmed, as already stated. Our coldest mornings were windy and cloudy, and that helped us wonderfully. Of strawberries in bloom, not more than one-third were killed, and a good many had not begun blooming. So you see we are lucky."

DAYTON, O.—The Heiss Co. has secured the contract for supplying the plants for the use of the city parks during this season.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—G. W. Pool will erect another greenhouse on the property between Summit and Spring streets. His office is now at 11 Carpenter street.

CARTHAGE, Mo.—Stephen Hyde, proprietor of the Fairview Greenhouses, is building two more houses, each 28x390, to be used almost entirely for lettuce. One of the houses will be completed in a month and the other later in the summer. Including this new addition, Mr. Hyde will have 110,000 square feet under glass.

MOBERLY, MO.—Carl A. Claeson, grower for Mrs. R. S. Estill, says trade is good, especially in the line of design work. Mrs. Estill, he says, has plenty of bedding stock, and the recent frosts did not cause her much trouble. She intends to build a violet house next fall, and two large houses, for roses and carnations, next year.

NEWTON, KAN.—The greenhouse formerly owned by C. L. Shanks, but which has been closed since last November, has been leased and opened by The Rosebud Co. The two ladies composing this company are novices at the florists' business, but with the assistance of a competent florist hope to be able to supply the demands of the people of the vicinity.

ATLANTA, GA.—The business of the Atlanta Floral Co. was recently purchased by A. Borg and Ivar Erikson, and the new proprietors are planning to improve their facilities and increase the scope of their trade. It is said that their store window has lately been a veritable symphony in carnations, with every tone from white through all the pinks to the vivid scarlets. The flowers were all grown in the firm's own greenhouses.

WORCESTER, MASS.—The estate of the late H. F. A. Lange, according to an inventory recently filed in the probate court by his executors, Albert H. and Carl C. Lange, is valued at $98,248.87. Of this, $64,886.37 is personal property, consisting of bank accounts, stocks, bonds and mortgages. The real estate amounts to $33,362.50, and includes the greenhouses, land and houses on Mt. Vernon and Channing streets. The appraisers of the estate were Sanford C. Kendall, Carl Bonney and Bertrand W. Stone.

LEXINGTON, KY.—H. F. Hillenmeyer, the veteran nurseryman, says the frost of Saturday night, April 23, was one of the most disastrous within his recollection and the fruit crop was badly blighted throughout the state. The crop, as a consequence, will be small in quantity and inferior in quality. Early garden products of nearly all kinds, he says, have been almost wiped out, and there will therefore be almost a total dearth of early vegetables grown in Kentucky, although there is yet ample time to replant such things for a later crop. Peas, beans, tomatoes and similar vegetables were practically cut down to the earth by the frost.

GURNEY HILL IS INSURGENT.

E. G. Hill has taken up the cudgel in Indiana in favor of a rational tariff—one that protects the producer but which does not penalize the consumer.

At the republican convention in his district, at Connersville, April 22, Congressman Barnard took occasion to justify his vote for the Payne bill by Mr. Hill's attitude on the question of duty on rose plants, while deriding the florist's contention that at the same time the duty on greenhouse glass should come down. Mr. Hill's insurgency was manifest in his reply.

"If the case were to be analyzed," said Mr. Hill, "it would not seem that the rosemonger was so far out of the way in asking through his congressman for a retention of the Dingley rates on roses.

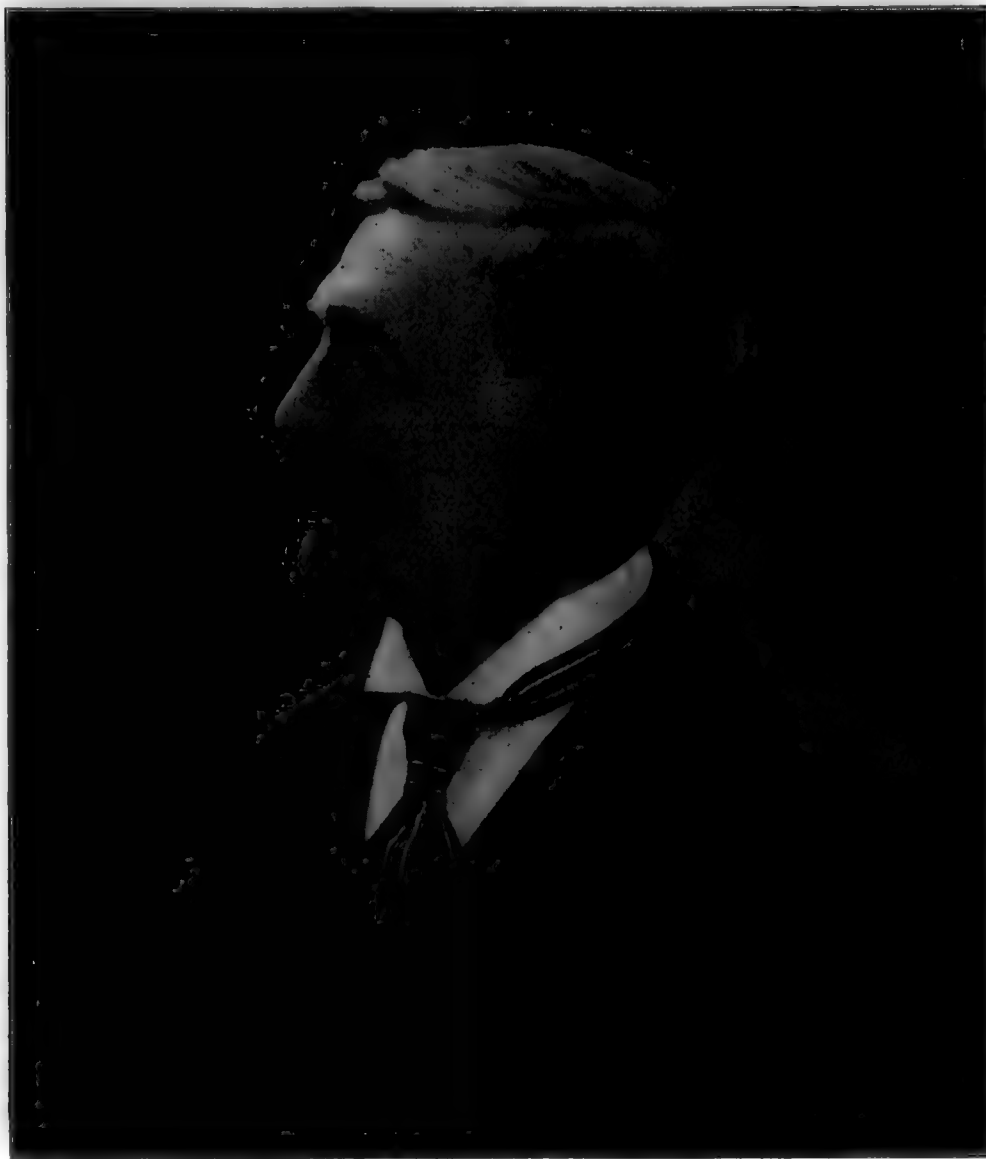

"To state the case briefly: Anent Congressman Barnard's speech at Connersville, the duty on roses under the Dingley law was 2½ cents per plant. This duty I suggested to Judge Barnard be maintained, as it was only just to American rose growers. Under the Payne-Aldrich bill an increase was made to 4 cents per plant. This increase was a surprise to me. I had not asked or expected it. The price paid labor in the rose-producing districts of continental Europe is from $3.50 to $4 per week; the same class of labor in America is paid from $10 to $14 per week.

"Now as to the duty on glass: It is levied at so much per pound (who ever heard of glass being sold per pound?) and it amounted on greenhouse glass to 140 per cent in the Dingley law and is still as prohibitive. This excessive and unjust rate gives the glass combine every opportunity not only to rob everyone building a greenhouse, but everyone who uses glass in any way. What is the result? The glass trust of former days had the power to rob right and left under this protection. A careful report made by a committee of greenhouse men revealed the fact that glass could be made at a profit and sold at $2.05 per box; in fact, glass was sold last year in carload lots all the way from $2.05 to $2.30 per box. About January 1 the Imperial Glass Co. was formed. All the independent factories were cajoled or bought into the combine and now at the present time this Imperial Glass Co., having control of practically all the hand blown glass plants of the country, boosts the price up to $3.50 and in the last few days the rate is reported $4 per box. A duty of 140 per cent enables the glass trust to bleed every man who uses glass.

"Furthermore, in regard to the inconsistency of my attitude as pointed out by the Judge, asking additional duty on roses, with a reduction on glass, grasping for gain both coming and going, so to speak, I would suggest that roses are a luxury, while glass is a necessity, and I have always contended that it is the luxuries which should produce the maximum of government revenue.

"Aldrich, Cannon, Watson and Daltzell can not longer hoodwink the American people: It should be the duty of congress to give us the Beveridge tariff commission, but the gentlemen named above are determined not to have the light turned on if it can be prevented.

"Personally, with other insurgent republicans, all I want is a fair deal either in the matter of a duty on roses or on glass. A casual reading of the speech of my good friend, the Judge, puts me in a very inconsistent and selfish attitude in the matter of duties, whereas I am heartily in favor of a just and equitable tariff rate that will protect American labor and give to the American manufacturer a fair profit. The whole tariff schedule as framed under the Payne-Aldrich law is unjust and unfair to the consumers of the country. Aldrichism, Cannonism and the placing in power of the reactionaries means the downfall of the republican party."

THE NEWER HARDY ASTERS.

[An extract from a paper by Arthur E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.]

The most useful of all herbaceous plants for producing fine autumnal effects are undoubtedly asters or Michaelmas daisies, and to some who are acquainted with the many wild species which beautify our New England woodlands it may seem unnecessary to draw attention to them, but during the last ten years a great deal has been done by cross fertilization and selection to produce varieties better suited for garden cultivation.

The species to which the most notable additions have been added are Novi-Belgii, Novæ-Angliæ, Amellus, cordifolius and vimineus, but the best results have been obtained by crossing Novi-Belgii and vimineus. These produce small flowers in great abundance, on long, pendulous branches right from the ground, and for border decoration or using in a cut state there is nothing to surpass them.

Nearly all the varieties to which I shall refer have been imported into this country and may be seen growing by anyone interested. Their light and graceful habit makes them exclusively valuable as pot plants, and anyone who has a conservatory to embellish cannot do better than utilize the small flowered varieties for this purpose.

Climax and Duchess of Albany.

The Novi-Belgii varieties are now numerous, but I shall only mention two which are in advance of all others, and these are Climax and Duchess of Albany. Both grow five feet high; the former has bright blue flowers with a conspicuously yellow center and the latter is pale mauve, flowering from halfway up the stem and not just at the end of the shoots, as is the case with many varieties. The best form of Novæ-Angliæ is Mrs. J. F. Raynor, which is only four feet high and has bright reddish crimson flowers, two inches across.

Aster Amellus is a species with large, rich, blue flowers and grows about two feet high. It is very useful for many purposes, especially where masses of color are desired, and it is only within recent years that any new colors have been evolved. Pale lavender, deep rose and almost white forms will be found among such varieties as Aldenham, Herbert J. Cutbush, Lilacea, Distinction and Reverslea.

For the Front of the Border.

Too much cannot be said in favor of the beautiful varieties which have resulted from crossing vimineus and Novi-Belgii, the best of which are Enchantress, Hon. Edith Gibbs, Golden Spray, Delight, Star Shower, Maidenhod, King Edward VII, Chastity and Ringdove. The habit of these is so beautiful that they are unsurpassed for growing on single stems and planting on the front of the border, where they make perfect pyramids of bloom.

Among the cordifolius group there are a number distinguished by their delightful habit and delicacy of coloring, and Ideal and Edwin Beckett are general favorites with all who have grown them.

SHADE FOR ASPARAGUS.

I want to shade a plumosus house for the summer. What can I use that will make a permanent shade and not hurt the paint when sprayed on? B. J. P.

White lead mixed in naphtha or kerosene makes an excellent, lasting and easily applied shading for plumosus. It will not injure the paint on the wood-work in the least, but will rather help to preserve it. C. W.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

It can be reported that business last week was satisfactory, and that the quality of stock with which to fill orders was really good, this no doubt being caused by the cool and dark days. Beauties were just as good as in midwinter, while other roses were excellent, considering the time of the year. Carnations continue to hold their own, bringing 2 cents and 3 cents. While the supply showed an increase over the week previous, still there were not enough to go around. White carnations are still in good demand, with only a limited supply. Receipts of bulbous stock and sweet peas have decreased considerably and, with no outdoor stock to speak of coming in, the market was kept cleaned up all the time, something unusual for the end of April, when a person might expect to have more than enough. Asparagus Sprengeri is the long suit in green goods, for A. plumosus strings and smilax are scarce; also the smilax is of poor quality. The supply of snapdragon, which continues steady, was equal to demand.

Various Notes.

The cool, wet days that followed the frost of April 23 were quite welcome, for it gave all outdoor vegetation a better chance to recover, and from present appearances the damage was not as great as was at first anticipated. While we have had real spring weather since March 1, nearly all the carnation growers in this vicinity had not begun to move their stock into the field by May 3; too much rain is given as the cause. Those that had some stock transplanted, and these are only a few, say that they are surprised that the recent frost did not raise more havoc.

Robert Zepnick, 147 Lincoln avenue, says that he has been kept quite busy of late with funeral work.

Wm. Zimmermann, who reports something doing all the time, states that business for the month of March was better than April and by all means the best in the history of that establishment.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. has the material ready for an addition of eight houses, each 18x100 feet, to be erected at their Brown Deer place for pot plants.

The bedding plant trade, which had made a good beginning with the C. C. Pollworth Co., came to a standstill with the recent winter-like weather, but as there is still plenty of time till Decoration day, they are by no means worrying.

In associating with the boys these days the main topic of interest and discussion is the annual May ball, which takes place next Thursday, May 12, at Miller's hall. The entertainment committee has sent out neat announcements inviting all employers, employees and their friends to be on hand without fail.

Visitors: Mr. and Mrs. R. Miller, of the Racine Floral Co., and J. M. Johnson, of Racine, Wis.; Adam Zender, Rogers Park, Ill. E. O.

OBITUARY.

Charles Treanor.

Charles Treanor, for many years in the trade at South Bend, Ind., and widely known, died May 1 at Miami, Fla., as the result of a stroke of paralysis April 22. Mr. Treanor was a member of the old firm of Treanor & Rettie, which did a large business and was known all over the country. Mr. Treanor handled the retail end and Mr. Rettie the growing end. At one time they divided the business, each individually conducting his department, but later they went back into partnership and continued until the business was absorbed by the South Bend Floral Co., with whom Mr. Treanor was connected for a time. Several years ago he fell from a street car and suffered injuries from which he never fully recovered. He was a man of musical taste and education and became skilled as a harpist. His trip to Florida was in hope of benefiting his health. He was accompanied by Harry A. Wood, who was an adopted member of the family and who is accompanying the remains back to South Bend, where funeral services will be held Saturday, May 7. Mr. Treanor is survived by a wife and two children.

Anthony M. McLaren.

Anthony Murray McLaren, proprietor of the Westwood Nurseries, at Westwood, Mass., died of a shock of paralysis April 27, at the age of 80 years. He fell dead from his carriage while driving on Hyde Park avenue, Mount Hope.

Mr. McLaren was born at Crieff, Perth county, Scotland, in October, 1830, the son of John and Ellen (Sharp) McLaren. His early education was received at Drummond castle, after which he attended Octertyre, the great training school for landscape gardening.

About fifty-six years ago he left his native land, coming to St. John, N. B., where he remained five years. He then removed to Boston, for a time working on various estates in the suburbs, including those of John D. Williams, Warren street, Roxbury; William Wales, Columbia road, Dorchester; Francis Parkman, near Jamaica pond, Jamaica Plain, and Mr. Strong, of Brighton. For four years he was gardener at Forest Hills cemetery.

For forty years Mr. McLaren was in business as a florist at Forest Hills, in Boston, where the railroad station is now located. At the time of the raising of the railroad tracks, in 1896, the property was taken for the new site of the depot, and Mr. McLaren moved to Westwood, where he had since conducted the Westwood Nurseries.

In the time he was located at Forest Hills, Mr. McLaren laid out many beautiful estates in different parts of the country, including the Lorillard place, in Newport; the estate of George F. Baker, president of the Second National Bank, New York, and several large estates in North Carolina. He was a landscape gardener for the New York Central railroad. He planted the beautiful vine now growing over the Old South church, Boston.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and was the winner of many prizes at its exhibitions.

January 10, 1856, at St. John, N. B., he married Miss Mary Ann Campbell, of that city. She survives him, as do their sons and daughters: Mrs. Charles H. Howard, of New York city; Mrs. Frederick P. Norris, of Roxbury; Mrs. Charles H. Lester, of Roxbury; Mrs. George A. Gilman, of Jamaica Plain; James S. McLaren and William H. McLaren, both of Westwood, and John McLaren, of Hyde Park.

George W. Williams.

George W. Williams, treasurer of the W. E. Barrett Co., seeds and florists' supply house at Providence, R. I., died April 24, at his home, 28 Sycamore street, Providence, after a three weeks' illness of heart trouble. Mr. Williams' health had been failing for about a year. He was 74 years of age, and was descended from the founder of Providence, Roger Williams. At the time of his death, Mr. Williams was a member of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, and many other clubs, societies and Masonic bodies.

George Williams was born in North Providence, R. I., May 16, 1836. When 18 years of age, he entered the seed and agricultural implement house of Burdick & Barrett, which had been established in 1848. In 1861, Mr. Williams bought Mr. Burdick's interest and the firm name was changed to W. E. Barrett & Co.

He was twice married, both wives being dead. He is survived by five sons and one daughter. One son, George F. Williams, is secretary of the W. E. Barrett Co.

A. H. Howard.

Alfred Herbert Howard, of Otter River, Mass., died at his home in that town April 15, at the age of 58 years. He was born in Holden, Mass., and was a son of John W. and Sally (Hayden) Howard. He had resided at Otter River for about thirty-five years and during the latter part of the time had been engaged in the business of growing cucumbers. He is survived by his wife.

F. Edwin Lillibridge.

F. Edwin Lillibridge, a lifelong resident of East Greenwich, R. I., and for many years gardener at the estate of Moses B. I. Goodard, died at his home Monday morning, April 25, after an illness of three days. Death was due to a complication of diseases. He was 54 years old.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A jury in the Superior Court has awarded a verdict of $250 to Charles Leising in the case brought by the lad against Henry Smith, the florist. Young Leising fell from a tree while picking cherries on the Smith farm last summer.

MONTREAL, CAN.—N. S. Dunlop, the director of the flower department of the Canadian Pacific railroad, began the distribution, April 19, of the 80,000 packages of seeds which are used for the beautification of the station grounds and the houses of the officials and employees on the 10,000 miles of this company's lines in Canada.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. H. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THERE are business chances in plenty on pages 35 to 37—three pages of Wants and For Sales.

N. S. DUNLOP, head gardener for the Canadian Pacific railroad, aspires to have his line known as the Road of Roses.

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT visited the jubilee bulb show at Haarlem, Holland, May 1, and report has it that he was "dee-lighted."

THE Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture is ready this year some two months earlier than usual. Your congressman will send a copy if you are interested.

YOU may hear it said that wire frames are not used as commonly as they once were for funeral flowers, but just the same there is a big scarcity of wire-workers.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

ONE of the freight rate increases announced last week is on ground bone, Kansas City or Omaha to Chicago. The old rate was 20 cents, the new 23 cents, or an advance of fifteen per cent.

RUN over in your mind the names of the men whom you know who are making the greatest successes in the florists' business. How many of the successful ones graduated into the trade from some other line? How many owe their success to ability as business men rather than to ability as growers? How many give their personal attention to the merchandising end?

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Thomas De Voy's Son, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., offers for registration the violet described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raiser's description: Sport of Marie Louise, 1907; identical with parent plant in foliage and habit of growth; flowers double and of a dainty, light wistaria shade. Name: Marie Elise.

H. B. DORNER, Sec'y.

April 28, 1910.

EMERSON SAID.

"If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or build a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, even though he build his house in the wilderness, the world will make a beaten track to his doorway."

Sure, the world will, if given time enough, but unless the mouse-trap builder is very young and very patient he would better advertise.

FIREMEN AND FLORISTS.

The National Firemen's Association will hold its annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., August 17 to 20, the same week that the S. A. F. will hold its convention there, and by a curious coincidence a florist is president of the firemen's organization. He is John M. Sherwood, of Neosho, Mo., manager of the Neosho Florist Co.

OUTDOOR ASTERS IN ARIZONA.

Under separate cover, I am sending the editor a few aster blooms. I believe I am right in thinking April is quite early to have them in bloom. The seeds were sown outdoors last fall, were out all winter, without protection, although we had an unusually cold winter, below freezing the most of nearly a month. In February I transplanted them into my greenhouse, solid beds; no heat except from the sun, not having put in my heating apparatus. These blooms opened April 21. I have many that will be in full bloom this week, and by Memorial day I will have plenty, and anticipate a good sale.

I read Mr. Michell's little joke in the Philadelphia column and you may say to him that the REVIEW finds its way even to the "jumping off place" away out in Arizona, as many advertisers know.

The Great Central Market.

There was a rift in the clouds the latter part of last week and business seemed at once to feel the inspiration. Wholesalers nearly all say that the week was an excellent one and that the volume of business on Friday and Saturday was well above anything that has been enjoyed since Easter. Prices were not high in any department. Large quantities of stock were moved, with the result that an excellent money total was recorded. This week opened with an exceptionally dull Monday. A cold, raw rain and high winds kept people off the street and discouraged city trade. Apparently the out-of-town buyers had carried over considerable stock from Saturday, or else, which is not at all probable, business had suddenly fallen off with them, for telegraphic orders were not numerous, and altogether the market had one of the dullest Mondays of recent weeks. Monday usually is the busiest day of the early part of the week, Tuesday and Wednesday being less active, but this week the succeeding days were busier than Monday.

Beauties are once more in extremely large supply and prices of even the best long stock are being shaded to the buyers of hundred lots; indeed, if it were not for the buyers who take from 100 to 500 it would be wholly impossible to clear out the daily receipts of long Beauties—the orders for a dozen or two at a time are not numerous enough to make any impression upon the supply. Medium and short Beauties are relatively much less plentiful than long and they command relatively better prices. Those who have medium and short Beauties of good quality find a brisk sale and hold their prices stiff. The average quality of the Beauties now in market is exceptionally good, much better than it was a few weeks, or even days ago.

Ten days of dark weather has affected the color of Killarney and Maid; these

-PEONIES-

BIGGEST, SHOWIEST FLOWERS OF THE SEASON

You who have been watching for the opening of the Peony season can order freely now—we've got 'em in quantity, pink and white as well as red. As usual, we handle the stock of the oldest and most experienced growers—the stock retailers know is cut right, bunched right, handled right and will act right after the buyer gets it. No order too large for us, now or later.

BEAUTIES

This is fine stock and it is selling well, for buyers who try our Beauties come back for more. Long Beauties are, relatively to the demand, much more plentiful than medium and short, but we have all lengths in quantity. Good heads and fine color in all lengths.

KILLARNEY

Killarney is one of our leading specialties—no better stock to be had anywhere in this country and the supply is large and steady; we always have them. Buyers who once use our Killarney any length—find they pull trade their way. You can get the reputation for having the best roses in your town if you carry our Killarney.

Large Supply of Fine Richmond, Maid, Bride, Etc.

SWEET PEAS

The Butterfly Peas are now in large supply; can fill all orders. Fine as our Peas have been, these are much the best stock this market has seen this year. Quick sellers wherever shown.

are paler than they should be. Richmond seems in full crop with many of the largest growers. Quality is splendid, but the supply is excessive. Kaiserin is now offered in large quantities and of generally good quality. Not many White Killarney are seen, but the longest, finest white roses are of this variety. There is an abundance of Bride. Of Maryland, Jardine, Cardinal and Rhea Reid some excellent stock is offered in moderate quantity. No buyer can complain of lack of variety in the rose market. Business is better than it was before the April freeze, but prices on roses still are low compared to the high quality of the stock.

It does not seem that there has been much reduction in the supply of carnations, but demand has improved and prices are quite a little firmer than they were a fortnight ago. The quality is excellent in nearly all varieties. White has been selling especially well for some days and making better prices than anything except the special fancy grades in other colors. The approach of Mothers' day was apparent as early as last week, when many inquiries were received as to prices. One buyer wrote several wholesale houses that he could use 25,000 white carnations, to be shipped May 6, and asked each house to make an offer on part. The special demand found the wholesalers somewhat in a quandary. Mothers' day never before made any special difference; it was the desire to hold the prices as reasonable as possible for the purpose of encouraging the observance of the day, but at the same time all the wholesalers saw that the supply of whites will not be anywhere near sufficient to go around and the commission dealers never lose sight of the inexorable requirement of the growers that the goods be sold for all they will bring. Consequently there was considerable variation in the quotations for advance orders for Mothers' day. That this market quoted early prices below prices quoted in the east was shown by the receipt of several orders for thousand lots from retailers in eastern cities. The wholesalers feel that it is up to the retailers to turn part of the demand to colored stock for Mothers' day and thereby make it possible to supply all orders and keep prices on a reasonable level.

Sweet peas, which have been among the best selling items, are in large supply and the quality shows considerable improvement. The Butterfly varieties go quickly, but the fag end of the crop of winter bloomers does not move briskly. Short-stemmed peas are about as hard to sell as anything coming into the market.

Receipts of peonies from Carbondale, Villa Ridge and Sarcoxie have become so heavy that cold storage was begun May 2. White and pink are available as well as red. The buyers are not yet taking hold in quantity. Frost damage to the southern crop apparently was slight, though what may later develop is problematical.

Not much bulbous stock is coming in. Easter lilies are scarce, but there are plenty of callas. There is a fair call for iris, snapdragons, cattleyas, valley and other items. The green goods market is quiet.

Wholesalers are looking for an exceptionally busy week-end. Friday and Saturday ordinarily are the big days in the market and this week the Mothers' day special demand promises to be an important factor. In addition, Chicago is to have its first automobile parade Saturday, May 7, and retail florists have been busy figuring on decorations in cut flowers.

The Visias Bankruptcy.

The failure of George Visias, who ran the flower store in the Masonic Temple, has stirred up the matter of credits once more. Visias filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy April 26 and scheduled liabilities of $3,599.48, of which $2,284.92 was owing to eighteen wholesale florists, including four who sell on the Flower Growers' Market, and $191.55 to two plant growers. There were only three creditors outside the trade, the landlord, the iceman and one other.

An interesting point is that in every case, save two, the February bills with the wholesalers had been paid. March and April purchases only were involved, and on a credit basis April was not due at the date of the filing of the petition. Two of the claims exceed $350 and the wholesaler who has the largest claim says Visias always paid promptly every month, and, while recognized as not having property to justify credit, had gained it by meeting every obligation promptly. The assets scheduled are valued at $834.25. These include fixtures, wearing apparel, etc., but only $15 in cash. Question for the bankruptcy court: What became of the money for March and April sales? He sold only for cash.

Moninger's Movements.

The John C. Moninger Co. supplies the following statement:

"Several reports are being made regarding our purchase of a building adjoining our present property and some of these are conflicting and confusing. To make the matter clear, we will say we have bought, from the American Malting Co., a piece of property 150 feet on Hawthorne avenue and 135 feet deep; also a five-story building 90x123 feet and a seven-story elevator 42x70 feet. The seven-story elevator is being wrecked to make space for a driveway connecting our private switch with our new lumber yard. The five-story building will be used for a warehouse for boilers, pipe and heating materials, also for the manufacture of all iron work entering into the construction of our various types of houses. This building gives us much needed room and will enable us, when remodeled, to handle a much larger volume of business than heretofore. Changes in the construction are now being made and we expect to move part of our plant into the new quarters about May 10."

April Weather.

It may be a surprise to hear from the weather man that the month of April at Chicago was 5.3 degrees warmer than normal. According to the official records, the excessively warm weather of March continued during April with but slight interruption until after the middle of the month. Then came a cool period of ten days, but the last three days were warmer than normal. During the cold snap the temperature went 19 degrees below normal and 6.4 inches of snow fell, being more than nine times the average snowfall for the whole of a normal April. There was an abundance of sunshine during the first fifteen days and a decided deficiency during the last half of the month, the average for the entire month being four per cent below normal.

Various Notes.

After twenty-five years the name of Hauswirth has ceased to be connected with the flower business in Chicago. E. J. Hauswirth, who has conducted the store in the Congress hotel since the death of his mother, closed up April 30 and will go to Twin Lakes, Wis., to live on a chicken farm. His father was in the flower store in the Auditorium and Congress hotels from the day the original Auditorium building was opened until his death, in 1906, and his son had himself spent sixteen years there. Hauswirth's closing leaves the Congress hotel without a flower store, the space having already been leased for other purposes. Hauswirth has for years been one of the large buyers in the wholesale market, much of the stock being consumed on business originating within the hotel. It is thought that O. J. Friedman now will get this work and that space for handling it will be found for him inside the hotel. Friedman recently gave up his stand for the sale of flowers in the La Salle, where there now is no florist except John Sterritt, who is employed by the house merely to look after the flowers for the public tables and public rooms.

John Kruchten's 2-year-old boy was seriously bitten by a bulldog April 29. The brute seized the child by the jaw, inflicting bad wounds in the throat and also inside the mouth. The physicians say the case is a serious one, but that with good care there is no reason why the boy should not escape permanent injury.

William Homburg, formerly with the J. B. Deamud Co., is now Phil Schupp's right-hand man at J. A. Budlong's. Charley Zapfe, of this house, was taken ill last week and was operated on for appendicitis April 30 at the Ravenswood hospital. The latest reports of his condition indicate that he is getting along as well as could be expected.

John Mangel looks after the flower needs of the management of the new Blackstone hotel and has a sales space within the hotel. It is not a "store." There is not room for handling work of an important character, or, indeed, for carrying much stock, but it affords the fashionable frequenters of the place an opportunity to get their corsage and gift flowers without going outside.

Stollery Bros. will occupy a handsome new store and conservatory to be erected for them at the corner of Kenmore and Winthrop avenues. The building is to cost $10,000 and work is to be started at once.

Winandy Bros., greenhouse contractors, are having a busy season. Among their largest jobs are those for Wietor Bros. and Hoerber Bros. At Wietors' the Winandys have the rebuilding operations far enough along so that all the houses are up and glazing is in progress. At Hoerber Bros.' the superstructure is going up.

The Atlas Floral Co. now occupies the entire store at 35 Randolph street.

At E. H. Hunt's, W. E. Lynch reports the arrival of the first Sarcoxie peonies May 2.

Rhea Reid is not largely grown for this market, but Bassett & Washburn have quite a quantity of it and say it has come in handy to take the place of short and medium Beauties. They have been cutting 300 to 500 a day. Mr. Washburn reports last week as the best week of the year to date, with the single exception, of course, of Easter week.

E. E. Pieser states that Kennicott Bros. began storing southern peonies May 2. The crop of Kennicott & Co., Carbondale, also began going into storage that day. Mr. Pieser says it will be an impossibility to sell without cold storage all the peonies that will reach this market in the next two weeks or so, but that he looks for an unprecedented demand the last five days of this month.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, has been on the sick list for several days, suffering with the grip.

April 30 C. Clemensen opened his new store at South Chicago. He now has one of the nicest places in this vicinity, store and greenhouses, and is doing a big business.

Henry Van Gelder, manager of the Percy Jones business, says that Frank Garland, at Des Plaines, is maintaining his reputation as a grower of Kaisers, the early crop this season being as good as anything Mr. Garland ever has cut.

Baden. Frank Johnson, of the Randall Co., is making a southern trip.

Vaughan & Sperry report receiving many orders from the southeast, from territory usually considered outside the Chicago shipping radius. They say the Beauties, though in increased supply, are moving satisfactorily.

Frank Lonigan, brother of Jack Lonigan, of Winterson's, was killed Friday morning at the Marshfield avenue station of the Metropolitan elevated railroad.

Peter Reinberg has just received a new French automobile that is one of the finest things on the street.

C. W. McKellar is on duty again this week, but is twenty pounds lighter because of his fortnight's illness.

Kyle & Foerster say they think the increase in the supply of sweet peas is more apparent than real. They lay the accumulation entirely to the bad weather, and think the peas will move briskly again as soon as pleasant days call people out.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports that so far as can be seen the carnations in the field have suffered no injury from the freeze.

At Zech & Mann's it is said that the shipping trade is excellent, as good as it ever was at this date, with much business in sight for the end of the week.

Miss Bloom, of Bassett & Washburn's, has returned from a week's visit to Toledo and Cleveland.

George Reinberg is busy putting his place in first-class shape for next season.

Phil Schupp had a telegram May 2, stating that the body of Charles Treanor, who died at Miami, Fla., will pass through Chicago Thursday, May 5.

E. C. Amling says he deprecates the way the Mothers' day demand has centered on white carnations, but looks for the demand eventually to broaden and the day become one of the principal flower days of the year.

Weiland & Risch report that Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, was in town the other day with word of financial disaster having overtaken a shoe store that also deals in flowers at Fond du Lac.

Winterson's Seed Store has sold the greater part of its carload of bay trees.

Ned Washburn, who is at Pasadena, Cal., has sent home a number of plants of roses that do particularly well there and which have been planted out at Hinsdale. Four of the plants, he writes, are a variety that is practically thornless.

A grower named Paul Rycerski, last employed by Bassett & Washburn, broke into the daily papers this week by taking three shots at a Chicago doctor with whom he had an altercation.

F. C. Struvy has for the time being abandoned the idea of selling out his two retail flower stores and the property they occupy and removing to California. He has restocked the stores and will continue the business unless someone comes along who will meet his terms.

Lord & Burnham Co. last week signed the contracts which insure the erection of its plant at Des Plaines, the deal having hung fire for several weeks. It is expected that it will be possible to begin the actual work of construction, before the end of June. George Sykes, manager of the Chicago branch, has put in an immense amount of hard work on the details and appears to have covered every point necessary to give the company almost ideal manufacturing facilities.

The governor's pen slipped when he

The foundry which the Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, sold a year or two ago to a man named Dopp was practical-

BOSTON.

The Market.

While cut flowers seem less abundant than a few weeks ago, business remains quiet on the whole and sales are less brisk than might be expected. We had one of the coolest Aprils on record, following a phenomenally warm March, and have so far escaped both the cool and hot waves experienced in other sections. Outdoor bulbous flowers, such as narcissi and tulips, are now at their flood tide, with sales not satisfactory. Spanish iris, indoor grown, is more abundant, as are gladioli, and each of these is selling well. Carnations are getting smaller, with prices holding about the same. It looks now as though they would be inadequate for the Memorial day demand. Roses are getting poorer. Carnots and Kaiserins are coming good; the first named sell much the best. Beauties are plentiful, but quality is on the wane. The same holds true of Richmond and Killarney. The rose business is rather flat now.

Lilies are plentiful and selling better. Callas are getting poorer. Valley sells quite well, as do gardenias and cattleyas. Of summer orchids there is now a nice variety, and the coming big orchid show will, it is expected, give these a boom. Snapdragons and mignonette are getting poor. Marguerites are plentiful, yellow being in heavy demand. Quite a few cornflowers, calendulas, ixias, tritonias and other miscellaneous flowers are seen. Pansies are abundant, but English primroses are fewer. Ten weeks' stocks and candytuft are each seen in quantity. Sweet peas are quite plentiful. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, and adiantum, are more abundant and of better quality.

The cool weather has retarded bedding plant sales, apart from hardy stock, such as pansies, daisies and forget-me-nots, but all specialists are anticipating a busy season. A nice variety of flowering plants, such as hydrangeas, roses, marguerites, schizanthus, etc., are now coming in.

Various Notes.

Strawberries in pots are a feature at present in a number of the better class stores. A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, is the principal grower of these and has a fine lot ripe at present. Marshall is the variety grown.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, is one of those sending in quantities of finely grown and flowered hydrangeas to the Park Street market. They are handled by Thomas Pegler.

A recent call at the Harvard Botanic Gardens found the tulip and narcissus display at its best. Beds of one variety, with a groundwork of violas, pansies, forget-me-nots or daisies, were attractive, but less interesting than the well planted mixed herbaceous borders, which contained large quantities of bulbs in small clumps. Darwin and other late tulips, undisturbed for three years, have improved wonderfully since they were planted. Narcissus Poetaz Elvira had increased surprisingly both in numbers and vigor. Mr. Cameron planted many thousands of mixed early tulips through the shrubberies, where they made a fine show.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is the grower of some of the finest ten weeks' stocks coming into the market just now.

A. P. Peterson, lately grower for A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, has started in business as a landscape gardener at South Lincoln, Mass. Mr. Peterson is a good grower, full of energy and ambition, and we wish him every success in his new field.

We are pleased to see W. F. Aylward back on duty again at 6 Park street, after ten days' sickness.

Entries, which closed April 30, for the big orchid show at Horticultural hall, are satisfactory. There promises to be a battle royal for the blue ribbon of the show, namely, the $1,000 prize for the best 400-foot group. High class music, the best procurable in Boston, has been engaged to give concerts each afternoon and evening.

William Bewsher has assumed charge of Mrs. Butler's estate at Nahant, Mass., and Henry Eaton, late of Longwater, North Easton, has gone to F. L. Ames' estate in the same town.

A number of local enthusiasts are interested in the formation of a gladiolus society, a meeting for which purpose is called for May 27, the second day of the big orchid show, at Horticultural hall. About 100 have already expressed their wish to join the new society.

A tour of the Boston park system, with Superintendent J. A. Pettigrew, last week showed everything to be in luxuriant condition. There has been little winter-killing and all the early flowering shrubs have bloomed profusely. Just now the prunus family are good. One big specimen of P. triloba fl. pl. on the site of the old Parkman estate was fine. The azaleas are coming into flower, A. Vaseyi being well open. It is charming near some of the many waterways. The Cornus florida are going to be a grand sight again and will be at their best within a week. Some beautiful trees of the pink variety are included. In the nursery were seen many new things, including a batch of Wilson's new Chinese introductions from Veitch & Son, of London.

The Willow Hill Greenhouses, West Roxbury, are having a fine cut of Gladiolus Blushing Bride and other bulbous stock at present.

April continued cool until its close. This, however, has not detained carnation growers from planting out their stock. Some started work last week, while during the present week about all are busy getting the little plants out in the fields.

Among visitors last week we were pleased to see Joseph Freeman, of Los Angeles, Cal., who is specially interested in orchids. Mr. Freeman says that there is quite a boom in orchid culture in California.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, early in June. The exact date cannot yet be announced. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society offers an attractive prize list, in addition to those of the American Peony Society, and local growers will make a big display.

The Eastern Nurseries, of Holliston, of which Henry S. Dawson, son of the veteran, Jackson Dawson, is proprietor, have had the heaviest spring trade in their history and have handled some large orders.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will occur May 17, the week prior to the big orchid show. A good program is being arranged for this meeting.

The store of J. Newman & Sons, on Tremont street, is always an interesting one to inspect. The windows are tastefully arranged with everything desirable and up-to-date. Orchids, yellow marguerites, Spanish iris, gladioli and many other seasonable flowers are used in a pleasing and artistic manner. The firm believes in advertising in the daily, as well as trade papers, which accounts in large measure for its constantly growing business.

Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, are handling some of the best carnations seen in the local market at present. Many of these are their own seedlings, which are full of promise.

R. C. Bridgham, who recently acquired the store of Albert Scott, on Beacon street, has done a splendid trade during the last winter. The Newtonville Greenhouses of Mr. Bridgham supply much of the material sold.

Present indications are that cut flowers will be at something of a premium for Memorial day. The usual outdoor flowers, such as lilacs, late tulips, etc., will be all gone and some crops intended for the end of May will be gone. Those who are able to get good crops of indoor flowers will get excellent prices for them.

W. W. Rawson & Co. have had a fine display of tulips and narcissi at their Marblehead nursery recently. Some hundreds of varieties of Darwin and other late tulips are just coming in season. The displays of these in T. F. Galvin's store on Tremont street last year proved a fine advertisement.

Dahlia specialists, who are numerous in Massachusetts today, are all making great sales. J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, is already pretty well cleaned out. He will plant over twenty acres for stock this season, and he is only one of many.

The lilac display in the Arnold Arboretum will this season be at its best about May 10. May 1, such varieties as oblata, hyacinthiflora, Charles X, Marie Legrave and some others were already pretty well open. The collection of malus near the Forest Hill entrance gates is remarkably fine at present.

J. T. Butterworth has a remarkably fine specimen of Miltonia vexillaria, also a splendid Cattleya Mossiae Reineskiana, which he hopes to show at the coming orchid exhibition. His cattleya display at present is fine.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are now getting some splendid summer roses from their cool houses, which are selling well. Their White Killarney are of splendid quality. W. N. CRAIG.

Adolph E. E. Koch, foreman for George E. Buxton, of Nashua, N. H., has purchased the Whittemore Greenhouses at Nobscoot, Mass. Mr. Koch will make a specialty of carnations.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is not much to say regarding news of the local cut flower market, as it remained and ran along about as the week previous. The store men say that if it had not been for a good deal of funeral work, business would have been mighty dull. Among the leading uptown florists, a few big weddings, receptions and dinners helped out greatly the last of the month. The wholesalers had plenty of cut stock in all grades all during last month, but the stock did not clean up as they liked and prices were low. Fancy stock in roses did not go over $6 to $8 per hundred and in other consignments come from. Carnations from this point are also of excellent quality.

Callas are slacking up, but Harrisii are coming in fine now and the demand has been good for them at $8 and $10 per hundred. Lily of the valley has had a good call all month, owing to a great many weddings. Tulips are scarce just now. Wild smilax is in demand, but becoming scarce, and all in cold storage has turned out to be a bad lot.

The greenhouse men have at last got the right kind of weather for planting out, which will be started at once, and this will keep them mighty busy all during this month.

Various Notes.

The employees of the city forester say that the recent cold weather had a bad effect on all the shade trees throughout the city and it would take several weeks for them to recover. The great destruction, however, was to fruit trees and grapes.

The new board of park commissioners of East St. Louis was organized last week. Dr. H. C. Fairbrother and Dr. G. H. Parsons were elected members of the board recently. The commission now consists of H. C. Bernard, president; Spencer Ellsworth, secretary, and Stephen T. Le Page, treasurer. The other members, including the newly elected ones, are M. V. Joyce and Edmond Goedde.

Edwin Gerlach, who has been for many years bookkeeper and manager for C. A. Kuehn, will leave this month to enter into business on his own account, but not in the flower business. He will be one of a new firm in the roll paper business. Mr. Gerlach was a favorite with the local trade and all wish the young man good luck in his new venture. A. Myer, recently added to the force, will take his place. The style of the new firm will be Hagen & Co.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt returned home last week from Fort Wayne, Ind., where she went to attend the funeral of her grades as low as $10 per thousand was asked. Long fancy Beauties also dragged some during the whole month.

of large funeral pieces to work up recently. Theater trade, too, this season was good.

C. Young & Sons Co. furnished a large wedding reception at the Columbian Club last week, which was finely executed. The decoration consisted of wild smilax, plants and white roses, the cost being $500. James Young, president of the company, says the cold weather during April caused a slump in their mail-order business, in both seeds and plants.

The grand opera season by the Metropolitan Opera Co. in the big Coliseum made quite a run on some of the uptown florists for good stock in roses and orchids.

Theo. Miller, at Euclid and Delmar avenues, is making changes in the front of his establishment. The front when completed will be one of the most attractive fronts of any of the west end florists.

The nice weather that followed the cold brought out the buyers of plants in full force again and from now on the planting-out season will be rushing.

Miss Rose O'Connor has opened a store at Broadway and Rutgers street. She, too, says business since she opened has been good and that there is room for a few more on South Broadway.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club takes place Thursday afternoon, May 12, at 2 o'clock, in hall No. 2 Odd Fellows' building. President George B. Windler would like to see a large attendance, as a large amount of business left over from the last meeting is to be disposed of.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Flowers fluctuate more than stocks. A striking instance of unexpected changes in prices was shown in the antics of cattleyas. Heavy crops and an anticipated light demand caused prices to fall; cool, dark weather, so potent a factor in retarding the opening of the cattleya flowers, shortened the supply surprisingly. A rapid advance followed. Cattleyas today are much higher than a week ago. Valley, too, advanced sharply under the influence of heavy buying for April weddings, and despite the arrival of outdoor stock, prices still hold fairly well, but with little vim to the demand. The outdoor valley is not good enough to play much part in the market. Inquiries for white carnations in extraordinary quantity for the end of the week have had a bullish effect on the carnation market. It is pretty difficult to sell your flowers for the decidedly moderate prices ruling at present when some fellow comes along and wants to know what part of an order for so many thousand white you will take and at what price, especially when there are so many hungry mouths to fill.

The other features of the week ending Wednesday, May 4, are the addition to the market list in the shape of peonies from Virginia, red, white and pink; local tree peonies, eastern Beauties and Kaiserin, southern dagger ferns and the big bunches of pansies made up of corsage size.

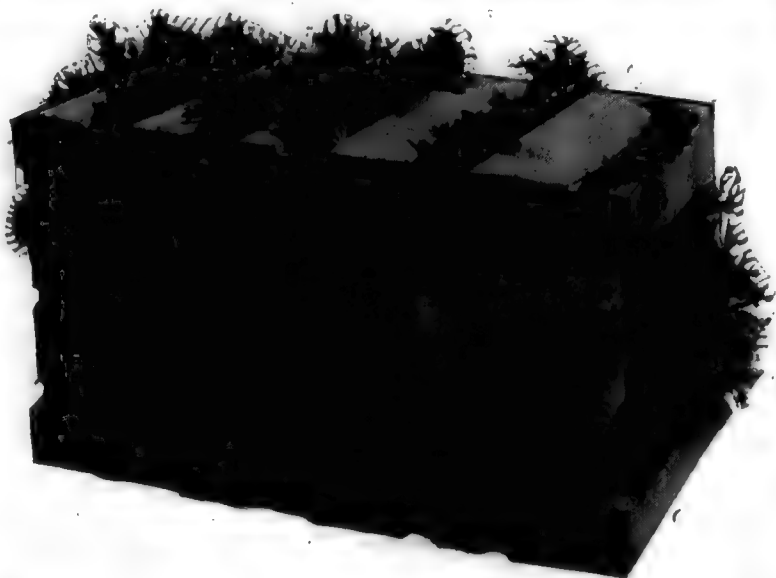

A comparison of prices seemed to show that they are holding better than usual at this season, owing perhaps to so much stock having been dumped out during the excessively hot weather following Easter, and to the cool, dark weather now prevailing.

Sweet peas continue popular, all the fine stock commanding excellent prices. Carnations are in moderate favor. Uneasiness rules on the uncertainty of Mothers' day. Beauties are shortening a trifle in supply; prices firmer. Kaiserin and Jardine go slowly. Maryland is a trifle more popular. The buyers still favor Killarney. Richmond, White Killarney and Maid sell best in the medium grades.

Yellow daisies are in brisk demand, the sales being in much larger quantities than formerly. The receipts of Easter lilies and callas have fallen off, but there is no especial demand for either. The popularity of the snapdragon has increased wonderfully with the improvement in quality and in quantity. Greens are quiet, except the new dagger ferns.

A Window-Display.

The head of the house leaned over to Fred, junior, telling him to be sure not to let Phil miss the automatic lawnmower. The enterprise of Henry F. Michell is so well known that Phil anticipated a treat. He got it, but not quite in the way expected. It was not an automatic mower that would pull its unwilling pusher rapidly over the velvety sward, but a suggestion that the passerby get a hustle on and push his lawnmower before the grass gets too long. There in the window of Ten-eighteen was a lovely lady pushing a lawnmower with energy and perseverance most inspiring; closer

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held May 3. Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, was the speaker of the evening. His address appears elsewhere in this issue.

Exhibits came from Robert Scott & Son, who showed Duke of Wellington; from Charles E. Meehan, who staged Niphetos and Perle; from H. W. Collins, of Doylestown, who brought Sunrise; from Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, who showed three climbing roses, American Pillar being prominent.

The Cocos at Riverton.

Interest in hardy perennials is so keen just now that it requires courage to talk about anything else; yet there is at least one tropical plant of such world-wide fame that it vies with the hardy perennials, even at this, the height of their season.

No, it is not the kentia, for kentias are as numerous in Europe as in America. It is Cocos Weddelliana.

Ever since the bright, horticultural minds of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, at Riverton, became past-masters in the art of growing Cocos Weddelliana, the fame of their stock has become world-wide. It was a hard, uphill fight. First came the trouble with seed turning yellow after transplanting from the flats into pots. That difficulty was passed long ago, when each seed was given a little pot of its own, deep and narrow, so that the roots remained unbroken when shifted. Then came that critical time when the seedlings (perhaps they were in the plant stage) turned yellow. They were apt to do this from different causes; sometimes they grew too fast; sometimes they got "cold feet;" sometimes they were starved or badly potted or the soil did not suit. Then came a trick in potting that the Dreers learned; a simple, common-sense method, but a trifle at variance with the books—that was all. After that came what might be called the danger of prosperity. The plants became so popular that they were exhausted in the smaller sizes as soon as finished and sometimes sooner. A little courage, a little self-denial, and this danger, too, was passed by the simple expedient of signs reserving blocks of inspection showed that she covered the same particular patch of sward more than once, but every good mower knows that a perfect lawn cannot be made in one mowing. The way that girl went around corners was great; it reminded one of nothing so much as a cakewalk on the million-dollar pier at Atlantic City. With a human partner she would have won hands down.

A PROBLEM SOLVED

Every florist knows the difficulty of making flowers stay fresh on a luncheon or dinner table when the weather is warm. Our ~~water ways~~ overcome this trouble; no dirt, no danger of staining the cloth; they are beautiful in themselves, can be made into any shape and are especially adapted to flowers with short stems that will not obstruct the view.

choice stock for shifting into larger sizes.

Now you can see at Riverton a range of glass nearly filled with Cocos Weddelliana, the plants ranging from little seedlings to specimens in 7-inch pots. The finish on the larger plants is wonderfully fine. The cocos is now grown singly and not made up with several plants in a pot, a plan that was tried at one time to a limited extent. The single plants display a grace that it is impossible to obtain in made-up plants.

Various Notes.

Antoine Wintzer, vice-president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., spoke before the Florists' Club in Horticultural hall, May 2, on "The Rose." Mr. Wintzer's talk, so full of enthusiasm and love for his work, was an inspiration to his hearers not soon to be forgotten.

Charles Pappas, who succeeded N. B. Gachor at the Broad Street Station flower stand over a month ago, has quite transformed that well known spot into a floral bower rather than a flower booth.

Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Pa., expect to plant 5,000 of their new sport from My Maryland. The firm has been complimented on the beauty of this sport, which is of a deeper pink shade than the parent rose, as seen with them.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has commenced closing at 6 p. m.

W. Bainbridge is running the old Savage place, at Mount Airy.

M. Rice will sail for home May 22, on the steamer President Grant. He writes from Berlin enthusiastically about the good things he has captured.

The Leo Niessen Co. received the first dagger ferns of the season from the south May 2.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, R. I., has commenced shipping his fine Beauties and Kaiserins to W. E. McKissick & Bros. The large flowers and clear color of this stock are much admired.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are working their factory overtime getting out metallic design orders for Memorial day.

Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., send daily shipments of choice stock to Berger Bros., that would be well worth while for every grower to see. The cutting, grading and packing are exceptionally well done. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

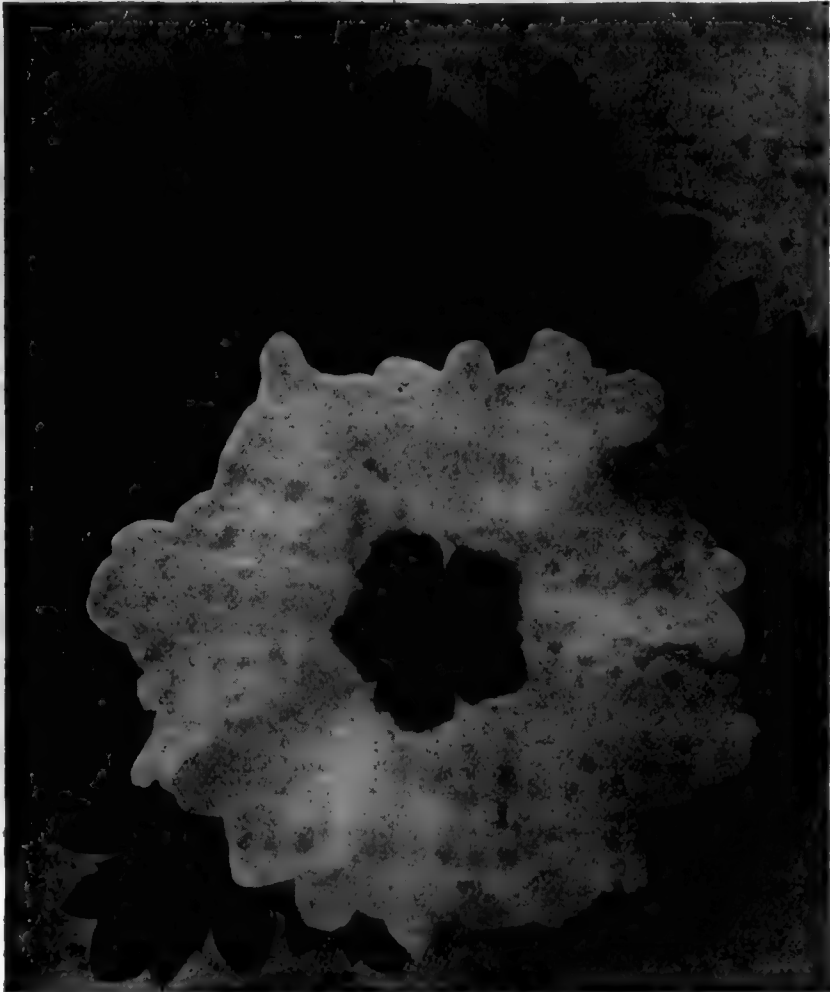

The Market.

The vagaries of the New York climate are "past finding out." On Saturday, April 30, from a normal April temperature of 50 degrees, there was a rise in a few hours of 30 degrees, and at 6 o'clock in the evening it was 80 degrees in the shade. Sunday the reaction back to 50 degrees came and May opened, and continued on Monday, chilly enough for March. But the low temperature is a welcome development for the seedsmen and the nurserymen, who are still working night and day to overtake their orders, with forces of workers double in numbers.

In the cut flower market there is a summer steadiness in values that, while not satisfactory to the wholesalers, will probably hold until Decoration day, and the June weddings will lift the average for a time. The quotations of last week hold good, the only recession of importance being in orchids and gardenias, the latter, from the southern shipments, being used extensively by the street merchants. The long-stemmed stock, however, brings good prices still; 50 cents would purchase the best orchids Saturday.

Few roses sold above 6 cents, and 25 cents bought the best Beauties. There was a good clean-up of everything as the week closed, and a fairly good Saturday was the general verdict. The price of 2 cents was about top for carnations in quantity. The stock is all excellent. Ordinary grades of carnations are becoming scarcer every season. Soon our growers will have only the best or none to offer. It is just as easy to grow good carnations as the older and smaller varieties, now fast becoming obsolete. Good callas bring $1 a dozen. The supply of spring flowers is as abundant as usual.

Various Notes.

Sunday, May 8, is Mothers' day and will be observed beyond all expectations. It behooves the wide-awake retailers everywhere to gather as large a stock of white carnations and roses as possible, to emphasize the day by window displays in white flowers and proper announcement of the sentiment. Grand Army posts have sent out orders to the veterans as to the day's observance and the big newspapers everywhere have honored the memory of motherhood in no half-hearted way. It is only two years since Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, conceived the idea and millions observed the day last season, while this year recognition seems likely to be almost universal.

Auctioneer Elliott announced the continuance of his sales until July, so encouraging have been the attendance and the prices. The auction rooms are all crowded with eager buyers and retail values have been easily obtainable.

Moving day is here and May 2 found Traendly & Schenck and Walter Sheridan safely housed in their fine new stores at 131 and 133 West Twenty-eighth street, where they have elegant, light offices, an abundance of room and unexcelled facilities. Later in the week Ford Bros. will have their new store ready for occupancy and by July 1 George Saltford will also be settled in his new store at 129, with office conveniences on the second floor. Several others of Twenty-eighth street are earnestly seeking accommodations west of Sixth avenue.

We shall know something definite as to the plant market at Fifty-ninth street at the next meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, May 9, in the club's rooms at the Grand Opera House building on West Twenty-third street. Definite announcement of the date of the club's outing will then be made and an exhibit and the usual house festivities should draw a record attendance.

A. L. Young & Co. are now at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, close to the opening of the subway and one of the most convenient centers in the wholesale district.

E. W. Fengar, of Irvington, N. J., contemplates considerable addition this season to his big plant there. His shipments of iris to Henshaw & Fenrich have been large and all were disposed of at good prices. His carnation stock is extra good and of all the newer varieties.

C. McTaggart is much encouraged by his success at his seed store at 123 Warren street, and will shortly add to his space and conveniences. There is evidently a place for all the seed houses, old and new, in this great center, and room for all in the wonderful development of the suburban business.

Hitchings & Co., at Elizabeth, are adding a large brick, fireproof building to their immense plant and have just completed the building of a corn house in three compartments for Howard Gould, insuring a rotatory crop of sweet corn throughout the year. Asparagus and strawberry houses have also been built there lately.

The large brick addition to the Lord

& Burnham Co. factory at Irvington is now completed, and the building at Des Plaines, Ill., for this firm, will shortly be ready for the growing western business. The Lord & Burnham Co. has finished the range of houses for J. B. Duke, the tobacco magnate, and an interesting experience was a visit to the plant when the orange trees were in full bloom and a hive of bees was uncovered and the busy bees started in the business of manufacturing honey.

Andrew Elder, superintendent of the Lord & Burnham Co. construction department, has just returned from a trip to British Columbia and California, including many western cities, superintending the erection of a large curved-eave house at Los Angeles while away. He reports the great west uniformly prosperous.

Herman Wise, formerly with the Manhattan Flower Market, is now with Charles Millang.

August Millang maintains a handsome plant display constantly at 41 West Twenty-eighth street, and is preparing for a big Decoration day demand.

Kessler Bros. are turning over daily immense quantities of bedding stock, and their business has had no let-up day or night since April 1.

The supply of competent wire workers in the east is away below requirements. In Brooklyn, H. Kenney says he could use twenty more the year around. The same complaint is heard by all the supply men. There seem to be no native wire workers in the country.

Julius Dilloff, with Schloss Bros., left Tuesday, May 3, for Frankfort, Germany, to be away until July. He will attend his sister's wedding when in Europe. The sympathy of the trade is extended Mr. Schloss and his brother in the loss of their father last week, at the age of 85.

One of the largest of the June weddings will be the Roosevelt celebration, when Teddy, Jr., will become a benedict. Wadley & Smythe have the order and have been instructed to make the decoration the finest ever seen in this city.

B. Rosens and his family have arranged to remove to their summer home at Avenne-by-the-Sea about the end of May.

J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., has moved into his new store at 41 West Twenty-eighth street, which, while more roomy than the old one, is much too small for the volume of business.

A fire which burned to death four fine horses belonging to David Clarke's Sons, at their stables in the Bronx, fortunately was extinguished before the flames reached the barn and greenhouses. It was a narrow escape from destruction of all the horses, wagons and other property. The loss will total above $1,000.

S. Masur, of Brooklyn, reports a successful season with weddings, funerals and gardening work, far beyond his other years. A larger store is in contemplation and has become a necessity.

William Shanley, the florist who was reported kidnapped, missing and a mystery to his Brooklyn friends, last week was heard from by wire from San Francisco with a request for funds, but no particulars as to the cause of his disappearance.

Charles A. Dards, at Madison avenue and Seventy-second street, has been busy with weddings since Easter. Eight large ones last week were a part of his bookings and many are listed for June.

The popular ferns, Boston and Scottii, have numerous progeny. The new children last year were Giatrasii and Kesslerii, and now comes the youngest one, Wagnerii, from Flatbush. There must be several new ones by this time, too, at Tarrytown. It will be at this rate "the survival of the fittest," though they are all good ones and worthy of long life.

Prof. John Craig, of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, will give an address Monday evening at the Florists' Club on "Some Phases of Experimental Work in Relation to Floriculture."

DES MOINES, IA.

Fire on Thursday afternoon, April 28, destroyed all of the packing sheds, the boiler-room and the stable at the establishment of the J. S. Wilson Floral Co. These buildings were situated at the east end of the greenhouses. The total loss in buildings, wagons, tools, etc., was $2,000; insurance, $1,000. Fortunately, the wind was from the southwest; otherwise the whole plant would have been ruined. As it was, only about ten feet of the ends of the houses adjoining the sheds was damaged, and the plants for a distance of about fifteen feet back. The fire started from some unknown cause, but it is thought that a teamster who was hauling soil, and dumping it near the stable, went into the stable to light his pipe and threw the lighted match down in the straw, for the fire was discovered three minutes after the teamster had left. The boilers are not damaged in any way, but many of the steam pipes are twisted out of shape. Rebuilding will be started at once on the sheds. The stable will be built at some distance from the rest of the buildings.

SPOTTED FOLIAGE.

What is the matter with the plants I am sending you? The spotted foliage has appeared on every plant in the greenhouse in the last four days and the trouble is spreading rapidly. H. L. S.

The leaves enclosed appeared to have been sun-scalded. Following a spell of cool, cloudy weather, a few warm days will develop considerable trouble of this kind. Defective glass is also responsible for considerable burning. Pick off the worst affected leaves. Take note where the scalding is worst and, to counteract it, give the glass a light shading. Keep the foliage dry. Do any watering in the morning, rather than in the evening. Ventilate freely and do not close up the house tightly at night. Your plants will probably grow out of this trouble.

Vegetable Forcing.

HOW TO GROW CHIVES.

I have had several requests for chive, or cive, as it is sometimes called, and wish to know something of its culture. I should like to have it the year around. Should the roots be placed in the greenhouse or coldframe at once, to make good, strong tops, or should they be put in in the fall? After the roots have been set out, will they produce the little onion-like tops continuously, or will one cutting be all that can be obtained? Would a coldframe be suitable for winter culture, when the temperature gets as low as 20 degrees below zero? Where could these roots be obtained? C. S. S.

Chive or cive is one of the hardiest of all vegetables and 20 degrees below zero will not harm it in the least. You can place some of the roots either in a frame or cold greenhouse for a winter supply. The leaves can be cut frequently, for as fast as one lot is cut another takes its place. Chives are easily propagated by division of the root, and increase quite rapidly.

The plant does not bolt to seed much, as do onions or hallots. It has a neat habit and makes a really pretty edging for a path in a vegetable garden, entirely apart from its culinary uses. W. C.

RENEWING OLD SOIL.

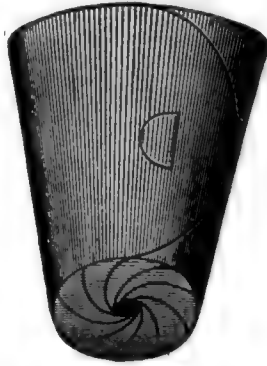

Last year I put about six inches of fresh horse manure on the solid beds in one of my lettuce houses and kept it well soaked with water all summer. In the fall I found the soil to be in excellent condition and I grew just as good crops on it as I did on new soil. I have read that this plan would work year after year. Now, I want your opinion as to whether as good crops of lettuce can be grown another year, or year after year, on the same soil if treated as I have stated. Or would you advise me to change the soil this year? B. A. B.

This system of heavy summer mulching for soil in beds, to be unchanged that season, is a most excellent method of getting it into the best shape that is possible under the circumstances, but soil that has been used in the beds one or more seasons has not the value of fresh, new soil, properly prepared. You may make it quite rich, or you may sterilize it and use lime on it, and try several other schemes, but even then your soil will not be as good as new soil from a new, clean field, provided that this new soil is rich and in good mechanical condition when put in. To change crops and grow something else next season would, as a rule, be better than growing the same crop on the same soil. It is not uncommon for good crops to be grown on the same soil for two or more seasons, but many are the failures experienced by so doing. As a rule, therefore, it is somewhat risky to use the soil two seasons.

The greatest sources of trouble in using old soil are the plant diseases and insect pests that accumulate and are kept over in the soil. Another point is the advantage which outside soil has in being open to climatic conditions. Freezing, thawing, sunshine, wind and rain all have some beneficial effects on the soil.

It is often a question whether or not

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

Diseases of Lettuce.

The diseases of lettuce under glass include two or three leaf diseases, the somewhat general disease known as rot or lettuce drop, and two root troubles; namely, rosette and the root-knots caused by nematodes.

Anthracnose.—This disease was described first by the writer in 1896. The fungus, Marsonia perforans, causes little perforations in the leaves and small lesions in the midrib. It is not general and is probably controlled largely by greenhouse conditions.

Downy mildew.—This disease is the work of another fungus, Bremia lactuæ. When it appears in houses it forms yellow spots on the upper leaf surfaces and appears below as whitened, downy-covered areas. Like the downy mildew of cucumbers, this disease may spread over areas with great rapidity, where conditions favor it. It is wisest to keep water from the foliage where this disease prevails. Sometimes it will be necessary to gather and burn the diseased leaves or plants. The trouble will usually be controlled by not having too high temperatures or too much moisture on the plants.

New leaf-spot.—What appears to be a new leaf-spot disease of lettuce prevailed last spring in the Brooklyn district. Our Massachusetts friends may tell us that they cannot sell the Grand Rapids variety in the east. However this may be with them, owing to its rot resistance when well handled, Grand Rapids is a standard variety with us.

Rot or drop.—In this disease the plants may rot off at the surface of the earth, and the central parts of the plant, especially of head lettuce, may become attacked by the rot fungus, Botrytis vulgaris. The fungus, which appears as a whitened covering of spores, etc., on the surface of the diseased parts, survives in the soil and breeds as a cluster fungus, sclerotinia, in manure and refuse heaps. It is clear that all refuse should be burned, and soil treatment is about our only method of controlling or preventing the rot. A careful regulation of the temperature and the water supply is always necessary where it prevails. A night temperature of less than 50 degrees will usually be found successful, while a high temperature will add to the trouble.

Rosette.—The illustrations given in Circular No. 57 are familiar to many of you. The stunted lettuce plant, with rosette form and diseased roots, is in an advanced stage of the rosette fungus, rhizoctonia. As before stated, this fungus is favored by acid soils and is one of the most troublesome diseases of this district. It attacks the seedling plants, causing the fibrous roots to decay and the stem to rot off under the surface.

When such plants are diseased in the plant bed, the trouble is usually reproduced in the house. In these larger plants, as in the smaller ones, the fungus causes the roots to die, and, owing to short supply of absorbing roots, the central axis of the plant fails to lengthen, and we have a rosette form produced. These diseased rootlets show by their brown color and may be detected with a hand lens.

The method of treatment has been stated before; namely, thorough steaming or thorough soil drenching with formaldehyde.

Tip-burn.—We sometimes have trouble through the death of lettuce leaves around the border. This seems to be a form of tip-burn, which is only partially explained. As a rule we suspect some deficiency of the soil conditions or of the roots, which results in reduced water supply to the plants.

Nematodes.—These microscopic worms, which are a common source of disease in the south, sometimes occur in greenhouses with us. Violets are often at-

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Stock is still plentiful. The demand for it, however, is tolerably good. Roses clean up well, but only at fair prices. The Beauties, the two Killarneys, Taft and My Maryland are excellent. The supply of carnations slackened somewhat in the early part of last week and prices ruled slightly better than at the last writing. White carnations are especially in request, for Mothers' day. The large number of sweet peas meet with a fair sale. Peonies are beginning to come in and they sell well. Good longiflorums, Formosas and valley are offered.

Green goods are still plentiful, especially plumosus. More smilax is coming in and, with Sprengeri, meets with a quick sale. The market, as a whole, seems firmer than for some time.

Various Notes.

William Murphy reports large advance orders for white carnations for Mothers' day, and an extra large order from C. J. Jones for sweet peas for one of the social affairs of the week. Mr. Murphy says the peonies of his consignors were not damaged in the least by the frost. He has also good Formosa lilies.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the present post-office building was celebrated on Monday, May 2. Flowers, plants, flags and bunting were everywhere in evidence. A large American flag—said to be the largest in the country, 51x101 feet—hung from the pinnacles in the center. Smaller flags hung from the many windows. About 2,500 yards of laurel roping, 200 natural and artificial palms and plants, a large amount of red, white and blue bunting and many flags were used in decorating the corridors and workroom. About 6,000 carnations were given away. The body of a modern steel railway car, enveloped with laurel, was on exhibition in front of the post-office on Government square. The street railway mail cars were also in gala colors for the event. About four dozen bunches of cut flowers of various kinds adorned the officials' desks. Capt. Monfort, the postmaster, said that the interest in the event was greater than was anticipated.

The music-loving part of the city's population are enjoying the May festival, which continues from May 3 to 7, inclusive. President Taft has graced the event with his presence. His box at the Music hall is decorated with the national colors. The many social affairs arranged in his honor consumed many flowers. Decorations for teas and dinners in honor of out-of-town guests are also giving the florists work to do. Many corsages were also made up.

C. E. Critchell, who had just enough carnations to fill orders last week, again has almost more than enough of good stock to meet all demands. He is also offering first-class sweet peas and plumosus.

Weiland & Olinger have a good crop of spring Beauties. They received their first gladioli last week. Mrs. P. J. Olinger is at present the official bookkeeper at the greenhouses at New Castle.

J. A. Peterson says that his hydrangeas are selling fast.

L. H. Kyr received his first peonies May 3. He is also offering good smilax. J. M. McCullough's Sons also offered their first peonies from Tom Windram on this date.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Murphy spent Sunday at Richmond, Ind.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23 1910.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in House Bill No. 23252, which nursery interests oppose. See page 56.

THE Canadian Pacific railroad, through its gardening department, is distributing free to its employees 80,000 packages of flower seeds.

NEBRASKA sweet corn and vine seed growers appear to be having some difficulty in contracting the necessary acreage. At least one of them is advertising in country papers to reach farmers.

THE English seedsman who was haled into court for violation of that country's new Prevention of Corruption Act, because he gave a case of whisky to a customer's gardener, has been declared not guilty by a jury.

CAROLINE C. SCHISLER, wife of Henry M. Schisler, of Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis, died April 29, after a short illness. The funeral took place Sunday, May 1, from the family residence. Mr. Schisler is well known in trade circles.

THE first estimates of general crop damage by the freeze of April 22, in the central states, prove to have been, as usual, greatly exaggerated, but there has nevertheless been much loss of early vegetables, calling for considerable replanting.

D. H. GILBERT says that the melon crops in Florida escaped the frost. "We had unusually cold weather, with high winds, for several days. It looked as though for two or three days, April 24 and 25, everything would be killed by the frost, but the damage to the melon crop is slight and, with favorable weather, prospects are good for an average crop."

J. J. BUDLONG, vice-president and manager of the L. A. Budlong Co., Chicago, in speaking of the damage to onion set crops caused by the blizzard of April 22, said, April 28: "So far as we are informed up to date, there is considerable damage done to onion sets which were up at that time. I do not believe the seed in the ground was hurt, and the extent of the damage cannot be told until a reasonable time for recovery has elapsed. As a general proposition, this class of damage usually proves to be less than the first estimates."

BURNET LANDRETH, secretary of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, states that a board meeting will be held in New York City today, Thursday, May 5, to suggest what in the opinion of the board should be the wholesale values, at this present moment, of certain scarce varieties of garden seeds sold for immediate shipment, also as respects trade prices for advance orders for certain biennial seeds now being daily booked for shipment next winter. This proposed course of naming trade values is only suggestive and will be taken by the board consequent upon the marked advance in price of all unsold European stocks of seed of biennials of the crop of 1909, and all uncontracted stocks of incoming crop of 1910. The values, notably of beet, cabbage and turnip, have in many cases enormously increased in France, Germany and England.

MICHIGAN PEAS.

C. B. Pyle thinks a black cat must have crossed the path of the Michigan pea growers. Writing April 28 from Harrisville, where the Sheap-Johnson Seed Co. has its headquarters, Mr. Pyle said:

"As to the effect of the April blizzard on the peas that were already planted, will say that at present there is no way of estimating the amount of damage, as only now and then are there any signs of germination, the seed simply lying dormant in the ground.

"Many growers took advantage of the extremely fine weather during the month of March and as a result about two-thirds of the peas to be sown in this section were put into the ground. Some of the more conservative have held off planting and still have the seed in their barns. It seems to be a case of 'he laughs best who laughs last.' There will, no doubt, be many complaints of seed perishing in the ground and poor stands, and in some cases a second sowing will be necessary. The question arises, where will we get the seed to replace those that are lost?

"It seems the hoodoo still follows those interested in the growing of garden peas for seeds."

E. J. Sheap, of the S. M. Isbell Seed Co., Jackson, Mich., is president of the Sheap-Johnson Seed Co.; F. G. Johnson is secretary and treasurer, and C. B. Pyle manager. They are contract growers for the wholesale trade, making a specialty of garden peas. Headquarters are at Harrisville, but growing stations also are maintained at Lincoln and Ossineke, Mich.

PEAS IN WISCONSIN.

E. L. Olmsted, who is in charge of the Wisconsin branch of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., is alarmed for the safety of peas not germinated in the Wisconsin pea growing district. Writing at Green Bay, May 2, he said:

"We feel certain that considerable damage will result to the growing pea crop from the snow, rain and continued cold weather that has been general over the Wisconsin pea growing section since April 22, but we cannot give much estimate of the probable amount of loss for another ten days or two weeks. The earlier sown peas were up before the storm and we doubt if these will be damaged to any great extent, except upon the fields so situated that the water did not drain off quickly. We fear the most loss upon those fields sown a few days before the storm, as the wet soil, together with the continued cold, will cause a portion of the seed to rot, especially of the more tender wrinkled-seeded sorts. We feared that the unusually warm weather of March and early April could not continue and we cautioned all of our growers having sorts like Telephone and Gradus not to sow until the last week in April, but do not know, as yet, how many followed instructions. One favorable condition is the continued cloudy weather, as this will permit those vines nipped by the frost to recover and will also allow the soil to dry without crusting the top.

"Practically none of the growers in upper Michigan had sowed peas before the storm and the only damage that we can see likely to result there will be from late seeding on account of wet soil.

"Taken altogether, this storm is most unfortunate for all of the Wisconsin pea growers and their customers, as stock seed this season is too valuable to lose and there is practically none for resowing, if this should be necessary on any of the fields. In our own case we have not a single bushel for this purpose, as we have contracted our entire stock seed reserve with our growers."

CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

"Now that our spring hoeing is practically done," writes A. J. Pieters, at Hollister, Cal., under date of April 27, "we are in position to give you some idea in regard to the condition of the crops. It is almost enough to say that we have never had a better season than the past, taking it as a whole. The crops all look well. The only fly in the ointment may be said to have been the unusually cold winter, which killed part of our French stocks of radish. The French seed is rather tender and many of the young plants were winter-killed. In some cases this leaves a thin stand and in others we have had to reseed, with the attendant lateness of the crop. However, this is a small matter when we take the fine appearance of the other crops into consideration. But we shall be a little short on some of these French stocks of radish on this account. Onion is the best we ever have had and if nothing happens we shall have a fine crop. In this section we do not fear the heat as they do elsewhere, but we do fear the mildew and the season for that is not yet past, so we do not want to be too certain of the crop till we get it. Lettuce, parsley and salsify are all in good shape, and sweet peas are excellent. The fact that we have a fine location has been made more evident lately, since C. C. Morse & Co. have purchased land in this valley. Next year there will be several times the number of acres planted to seed in this valley that there were the year the writer began the growing business."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending April 23 were as follows:

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $20,182.

BUSINESS OF SEED GROWING.

Tracy Writes for Farmers.

In the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, which has a circulation of nearly half a million copies among farmers, William W. Tracy writes of "Vegetable Seed Growing as a Business." While many of the facts are matters of common knowledge in the trade, still whatever Dr. Tracy says of seed growing is of interest to those engaged in the seed business and his opinions, as expressed in the article, may be taken as representing the general view of the most conservative and thoughtful element in the trade.

The development in the United States of the art and industry of seed growing has all come within the past century, says Dr. Tracy, but its growth since about the time when the United States Department of Agriculture was organized as a separate branch of the government has been so rapid that seed growing as a distinct industry is now well worthy of the attention of all interested in American agriculture. Previous to about 1862 there was comparatively little trade in garden seeds, and still less in farm seeds in this country. Sales were practically limited to supplies for new farms and the planting of town gardens, and even the majority of town gardeners endeavored to save from year to year what seed they expected to need for their own planting. There were then no great truck farms, each using vegetable seeds by the hundreds of pounds, such as are now very common.

Growth of the Business.

One indication of the amount of business done in seed growing is the number of people engaged in it. Records of only about forty-five firms that were in business in this country as distinctly seed merchants previous to 1862 can be found, while a list of American seedsmen published in 1908 includes the names of over 800 American firms whose sole business is the growing and handling of seeds, with more than 650 other firms making seeds an important part of their business.

There has also been a great increase in the quantity of seed handled by single firms. In 1820 the fact that he had just received from England 300 bushels of garden peas and over 400 pounds of onion seed was considered by a Philadelphia seed merchant as justifying his advertising that "having received this ample supply," he was "prepared to fill all orders." In 1907 one of our large seed merchants thought it best to contract for the growing of over 120,000 pounds of onion seed and more than 150,000 bushels of garden peas to meet the expected demands of the ensuing season, and his sales showed that he had acted wisely. A single firm of American seedsmen uses for the storing and handling of its stock of garden seeds buildings having an aggregate floor surface of nearly 700,000 square feet, an area equal to more than sixteen acres.

Previous to about 1850 the greater part of the garden seed used in this country, with possibly the exception of a few species, such as sweet corn and melon, which do exceptionally well here, was imported, but the art of growing seed of the best quality at the least cost of labor is now so well developed in America that we are able to grow seeds of many species of better quality and actually at less cost than they can be produced in Europe, even by the employment of their experienced labor at 40 to 60 cents a day, against the $1.50 to $2 a day which is paid here, and we now export no inconsiderable quantities of lettuce seed and that of such other species or varieties as do exceptionally well in some sections of this country. There are some species, however, which can still be grown to better advantage in Europe, though, thanks to the great diversity of climatic and soil conditions and to American energy and inventive skill, the number of these is constantly decreasing. With the exception of a greater dependence on hand labor and a less common use of machinery, European methods of growing and handling seeds do not differ materially from those of this country, and therefore it will not be necessary to specifically refer to them again in this article.

Extent of the Industry.

In early times most of the garden seed produced in America was grown by the seed merchants themselves, either on their own farms or on lands in their immediate vicinity and under their own personal supervision, while seed growing as a business distinct from that of the seed merchant was unknown. As buyers learned of the superior value, at least for use in this country, of American-grown seed, the seed merchant's business increased until he was no longer able personally to attend to the seed growing on his neighbors' farms or even on his own. The supervision of this work was therefore handed over to some of the merchant's employees or to one of the most capable of the neighboring farmers, who looked after the growing and handling of both his own and his neighbors' seed crops, at first under the direction and control of the seedsman and acting as his agent, and then independently on his own account. Thus the business of the seed grower as distinct from that of the seed merchant was established. In many cases there was simply the organization within the original firm of a seed-growing department. Now the growing of seeds and their marketing are quite as distinct as are the manufacture and the sale of other merchandise.

It is practically impossible to give an accurate statement of the area in the United States which is annually devoted to raising garden seeds, or even to make a reliable estimate of the total acreage. Even on farms where the chief money crop is garden seed, only a portion (often but a small portion) of the whole farm is in a seed crop any single year, the remainder being occupied with ordinary farm crops in order to maintain a profitable crop rotation. The major portion of American-grown small seeds, like those of onion and lettuce, is the product of large farms located in California, though many thousands of pounds of such seeds are still grown in the eastern states. One who is very familiar with seed growing on the Pacific coast estimates that the total acreage of vegetable seed annually planted in California is not far from 6,000 acres; others have placed the area as high as 10,000 acres, but for one cause or another no usable seed is secured from many of the fields. Practically all American-grown cabbage seed is produced on from 600 to 800 acres located on eastern Long Island, and in the Puget Sound region.

Vine crops, such as cucumbers, melons and squashes, are grown for the seed crop in all parts of the United States, some being still grown in the northeastern states and others in Florida, with still others in California; but the great bulk of the supply of vine seeds comes from Michigan and the central western states. It is impossible to give more than an estimate of the total acreage actually planted for the seed crop. Often a large portion of the fruit in a field planted with the expectation of marketing it as fruit is used for seed, and other crops which were planted for seed are marketed as fruit. Probably a total of 60,000 to 80,000 acres of vine crops is annually planted with the expectation that more or less of the crop will be marketed as seed.

Seed peas, beans and sweet corn come mostly from the country between central Connecticut and western Nebraska and north of the southern boundaries of those states. There is even greater uncertainty of yield with these crops than with vine seed, and the area planted varies greatly in different years, but it is probably no exaggeration to state that it ranges from 100,000 to 200,000 acres, though if a full crop were secured from even as much as ninety per cent of the smaller area mentioned it would be much more than a full year's supply.

Fifty years ago there was little general appreciation, even among experienced gardeners, of the importance of the quality of the seed used (provided it only would grow) as a factor in determining the real profit in growing a crop. Today no one appreciates this more fully than our best gardeners. In a recent publication a gardener is mentioned who sold muskmelon seed which he had saved and then paid five times as much as he received for his own crop for seed of the same variety which he had reason to believe was better than his own selection, the results obtained showing that he had profited by the exchange.

Elements of Value in Garden Seeds.

The elements of value in garden seeds are in some respects the same as in the case of other produce, though often of different relative importance, and the market value of seeds is often affected by qualities and conditions which are peculiar to them, so that a consideration of these conditions and the consequent business methods of seed merchants is an symmetrical seed is usually inferior in varietal character to that which is dull red in color and shrunken, twisted and unsymmetrical in shape.

VITALITY.—That every grain under favorable conditions shall not only germinate but develop into a healthy plant is regarded by many, particularly by those of little horticultural experience, as the most important of all qualities. As regards a single grain, viability is essential to its value as seed; but of two samples, in one of which sixty to seventy-five per cent of the grains will develop into plants typical of the sort, the remainder not germinating at all, and in the other, though every seed will grow, only ten or twenty per cent will give good plants of the sort, the other eighty to ninety per cent developing into a medley of different forms and qualities, the first lot, though only sixty to seventy-five per cent viable, is in the majority of cases decidedly the most satisfactory and valuable.

The vigor and percentage of viability can rarely be told by even the most careful inspection of a sample, but is readily ascertained by germination tests, which, however, it requires some days to complete.

PURITY AND EVENNESS.—Purity and evenness of varietal character are the most important factors in determining the real value of seed. A seed is simply an embryo plant packed for transportation and carries within itself the immutable potentiality and limitation of development of the plant into which it may grow. Man by control of conditions of growth may secure more or less perfect development of these potentialities, but he can not add to or change them. They are made up of a balanced sum of the different tendencies which the embryo plant has inherited in varying strength from each of its ancestors back for an indefinite number of generations. The relative strength of these different influences and the resultant varietal character of the plant into which the seed will develop can not be learned from the appearance of the seed itself or even with certainty from that of the producing plant. It can be known only through an accurate and intimate knowledge of the varietal character of the stock from which the seed was grown or through the actual growing of a sample of it to full maturity. The term "sample" is commonly used by seed dealers as referring to the appearance and viability of a lot of seed, and the term "stock" as referring to its purity and evenness of varietal character.

RELATIVE SUPPLY AND DEMAND.—The commercial value of seeds is dependent, even to a greater degree than is the case with most merchandise, upon relative temporary supply and demand. A shortage can not usually be met with a fresh supply until the next season, and the cost of the seed of most vegetables is so small a proportion of the total cost of the crop that planters are willing, if necessary, to pay advanced prices, particularly if they think that the shortage of seed will result in the reduction of acreage planted and a consequent better demand and price for the crop.

On the other hand, most seeds are of comparatively little value for any other purpose than planting, and while they will often retain their vitality and consequent usefulness as seed for several years, the trouble and loss in storing them are so great as to be avoided if possible, and seedsmen are often willing to sell any surplus over the season's demands at very low prices. The production of even a small quantity more than the trade calls for thus becomes a menace to ruling prices and reduces the selling value of the entire stock on hand.

Commercial Practice in Handling Seeds.

The conditions just mentioned result in methods and practices in the seed trade which are somewhat different from those common with most lines of merchandise. A wise seed merchant will be unwilling to risk his reputation for handling pure and true stocks by purchasing by sample, no matter how good it may seem to be, unless he has some knowledge of the stock from which the seed was grown, and in most cases he will insist upon using only such seed as was subject while growing to his inspection and approval or which he knows was grown from approved stock. He will discourage the speculative growing of seed for sale by sample, because of the liability of such crops to disturb the balance between supply and demand, an overproduction often proving more disastrous than a scarcity. We have known of seedsmen buying such "pirate" crops simply to keep them out of the market. Early in the season the wise seed merchant will decide on the quantity of seed of each variety he can reasonably hope to dispose of the following year, and then contract with seed growers or directly with farmers for the planting of a sufficient area to produce that quantity. Contracts with professional seed growers usually provide for the planting of such an area as will with an average yield produce the quantity of seed contracted for and the delivery on the contract of such proportion of the entire yield of the grower's planting of that variety as each contract bears to the sum of all of his contracts for the sort.

The seed grower, however, sometimes becomes a speculator, and because of purchases or of the carrying over of a portion of previous crops it may happen that while he is unable to deliver more than fifty per cent of the quantity he has contracted for, the yield of his season's crop having been light, he can still honorably offer seed of the same variety at an advanced price; or in a year of exceptionally fine crops he may be able, after making delivery in full on all his contracts, to offer surplus seed from the same fields at greatly reduced prices rather than carry it over to another season.

Contracting With Farmers.

Generally, the professional seed grower plants his area of vegetables like cabbage, onions and beets, which require parts of two seasons to grow a crop of seed, or like lettuce and radish, which require special machinery for harvesting or fitting the seed for market, on lands under his immediate control, where they are cultivated and harvested under his own supervision; but annual crops like sweet corn, peas and beans, which can be well grown, harvested and cleaned by ordinary farm methods and the use of common farm machinery, are often sublet to farmers, the grower supplying the necessary seed and agreeing to pay a specified price for all the seed in excess of the quantity furnished for planting which the farmer may be able to produce on a given area and to deliver in such condition as to vitality and cleanliness that it is fit for seedsmen's use or can be made so without an unreasonable amount of recleaning. The farmer, however, is regarded as a simple cultivator, who is not held responsible for the quality of the seed except that it shall be grown from the stock seed furnished, be properly cultivated, and harvested so as to secure a good sample, and shall not be contaminated by other crops while it is growing or being harvested and cleaned.

Seedsmen and growers are often able to place seed contracts with farmers at much lower rates than it would cost them, even with the use of special machinery, to grow the crop themselves. That they are able to do so is due to the following conditions:

(1) Though it is true that certain local conditions of soil and climate are essential to the profitable growing of some species of seed, yet such soils are so widely distributed and their total area so much greater than is necessary for the production of all the seed needed that their possession and use for seed by no means insures a profitable crop.

(2) The growing of seed which is to go to some widely advertised seed firm seems to many farmers more attractive than the growing of grain for sale in the open market, and these men are so numerous and so eager for a contract that by competition they lessen the price the seed grower has to pay for growing his crops.

(3) A seed crop which can not be readily sold in the open market or used by dribbles, but must be delivered at a specified time and place, is often a desirable one on farms worked on share rentals.

(4) There are some vegetables, like melons, which will do particularly well and be enormously productive on new lands and which, because of little need of cultivation or of the necessity of fighting insects and diseases, can be grown there very cheaply, but because of lack of transportation facilities the heavy, bulky fruit can not be profitably marketed, while the more concentrated and lighter seed crop can be profitably grown and delivered at a price much less than the cost of production on older lands.

(5) Very often a seed crop which can be planted late in the season and with but little special preparation of the soil is a most convenient one to take the place of one of wheat or other grains which was badly winterkilled. This is often especially true of a seed crop of peas and beans, because the seedsman commonly advances the seed, which makes up from ten to twenty-five per cent of the cost of the crop.

Only a small proportion of the farmers who now grow seed crops do so because of special facilities or knowledge, or even because they have found them more profitable than general farming, but the majority (particularly in the case of peas and beans) do so rather through practical necessity, because of inability to secure the seed for planting these crops in any other way.

Seed merchants, and even seed growers, refuse to recognize the farmer who grows their seed crops as in any sense a member of the "trade," but regard him simply as a cultivator, with no technical knowledge of the variety of seed he grows and no greater interest in a seed crop than in one of corn or grain. It is not surprising, therefore, that comparatively few farmers continue to grow seed crops for as many as a dozen consecutive years, and seed growers are frequently obliged to select a new location in order to secure a fresh lot of farmers to undertake to grow seed crops. It is not strange that will be able to care for each one of them when it is in prime condition, but from various causes, often because of weather conditions, they are sometimes unable to handle some of their crops at the proper time, and they become too mature for canning. Often the only practically available use for such "get-away" crops is as seed, and when they are sold as such, being in the nature of salvage, the canners are glad to dispose of them at any price they can obtain. Canners also often find it profitable to clean for sale to seedsmen the seeds from the waste of such crops as tomatoes and squash, which were grown and used for canning.

Occasionally truckers' crops which could not be sold in the green state at prices which would equal the cost of gathering and marketing are allowed to ripen and are sold as seed. While the quality of such seed is not equal to that grown from selected and carefully bred stock seed, it is often as good as that of a seed crop, grown as many are, from general stock. It often happens that such crops grown by canners or truckers and those grown for the seed merchant are the products of the same or equally good lots of seed, in which case one is as good for seed as the other, provided equal care has been taken to prevent mixture with fruit of different varieties or with that which was grown from different and inferior stock. Seedsmen do not advertise that they make use of such crops; some of them deny that they ever do, but many cases are known where carloads of seed known to be the product of such "get-away" crops were sold to some of our most reputable seedsmen.

CRAB GRASS IN LAWNS.

Can you tell me the best way to get rid of crab grass in lawns? In St. Louis, Mo., it commences to grow about the end of June and it spreads over the bluegrass and kills it. Then when the first frost in the fall comes it looks bare and bad all winter. I have fixed up many places this spring and the young grass looks nice. R. F.

Crab grass, also known as barn grass and wire grass, in lawns is a common pest, always making its appearance in summer during droughty periods. One way to fight it is to keep the lawns well watered, when the lawn grasses will thrive and the crab grass give no trouble. Once it has appeared in bad form, mow the lawns, then give a thorough raking. This pulls up much of the crab grass. Run the lawn mower over again, and if necessary again, the object being to cut off as much as possible of the plant before it can seed. If the grass is not too abundant, it can be dug out by hand after closely mowing it. In digging it out give the lawn a dressing of good loam and sow some more lawn seed. Lawns kept well watered and fertilized will have little crab grass. It appears abundantly only when the ground is deficient in moisture.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

While reports of blizzards and freezing weather come from so many sections of the country, southern California is experiencing unusually hot weather for April, the temperature reaching 100 degrees, but with it there is a good breeze from the ocean, which tempers the heat and makes it quite comfortable in the shade. It is decidedly hot in the sun, but no one ever has sunstroke in California.

Business is fairly good, there being some weddings and other social functions, and many funerals. Flowers are blooming everywhere. Roses are in the greatest profusion, all of the hybrids being in bloom now, as well as the teas. Quantities of snapdragons and Spanish iris are seen in the stores. Some gladioli and Shasta daisies are coming in. Greenhouse carnations sell at from 25 cents to 50 cents a dozen in the stores. Field-grown ones are 5 cents a dozen on the street stands. They are fresh flowers and keep pretty well. Sweet peas are 10 cents a bunch.

The fields and hills are in gay array, being almost one mass of yellow on account of the wild mustard, which grows wherever it can get a foothold.

Various Notes.

The Los Angeles Floral Co., which conducted a store on West Seventh street, has gone out of business.

Dieterich & Turner are sending in some fine roses at present.

The Angelus Florist had a vase of pink peonies in the window. These flowers are seldom seen here, as they will not bloom in this climate.

M. Goldenson had an attractive window of yellow, white and blue iris and white sweet peas.

J. W. Wolfskill had some fine long Beauties, also some good Easter lilies.

Wright's Flower Shop had fine valley and orchids, as usual.

R. W. Saakes had a large decoration at the Hotel Alexandria for the banquet given for the hotel men, who have been holding a convention in this city.

George King has returned from his wedding trip and is again in his accustomed place with R. W. Saakes.

The Redondo Floral Co. had a big funeral order on Monday, April 25.

Mr. Meserve, the Signal Hill florist, who has a stand in the Broadway department store, has been having special sales of plants and seeds. Several thousand two-year-old roses, growing and in bud or bloom, were sold at 15 cents and 20 cents each. Asters, carnations, chrysanthemums, stocks and pansies from flats were sold at 2 cents each. Flower and vegetable seeds went at 2 cents a packet. A bougainvillea, fern and asparagus sale is now going on and great quantities have been sold.

The California Rose Co., of Pomona, which was started ten years ago and is now located on a new tract of land, consisting of seventeen acres, on West First street, has shipped this season 400,000 rose plants to different parts of the United States. Though the business has grown from a small beginning, 150 varieties are now propagated and the rose farm is now equipped with hothouses, new packing rooms and all modern conveniences. It is expected that the output next season will be over half a million plants.

A rose hedge half a mile long, and in full bloom its entire length, is to be seen at Rose Villa, in Pasadena. Hundreds of thousands of La Marque and Marie Henrietta make up a display that is worth going miles to see.

The first cherries of the season were sold to the Alexandria Hotel for $9 a box of ten pounds. The same hotel paid $40 for the first crate of cantaloupes, in which there were fourteen of the melons.

H. Kern, of Bonner Springs, Kan., has an especially prominent place in connection with the enterprise. He is not only a member of the board of directors, but is also general manager of exhibits and superintendent of no less than three different departments—the departments of agriculture, floriculture and tobacco. M. E. Chandler, the nurseryman of Argentine, Kan., is assistant superintendent of the department of agriculture. Mrs. M. E. Chandler also has an important share in the control of other branches of the exposition. Gerald Holsinger, of Rosedale, Kan., is superintendent of the department of horticulture.

For the trade interests there appeared William Pitkin, Rochester, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen; Irving Rouse, Rochester, chairman of the committee on tariff of the American Association of Nurserymen; J. H. Dayton, of Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.; Mr. Hoopes, of Hoopes Bro. & Thomas, West Chester, Pa.; W. P. Stark, of Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo.; Thomas B. Meehan, of Thomas Meehan & Sons, Dreshertown, Pa., and Messrs. Holsinger, Moon and Morey.

Preceding the hearing of the nurserymen's argument, Dr. L. O. Howard, Chief of the Bureau of Entomology, Assistant Chief Marlatt and others of the Department of Agriculture argued in favor of the bill, alleging great danger now and in the future of the importation of dangerous insects and plant diseases, also claiming lack of existing law to prevent such importation. Prof. Smith, of New Jersey, Prof. Simons, of Maryland, and Prof. Phillips, of Virginia, all state nursery inspectors, alleged deficient state organizations and funds and asked federal assistance in controlling the importation of dangerous insects and plant diseases.

Mr. Pitkin led for the nurserymen and stated that the trade favors control and inspection on safe, sane and practical lines, but is opposed most emphatically to the absolute powers granted by Section 8 of the proposed bill, which gives the Secretary of Agriculture authority at his discretion to prohibit the importation of nursery stock and other items mentioned from any foreign country or district regarded as dangerous, thus placing in his hands among other things absolute control of French fruit tree seedlings, the raw materials of the nurserymen, from which the American crop of fruit trees is produced.

Amendments were suggested, limiting these arbitrary powers.

The committee stated that it will consider the argument of the nursery interests, but no pledges that the bill will not be favorably reported and pressed for passage could be obtained.

The nursery interests will fight the bill to a finish, unless satisfactorily amended.

A BLUE ROSE

The Greatest Rose Novelty of the Century

It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.

The New Rambler (Violet Blue), hailed by the German rose growers as the forerunner of a genuinely cornflower blue rose, is a seedling of Crimson Rambler, very vigorous and hardy, and free blooming.

NEW ROSE AMERICAN PILLAR

NO Climbing Rose is attracting the attention that "American Pillar" does, and most deservedly so.
It is by far the best single-flowered climbing rose for outside purposes; and on account of the great durability of its flowers, it is the best single-flowered forcing rose.

July 12, 1909.

Gentlemen:

Let me tell you, too, that the American Pillar is a better Rose than you know, perhaps. The plant I had from you, which was planted this spring under unfavorable conditions, is now giving us a succession of most exquisite bloom.

Yours truly,

J. HORACE McFARLAND,
Pres. of American Civic Association,
Harrisburg, Pa.

COMMENT FROM THE LONDON GARDEN.

"A most notable feature in this glorious display (Temple Flower Show in London) was the New 'American Pillar' Rose. The large and attractive rich rose pink blooms are produced in immense clusters, the white centers of the blooms adding to their attractiveness."—Florists' Exchange.

through tickets to Denver, but care must be taken to have tickets read over the Burlington, and arrange leaving time so as to make connection with the Burlington St. Louis train No. 13.

All nurserymen's special cars will be consolidated at Oxford Junction on the morning of June 6, thus affording a daylight run together through western Nebraska and eastern Colorado.

The meeting place in St. Louis for incoming delegates will be at the Burlington offices, 728 Olive street, up to noon; after that, near the Information Bureau, Union Station. A committee of St. Louis nurserymen will be glad to meet members and assist in any way possible. Reservations for the St. Louis sleepers can be sent to F. A. Weber, Nursery, Mo.

Mr. Weber also confirms the previously announced arrangements for the entertainment of members and their wives while in Denver, not the least interesting of which will be the proposed complimentary trip over the renowned Moffat Route, said to be one of the finest scenic routes out of Denver. Funds for the entertainment features promise to be such "that the various stunts will be pulled off on schedule time."

The exhibits promise to be up to the average, if not in excess, and E. P. Bernardin, chairman of the committee on exhibits, writes, "We are promised some fine Colorado-grown ripe cherries, which all will enjoy."

THE SEASON.

The spring season of 1910 will stand as the record for brevity, yet in most cases nurserymen have found it possible to do a good bit of business, in many instances the fall and spring combined giving a larger volume of sales than ever before, with little left for the annual bonfires. It is to be noted that the fall business increases faster than the spring business, possibly due to the fact that the spring already is about as busy as it can be, especially where it is a short season, like this year. Here is how a few of the well known firms viewed the situation May 1:

W. C. Reed, Vincennes, Ind.

We have just closed one of the most satisfactory seasons we have ever had. There has been quite a shortage on almost all kinds of apples, except Ben Davis and Missouri Pippin, for which there was little demand. Peach of all kinds were in demand far beyond the supply. Montmorency, English Morrell and most kinds of sweet cherries were in strong demand and we turned down many orders for these before the close of the season.

Stock is looking well and we will have our usual supply. Two-year cherry promises the best we have ever grown. Peach buds promise well, although the stand is rather poor, owing to severe winter and late frosts. Demand promises strong. We have more orders on our books than ever before.

H. M. Simpson & Sons, Vincennes, Ind.

The spring has been so short that sales were not up to the usual amount. With us the fall business is always much greater and we really had little to offer for spring. We grow cherry mostly and noticed that the Montmorency had an exceptionally strong call—more than we could furnish from our own stock. Collections are coming pretty fair and we hope for a good clean-up.

For fall we expect to have our usual supply of first-class trees, planting about the same or possibly a little more on all lines at this point.

Ilgenfritz' Sons Co., Monroe, Mich.

We have handled the largest volume of business this spring that we have ever shipped in one season. Sales have been particularly large in apple, cherry and peach, together with a general assortment of other fruit stock and ornamentals. Prospects are unusually favorable for the coming season's business.

D. Hill, Dundee, Ill.

This season is surely a most peculiar one, and the warm weather in the early part of April cut short our season somewhat. There has been a heavy demand for evergreens and other ornamentals this season and some lines were quite short. However, the season will undoubtedly wind up satisfactorily.

Stark Bros., Louisiana, Mo.

Business with us has been good and, although we had a much larger stock than usual to dispose of this season, we are sold close on everything. As to volume of business, this season is the largest in our history, and with us the most satisfactory in every respect. The season here opened up unusually early and for a while it looked as though we would have a large surplus, but the season was lengthened out far beyond our expectation.

Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn.

Our business this spring has been somewhat heavier than a year ago. The most important feature of it has been the extremely early season. May 1 we find ourselves fully two weeks ahead in the amount of work done at the same date last year. There has been considerable damage here to young stock by the cold wave of the last weeks, but not as much as appeared at the time. The demand for fruit stock has never been so great as this year, caused principally by the enormous planting going on from Montana to the Pacific.

C. M. Hobbs & Sons, Bridgeport, Ind.

Our business consists largely of fruit and ornamental trees and plants. We grow and handle large quantities of ornamental shrubs and perennials. The shipping season opened unusually early and warm, crowding our shipping beyond anything we have ever known before. We have had an extremely satisfactory volume of spring business and will clean up closer than usual. Planting is mostly done and stock is starting off well.

it derided all claims as to the exceptional value of that property, but now that the controversy has been settled the commission takes a different view, perhaps because of the big check it was obliged to issue in Mr. Peterson's favor.

R. R. McCormick, president of the sanitary district, has appealed to the city council special parks commission to aid in a movement to make a park of Peterson's woods, which he greatly admires, and preserve them as a natural beauty spot. The commission received the suggestion favorably and will send the communication to the city council with a recommendation that it be referred to tions from the channel and have left no spoil banks. The land is fairly low, so there will be only from seven to ten feet of bank above the water's edge. It appears that this land should be set aside for park purposes, and, indeed, that the rest of the old woods should be incorporated in a district with it."

In his desired action, according to Mr. McCormick's letter, the council will have the support of both the Lincoln park and the West park boards, either one of which would have taken the initiative in the matter had it not been believed that the territory was outside both jurisdictions.

MOTHERS' DAY AT SALT LAKE.

According to newspaper reports, the ladies of Salt Lake City have been active and enthusiastic this year, as they were last year, in promoting the observance of Mothers' day. The reports, however, do not indicate clearly whether the preparations for the day have been conducted in such a manner as to be specially profitable to the florists. In order to have enough suitable flowers for the occasion, the club women placed large orders with California florists, one order alone including 10,000 choice white carnations. Booths and stands for the sale of the flowers have been erected in department stores and other convenient places and are superintended by young ladies appointed by the women's club. The managers of several stores offered to cooperate with the women by erecting and decorating booths. Florists of the city were also requested to lay in large stocks of white carnations.

While any flower may be used as the floral emblem on this day, the white carnation is the official flower among the club women of Salt Lake City.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.

H. A. Winter, manager of the Charleston Cut Flower & Plant Co., says that Mothers' day last year brought an exceptionally good sale and that he expects to double the business for the day this season. Governor Glasscock has issued a Mothers' day proclamation which may be of interest to florists generally. It is as follows:

The beautiful custom of setting apart one day in each year to pay just tribute to our mothers should not be abandoned or forgotten. Our days of youth may be over, and the closer ties that bound us to our mother may have been loosened, but not a link in the chain of affection that bound her heart to ours has been broken, and we think of mother today as we always did, the noblest, sweetest and best of all God's creatures.

In appreciation of the love and devotion of our mothers, and with an earnest desire to perpetuate the observance of the hallowed custom, I, William E. Glasscock, Governor of the State of West Virginia, request that be observed by all churches—as

and that all persons attend church on that day and wear a white carnation.

Given under my hand and the seal of the State, at the Capitol, in the City of Charleston, this twenty-sixth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, and in the forty-seventh year of the State.

W. E. GLASSCOCK.

By the Governor:

STUART F. REED,
Secretary of State.

OREGON, ILL.—H. Boyden reports that C. G. Gilbert & Co. will go into the wholesale business this season, and that they are building three new greenhouses, one 22x100 and two 20x100, and a potting shed and boiler room, 25x100.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business last month was most satisfactory. Stock was none too plentiful, owing to the continuous dark, rainy weather; therefore there was no falling off in prices. Roses suffered considerably from want of light, but the supply was just about equal to the demand. Some unusually fine Beauties were shipped in from other cities, mainly Chicago and Kalamazoo.

Spanish iris, miniature gladioli, ixias and other flowers along this line are coming along nicely and selling well. Bulb stock is nearly done for. Outdoor bulb flowers have suffered from the continual rain, making them unfit for use.

There have scarcely been enough carnations to go around lately. What there are, are good. Sweet peas are none too plentiful; in fact, they have been quite scarce all season.

Various Notes.

Walter R. Maebius, who conducts the flower store in Gray & Worcester's drug store, has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism for nearly two months, and during part of this time he was laid up at Mt. Clemens. Despite this handicap, he has been doing a nice business under the management of his assistants.

Albert Pochelon, manager for the Bemb Floral Co., may be seen any Sabbath day working among the flowers and shrubs in his large garden on the boulevard.

The recent meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, although held on a rainy evening, was well attended, and Frank Danser read an interesting and able paper on the "Cost of Operating a Retail Store." He said that the prices of carnations, roses, etc., in a retail establishment, should be set at a fair average instead of continually fluctuating according to the market. He emphasized, among other things, that florists should be more careful in their bookkeeping than is now the rule, and that they should watch the actual cost of operation and regulate prices accordingly. The observance of Mothers' day was strongly advocated by all the members. H. S.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Florists here find department store competition severe, prices advertised being below those the trade can quote on creditable stock.

DENVER.

The Market.

The business of last week was rather quiet. Plenty of stock of all kinds was available, with the exception, perhaps, of Beauties. Carnations have been coming in rather heavily and the market has difficulty in keeping them cleaned up, so prices are down. The quality is good.

Most of the retailers report trade as being behind former seasons. Some say it is due to weather conditions. Roses are beginning to show the effects of the heat. The spring plant trade has opened a little, there being some call now for pansy and geranium plants and bedding plants, due no doubt to the continued mild weather.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. A. Valentine has been at Glenwood Springs for a couple of weeks.

The Colorado Florists' Club's first card party and ball was a complete success, some fifty couples taking advantage of the entertainment offered by the committee. The music, furnished by Berry's orchestra, was much enjoyed by all.

The Columbine Floral Co. has moved to 1553 Curtis street. E. S. K.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Business in flowers and plants during the week has been reasonably brisk, but not rushing, so that additional salespeople were not necessary.

Various Notes.

The florists' stores are exceedingly attractive at this season, with lavish displays of tulips and hyacinths. The store of Paul Thomann, in the Whitcomb house, shows what artistic ability can do in a small store.

The Florists' Association meets next Monday evening, May 9, in the Cutler building club rooms. Reports will be expected from the various committees appointed on account of the S. A. F. convention. The general committee is busy with plans for the entertainment of the visiting florists.

Albert F. Vick, captain of the bowling team, is training his men so they will probably win all the prizes in sight. E. F. R.

ASHTABULA, O.—L. Silvius & Son, who have been engaged in the gardening business, have dissolved partnership and the business will hereafter be conducted by L. Silvius.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.The Market.

Business last week was about the same as usual. Flowers are plentiful just now, with prices fair. Carnations are now retailing at 50 cents per dozen, and roses of good quality at $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas bring $1 per hundred blooms. Callas and lilies are sold at $2 per dozen, good snapdragons at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Bulb stock from outdoors is good and retails at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen, tulips and daffodils being the chief item. Funeral work is good and calls for lots of short-stemmed stock.

Some of the florists are unusually busy with gardening work. The weather last week was quite cold. Frost was reported here one morning, but no damage resulted.

There is still a good call for pansies and daisies, at 25 cents and 35 cents per dozen roots. There is a good demand for ramblers and other climbing roses, and also for shrubs, etc.

The street faker was with us again last week, with an immense lot of carnations. From present indications, most of the growers will have their ten weeks' stocks, candytuft, etc., in on time.

Various Notes.

Provision is to be made by the local Horticultural Society for a display of the flowers grown by the contestants in the home garden movement at the annual show of the society in September. Provision will also be made, probably, for the issue of certificates by the Horticultural Society, giving honorable mention to the children making the best showing in the contest. These will be in addition to the regular prizes. A silver cup will also be given by a local firm of druggists, who handle seeds as a side line.

H. A. Jahn will have some fine sweet peas for Decoration day.

OUTDOOR WORK.

While planting of deciduous trees and shrubs is now over, evergreens may still be removed. Always avoid exposing the roots to sun and wind, and water well before filling the holes. The soil cannot be made too firm about the roots. A mulch of littery manure the first season is beneficial. As growth advances it will be noticed that there are a good many dead and sickly branches among deciduous stock. Remove these, if possible, before the plants flower and do any needed pruning of live wood as soon after flowering as possible, not before blooming, as is too often done. Since the recent rains, hardy perennials have made rapid growth. Keep the soil stirred among them. It is a good time now to plant out any seedlings raised last winter, which have been transplanted into flats.

Late sown sweet peas are never so good as early ones. Put supports to them before they get too long. A good mulch between all the sweet peas now will keep weeds down and assist in maintaining coolness and moisture in the soil. Plant another batch of gladioli. Cover these deeper than the early plantings; six inches is not too much. Tuberoses should also now be planted without delay, but these lack the popularity of former years. Asters, stocks, carnations, violets and many of the hardier plants are now better out in the field.

LILAC SUCKERS.

Will suckers from double lilac bushes bloom if transplanted, and when is the best time to take them off? G. M.

Suckers from any lilacs can be taken off and transplanted, either in fall or early spring. In the case of your double white variety, unless the plant is on its own roots, you will probably find that any suckers taken off will turn out to be the old purple, single variety. Suckers, except on own-root plants, should be removed as they appear. If allowed to grow, they will soon outgrow the grafted portion. In purchasing lilacs, always get own-root plants if possible; they are far the most satisfactory. C.

Greenhouse Heating.

A SMALL OHIO HOUSE.

We are building a lean-to house, 25x28 feet and ten feet to the ridge, with 16-foot bars to the south and 12-foot bars to the north. The south wall will be five feet high, with thirty-six inches of glass under the plate. The west end will be half glass and the east end will be connected with the side of another house. We will remove the wall of the old house, where the east end of the lean-to adjoins it, and there will be five feet of glass in the upper part of this end of the lean-to; that is, from the gutter up. How many 1½-inch pipes will be needed to heat the new house to 55 degrees in zero weather, using hot water? How many 2-inch pipes would answer the same purpose?

L. F. C.

To heat the house described to 55 degrees, it will be well to use three 2½-inch flow pipes and either thirteen 1½-inch or ten 2-inch returns.

PIPING AN ILLINOIS RANGE.

Please give me directions for piping my new greenhouses. They are each 20x80 feet, five feet to the gutter and twelve feet to the ridge. Four of the houses are connected and run east and west. They are well protected on the north by a barn and other buildings. The boiler shed is located at the east end. The south house has eighteen inches of glass in the south wall. The gables of all four houses are glass to within three and one-half feet of the ground. Both side and end walls are double boarded, with paper between. These houses are to be heated to 60 degrees, with the outside temperature at 10 degrees below zero.

There is also a separate house of the same dimensions, running north and south, with glass in both gables. This house is located across a driveway, twelve feet east of the boiler room. A temperature of 70 degrees is desired for this house.

We wish to use 4-inch pipe, as we have a large quantity of that on hand.

How many houses can be heated by a tubular boiler, 3x9 feet, containing twenty-eight 3-inch flues, and how large should the grates be? Also give the dimensions of a chimney that would answer for two such boilers.

E. C. S.

It will require eight 4-inch pipes to give a temperature of 60 degrees and

A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Are not facts like these worth an investigation?

twelve to give a temperature of 70 degrees, under the conditions mentioned. Two flows and either four or six return pipes can be used in a house.

Two boilers, such as described, should heat six or eight houses 20x80 feet. The grates should be three feet square. The chimney should be thirty-five or forty feet high and twenty inches in diameter.

ONE HOUSE, WITH PARTITION.

I am planning to erect a house 18½x110 feet, connected on the north and west. It will have cement outside walls, with three feet of glass above the cement. I expect to put in a glass partition and use the north sixty feet for roses. Will one run of 3-inch pipe, with four 2-inch returns, be sufficient for the other fifty feet, run at 48 to 50 degrees, in this Kansas climate? I want to use the 50-foot end for violets, and as a cool house for bulbs, etc.

What would be the best lumber for a greenhouse floor, over a cellar about 29x30 feet? Should the floor be laid closely, or left rather open, so it will dry out better? The furnace and coal will be below.

For a house eighteen feet eight inches wide, which has three feet of glass in the east wall, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather, eight

2-inch returns will be required, in addition to one 3-inch flow pipe. Even better results could be obtained by using three 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. For the rose house, use three 2½-inch flows and nine 2-inch returns.

Southern pine will be found a good lumber for the greenhouse floor. It should be laid closely, to prevent injury to the plants by coal gas.

BOILER AND BUILDING.

We wish to get your advice on a few points in regard to greenhouses. Which is the better, a sectional boiler or a horizontal tubular boiler? How much lower should the boiler be than the return pipes, to secure good circulation? What is the best size and style of pipe for carnation and chrysanthemum temperatures? Should there be two rows of top ventilators and should they open from the ridge or the header? What system of water supply is now generally used, the overhead tank or the underground air-pressure system? What extra glass is a boiler capable of heating before the next larger size is required, as in the case of an increase in the amount of glass? A. F. C.

While the sectional boilers have advantages, especially if the glass is likely to be enlarged, many florists are using for large ranges something in the nature of horizontal tubular boilers. Several styles of each class are advertised in the REVIEW; send for the manufacturers' literature, acquaint yourself with the merits of each, and you will then be able to select the one best suited to your needs.

The higher the returns above the boiler the better, but good results can be obtained where the lower ends of the return are two feet above the top of the boiler, in small houses.

For houses up to 200 feet in length, it is a good plan to use 2½-inch flows, allowing one for 250 to 400 square feet of radiation. These can be upon the plates, or part of them may be on the purlin posts. Then use enough 2-inch returns so that there will be (including the surface provided by the flow pipes) one square foot of radiation to four square feet of glass.

One line of ventilators hinged at the top is generally used.

The elevated water tank has been and is generally used, although the underground pneumatic tank is now being installed by many.

In selecting a boiler it is always well to use one which is twenty-five per cent larger than is likely to be required, and if this has been done the amount of glass can be increased to that extent. When a boiler has a large grate surface it is often possible to run it up even above its rated capacity, especially if the class of plants grown will not be injured by a slight drop in the temperature of the houses in extremely cold weather.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a fairly good demand for cut flowers last week, with the supply fully equal to it. Funeral work was good, using up large quantities of flowers. Ten weeks' stocks are beginning to put in an appearance, for which there is a growing demand, while sweet peas are also coming in abundance. Carnations retail for from 35 cents to 75 cents per dozen and roses from $1.50 to $4. Violets and bulbous stock are about at an end, while bedding stock is coming in in quantity.

Various Notes.

S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, has recovered from his recent illness and was a visitor in Philadelphia last week.

F. Macrae's Sons have just begun setting out their carnation cuttings. They are preparing for a general overhauling and extensive repairing of their range of houses during the summer months.

John D. Duly is now gardener at the estate of Mrs. F. N. Anderson, near Newport.

The Hope Greenhouses, Miss Florence Willard, proprietor, 279 Massachusetts avenue, have so much outside gardening and landscape work that extra men are wanted.

William Hoffman, of Pawtucket, has a large stock of bedding plants for Memorial day.

Mrs. Brandt, wife of Arend Brandt, is seriously ill at her home on Van Zandt avenue, Newport.

Joshua Vose has a large booking for dahlia roots for immediate delivery.

Johnston Bros. have just received a fine importation of palms and bay trees.

M. Macnair has been busy of late with funeral work, wedding decorations and decorations for social functions.

One of the busiest places in town is that of T. J. Johnston & Co., Ed. Brooks, manager. He says he is too busy to even talk about it.

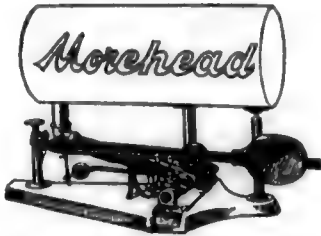

M. J. Leach & Sons, Pawtucket, have more than 50,000 young carnation cuttings well under way. They consist of White Enchantress, White Perfection, Mrs. Thomas Lawson, Boston Market, Pink Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Windsor and several varieties of unnamed seedlings.

William Hay has just received a carload of building material for his new rose house, 60x300 feet, of iron framework, which he is to erect at Oaklawn.

George Johnson & Son, of Elmwood avenue, are unusually busy this spring. They have sixty-five men at work, employing five teams constantly. The men and work are divided into three departments—forestry, under Edward W. Healy; nursery, under James McAndrews, and landscape, under John Sharkey.

J. Kopelman & Co. are cutting a fine crop of sweet peas from their farm in Oaklawn.

John Macrae has his carnations all out. He began this work April 5, two weeks earlier than ever before, and the young plants are looking fine. He has about 25,000 of them, mostly Enchant-

ALBANY, N. Y.

Preparations for the second annual flower show of the Albany Florists' Club were discussed at a special meeting of the club held recently at the business place of one of the members. Fred A. Danker, chairman of the show committee last year, gave a preliminary report on the finances of the show held at the armory last November. The report showed that the committee had on hand a cash balance of $140.53 and that the sum of $198 is still due the club for advertisements in the official program and for tickets not yet turned in by members. All bills have been paid except some premiums. A full financial report of the show, Mr. Danker said, would be ready for presentation at the May meeting of the club.

A committee composed of five members, with John Sambrook, Watervliet, as chairman, was appointed to call upon the florists, growers and others interested in the trade, to ask them to exhibit next fall.

President Fred Goldring exhibited at the meeting some seedling carnations brought from his greenhouses at Font Grove Station. Fred A. Danker placed on exhibition a handsome light pink seedling carnation raised in his establishment. Henkes Bros., Newtonville, showed two handsome maroon colored carnations raised by them. William Hannell, Watervliet, had a creditable display of large white carnations, Bride and Bridesmaid roses.

A luncheon was served by the social committee, who also brought forward J. J. McCarthy, who enlivened the evening with his clever parodies of popular songs.

NORFOLK, VA.

The Market.

We are having here a remarkable season. We are at least three weeks ahead of time. All outdoor stock is in full bloom. All outside bulbous flowers are done with, except a few straggling tulips of the late blooming kind. Roses of all kinds are in full bloom, except Crimson Rambler.

From all indications there will not be many outdoor blooms for Confederate Memorial day, which comes May 13, unless Spanish irises come out, which they may do if we get a little more rain to hurry them up. The rainfall has been sadly deficient in this part of the country, but on the whole I think we have no reason to grumble.

Business in bedding plants is brisk and there is a big demand for almost all kinds of plants, especially large stock.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

The recent cold snap, which did a great deal of damage to fruit crops, potatoes, etc., also killed a vast quantity of outdoor flowers, and has therefore given a better tone to the market, as up to the time of the heavy frosts the outdoor flowers were flooding the market and, of course, had a tendency to depreciate the value of cultivated stock.

Last week was a big week among the Masons, and this, together with a brisk demand for funeral work, enlivened a week that would otherwise have been rather dead. The cold weather checked crops somewhat, but at the same time there was enough to go around, and just enough business to keep stock on the move. Most of the florists are now having large cuts on carnations and roses.

Mothers' day is growing in popularity, and people are commencing to observe it more than usual. Heavy orders are being booked for white carnations and roses for that date, while the florists are boosting the price on white flowers for that day.

Although the cold snap has greatly checked the progress of outdoor stock, at the same time it is feared by many that home-grown peonies will be in before Decoration day; however, it is hoped that the weather conditions may be such as to prevent such a calamity.

Business, through the month of April, varied a great deal, but in general all seemed satisfied with results.

The weather kept one guessing, and we had quite a variety, including snow, rain and frosts. It really seemed that March and April had changed places, as we had our March weather in April and vice versa.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the establishment of J. T. Young, East Fifth street, May 2.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson and son, William, returned last week from a most enjoyable visit to New Orleans, La. The good time they report was due to the generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cook, with whom they were visiting.

The Miami Floral Co. last week finished planting 60,000 carnations out in the field. This is all they intend to put out; the rest of their stock they will grow on in pots until the time comes to plant in the bench. This company is cutting some fine gladioli.

John Boehner has a fine crop of giganteum in bloom now.

HOSE UNDER GLASS

"Electric" Hose is perfectly adapted to the hard, constant service required in a greenhouse.

Increase in our sales to florists during the last few years has been enormous.

"Once a customer, always a customer," has come to be the rule.

The hose is made of alternate tubes of pure rubber and jackets of BRAIDED seine twine. The tubes and jackets are vulcanized by tremendous pressure into a unified fabric.

It will outwear, three to one, a hose of ordinary, "lapwelded" construction.

It will be economy in every way for you to use "Electric."

NEW ORLEANS.

Unusually cold weather for this time of the year has been experienced here these last few days, cutting down the supply of outside flowers and injuring field roses, which look bad just now.

Several new florists have been establishing themselves lately in the lower part of the city. On St. Claude avenue, which is going to be one of the finest of the city, is the establishment of W. Bierhorst. A newly built greenhouse, with an office in front, gives a fine appearance to his place. Mr. Bierhorst says he does a strictly decorating and cut flower business.

George Thomas is located near one of the new boulevards, which is expected in the near future to be the fashionable residence district of New Orleans. His business has been improving and also his greenhouses. He has just completed a new structure, to be used first for growing chrysanthemums and afterward for general stock for his spring trade.

P. Chopin has his establishment situated in the most populous and business part of the garden district. He says that he is doing well. He raises part of his own stock, using at this time a quantity of gladioli. Their orchid-like appearance helps him to turn out beautiful designs.

F. Faessel has demolished his greenhouses and is moving them, with the largest part of his stock, to Ocean Springs, Miss. Mr. Faessel has been for many years doing a good business in New Orleans, where he is yet largely interested in real estate. In his future location he intends to establish a local trade, with the shipment of flowers to other markets.

W. Rehm left for Europe a few days ago. He will be followed next month by M. Cook and family. M. M. L.

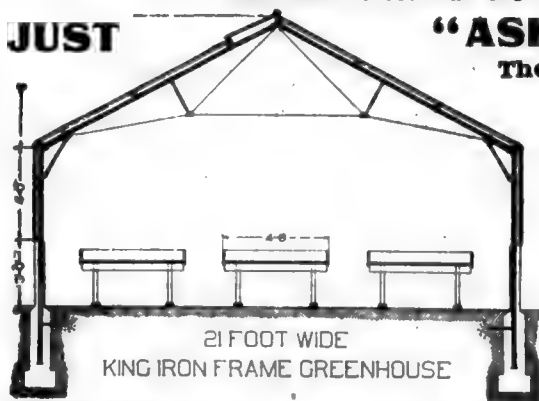

ALVIN, TEXAS.

Erratic weather has made trouble for the shippers of cape jasmines. March was warmer than usual and the middle of April found the season ahead of normal. The latter part of April, however, was cold and there was a severe norther the last days of the month. At first the growers of cape jasmines feared the buds would open by May 1 and be too early for Decoration day. Later they began to hope the crop would begin moving by May 10 and be just about right for the national holiday. Some of the growers say they do not look for many shipments to go out before May 15.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking. "Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE TWO ESTIMATES

Have you ever placed two estimates before you, both calling for the same kind of a greenhouse, and compared each individual item on the list? You probably noticed that the two bids differed considerably as to the quantity, dimensions and patterns, but were unable to tell what the differences amounted to in dollars and cents. You saw that one fellow wanted $300.00 and the other one wanted $350.00, but why one was lower you could not figure out and probably thought the extra $50.00 was just for reputation. Now, if two estimates on the same kind of greenhouse vary, you can depend on it that there is a difference in the material some place, as Cypress is used by everybody and the cost of the rough lumber does not vary. It is up to you to find out what this difference is before you place the order with the lowest bidder. We make Cypress Greenhouse Material as cheap as it can be made by anybody and we sell it on a very small margin of profit, so if you buy of us you will get full value for your money.

We guarantee it.

PEONIES

DO YOU GAMBLE?

If so, try it with us this Decoration.

Everyone knows what the weather has been, and everyone knows that Peonies were more or less hurt. So it may make a short crop.

The Peony is the ONLY flower for Decoration Day, as under our contract plan at 5c you know just where you stand.

One dozen Peonies goes farther than three dozen Roses or Carnations, and in most years Roses and Carnations cost as much as Peonies.

NOW FOR THE GAMBLE.

To all florists who place their order ON OR BEFORE MAY 21 we will agree to deliver good average Peonies at $5.00 per 100.

Last year the price went as high as $1.50 a dozen after contract day passed, and it may do the same this year.

Get in on the ground floor. Place your order for all you need, and then some, for Decoration is the only day where rich and poor all buy flowers, and Peonies at 5c are the cheapest flowers you can buy.

Orders booked in rotation, so place them at once, and be sure to have them at 5c.

MOTHERS' DAY

AND

HOW MOTHERS' DAY GREW.

The Trade's First Word.

The whole trade first heard of Mothers' day when it read the REVIEW of May 14, 1908. The credit belongs to Chapin Bros., of Lincoln.

The Nebraska firm wrote, in substance: "What is Mothers' day? It took us by surprise, but we had a big crop of white carnations and did lots of business. Look into it, let the trade know, and tell them to push it along. The possibilities are great."

After printing, the letter was filed in the "tickler," to come up eleven months later.

In early April, 1909, the REVIEW "looked into it," but the facts were not easy to find. Letters to the National Congress of Mothers, the Chicago Women's Club, the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Federation of Women's Clubs and to individuals prominent in women's work all brought similar replies: "Never heard of Mothers' day, but it's a fine idea; we will help it along."

When the field of inquiry seemed pretty well exhausted, an item was discovered in the Chicago Inter Ocean saying that Mothers' day would be along again the second Sunday in May.

Calling up the city editor, the REVIEW asked: "Where did you get your information?" The editor couldn't say positively, but he thought it was in a circular received from somebody in Philadelphia—he hadn't any idea who.

So the REVIEW wrote for facts, addressing "Secretary, the Mothers' Day Association, Philadelphia, Pa.," and put a special delivery stamp on the letter.

That was putting it up to the postmaster at Philadelphia.

But the REVIEW had learned that, in a pinch, you can depend on Philadelphia.

Pushing it Along.

The result was, the letter was delivered to Miss Anna Jarvis, originator of Mothers' day, and the reply brought the facts for the article published in the REVIEW for April 29, 1909, telling the whole trade the whole story of Mothers' day.

After Mothers' day last year a number of letters were printed, showing how florists all over the country had taken up the REVIEW's suggestions and "pushed it along." The seed planted by Chapin Bros. had been transplanted by the REVIEW, cultivated by scores of those florists who knew a good thing when they saw it, and for them had bloomed and borne rich, ripe, luscious fruit.

In 1909 it was apparent that where the Mothers' day idea took root it outgrew the supply of white carnations. To meet the need, the REVIEW coined the catch-line:

White flowers for Mother's memory;
Bright flowers for Mothers living.

The 1910 campaign was along double lines, for the purpose of awakening the trade to the possibilities of a great new flower day, and to point out the way to turn the demand, heretofore exclusively for white carnations, to include other stock.

How well the work has succeeded every florist knows. Grasping the bright idea of Miss Jarvis, the trade has made Mothers' day already an established institution. It never would have grown as it has, had our trade not pushed it. Of course some sat back and said, "What's the use?" but clippings of newspaper advertisements published by florists all over the country, and received by the REVIEW in the last few days, containing the lines:

show that hundreds put their shoulder to the wheel this year where scores had helped last season.

Mothers' day put many thousands of dollars into the pockets of the trade last week. It will be good for an increase every year for years to come. Others will take it up.

Nothing can show better what has come of the REVIEW's exploitation of Mothers' day than a perusal of the reports from the wholesale markets in this issue. "It doubled the business for two days," the statement of a leading wholesaler, shows that the aggregate increase in sales for the whole country will run into large figures. About the only places where there was disappointment were those where florists stocked up but did no advertising—no pushing.

MOTHERS' DAY SALES.

Mothers' day is, thus far, principally an occasion for the wearing of flowers. But this year—

Churches were decorated.

Sunday schools gave a flower to each child who attended.

Street car companies decked out each conductor and motorman.

G. A. R. posts and other organizations attended church in a body, everyone wearing flowers.

Homes were decorated.

Wreaths and small flat crosses were sent to the cemeteries.

MOTHERS' DAY PRICES.

A special flower day midway between Easter and Decoration day is of exceptional value to the trade. It is a time of large supplies, when a fillip is of extra value to wholesale markets, giving a better tone for days before and after.

Retailers made considerable complaint over the advanced prices, especially for white carnations, that attended the wide observance of Mothers' day, May 8. But the complaint was louder before than after. Thus far the day is largely one of many small sales—flowers for street wear. What if a man is charged 10 cents or 15 cents for a white carnation for a boutonniere? What does he care? It is only once a year. Besides, it is no more than the price of a good cigar, or a drink. Where is the man who will not honor his mother's memory, if at all, to the extent of the price of a drink?

Of course, it is desirable to do a large volume of business at fair prices rather than to do a small business at big prices. This lies in the hands of the retailers. If they sell white exclusively for Mothers' day they know what the result is bound to be. There are over ninety million people in this country. If even one person in ten called for just one white carnation apiece for Mothers' day boutonnieres, that would mean nine million. Where would they come from? The scramble would inevitably send prices up. The way out is to turn the demand to Bright flowers for mothers living.

In that way prices can be kept down to good, fair rates, moving a large quantity of stock and giving everyone a chance to make money without being accused of extortion.

THESE TOOK THE HINT.

How Mothers' day panned out for a few of those who acted on the REVIEW's suggestions, issues of April 21 and 28, is shown by the following early letters, which prove the truth of the old saying that "The Lord helps those who help themselves."

Barrington, Ill.

At your suggestion in the REVIEW dated April 28, in regard to advertising Mothers' day, I got busy and inserted an ad in our local paper which came out May 6, with the result that I sold 325 white carnations to one Sunday school, supplied the G. A. R. post, and took enough other orders to use up all the flowers that I had on hand for the day. It pays to read the REVIEW and to advertise.

F. W. STOTT.

McKeesport, Pa.

I read the Mothers' day articles in the REVIEW and called the matter to the attention of our mayor and some of the leading ministers. The result was that the mayor issued a proclamation urging every citizen to observe the day and wear a flower—a flower, mind you, not a white carnation—and the newspapers gave it a good showing, stating that the florists had prepared for the extra demand and would not raise prices; also there was a Mothers' day mass meeting in one of the churches. If every florist would see that the day is properly advertised by such means it would not be long until it would rank as one of the first of our special flower days.

J. H. ORTH.

Martinsville, Ind.

I want to say that Mothers' day with us was a surprising success. I took the two numbers of the REVIEW, April 21 and April 28, to the publisher of our local daily paper, told him to look them over and frame us a suitable advertisement. He copied the suggested advertisement of Posy & Blossom from the REVIEW of April 21 and we ran it the four days before Mothers' day. On Thursday, May 5, the editor gave Mothers' day and flowers three-quarters of a column reading notice. We were more than pleased with the success of Mothers' day, because the attempt to observe McKinley's birthday was a total failure.

NIXON H. GANO.

Carbondale, Ill.

I made Mothers' day a success in Carbondale by some advertising of small amount. I took orders for fifty dozen of white carnations, but I could have sold 100 dozen easily. Something must be done to make people buy and want something else besides white carnations. The demand next year will be too great for white carnations. Thank the REVIEW very much for the pointers received from it in regard to Mothers' day.

E. W. PLATER.

McKeesport, Pa.

Your article in last week's REVIEW, entitled "Don't Kill the Goose," was a good one, but I for one would like to let the goose know that he is a goose. The goose I refer to is the grower of carnations who has the nerve to make the retailer pay 5 cents each for white carnations not a bit larger than fair-sized bellis daisies, with stems like broomstraws, that caused them to droop their little heads as if they were ashamed of themselves, if the grower was not. There are different kinds of geese; the one that lays the golden egg, the customer, surely will get wise when overcharged; but the goose who stands in his own light by overcharging, will he ever get wise? If he don't I think he is a sprag in the wheel of one of the finest ideas in the flower line that ever has been launched, for I feel quite certain that Mothers' day will become a world-wide day. But we must not forget that the poor as well as the rich have mothers to whom they wish to do honor, only how can they buy flowers at such prices?

The white carnation idea is going to be hard to overcome, but if we all do our little bit we may possibly get it straightened out, and on this line I feel that I have done my part. I sent the full page of the REVIEW containing the story of the origin of the day, etc., and marked the article headed "No Special Flower Needed," to our leading daily paper; but, although they gave Mothers' day a good showing, they made no special note of this, the part I wanted made most clear. So on Friday evening I sat down at my desk and wrote the lines that follow:

MOTHERS' DAY.

Tomorrow will be Mothers' day,
The day of all the year
Which we should hold most sacred
For her we love so dear.
Remember, she has thought of you
Each day of every year,
For mother's love ne'er ceases
As long as she is here.

And when at last she goes to rest
In that great wide beyond,
Remember she's your mother still,
And of her still be fond.
For she has toiled while you have slept
To keep you free from care,
So remember her on Mothers' day
And for her a flower wear.

Let a flower on thy bosom rest
At least one day a year,
For Mothers' day's most sacred
Of any in the year.
Let white be worn for those we mourn
And bright for those still living,
And thus we'll make this Mothers' day
A day of great thanksgiving.

These lines were printed in a conspicuous place in Saturday evening's paper, but it kept us busy all day explaining matters to our trade. Some blamed us for the high prices, and said so, remarking, "Oh! Well, I don't blame you; this is the day you reap your harvest." Others said nothing, but sawed wood. One prospective customer asked Wednesday what carnations would be worth Saturday and I told him I could not say exactly, but I figured at about $5 per hundred. I saw him again Friday evening and he said they had learned that the price was going to be high and that seven churches in the town had agreed to dispense with flowers entirely. This, you see, looks bad. So let us hope that by the time Mothers' day comes around again, the goose that has been standing in his own light will wake up. CHARLES DOUGHERTY.

[The REVIEW feels constrained to once more remind this correspondent and others who place the blame for prices, either high or low, on the wholesaler, that the wholesaler does not make or control prices—it is supply and demand does that, and nothing else is effectual for any considerable time.]

Galion, O.

Mothers' day here was an entire success. All colors of carnations sold; everything in the way of carnations was sold out clean. The day promises to be better than Easter. CHAS. J. TRACHT.

Minot, N. D.

Well, I want to thank you for pushing Mothers' day. I sold 2,300 roses and carnations in that one day at regular prices, and could have sold more if one of the wholesale houses could have supplied me with 500 carnations that I ordered but failed to receive. I think Mothers' day will have a future of being better than Easter for cut flowers.

I am enclosing an editorial headed "Wear the White Flower" printed in the Daily Reporter here, written by Sam H. Clark, editor of that paper. I spoke to Mr. Clark and he sat down and penned it off in a few minutes. He is the best editorial writer in the state and I owe to this editorial a large part of the success of Mothers' day. I wish you could publish same in the REVIEW and give him the credit and it might awaken some of the florists in other cities to do likewise next year.

The Webb Floral Co., of Rochester, N. Y., recently completed a new conservatory or salesroom, or combination of the two, attached to the residence of the treasurer of the firm, A. J. Webb, at 133 Saratoga avenue. Mr. Webb's brief description of the new structure will be interesting to the trade in general, as showing how this company overcame the difficulty which has confronted many other florists—the difficulty of establishing a store in the midst of a block of fashionable residences and so planning the store that its appearance will not be objectionable to even the hypercritical sort of neighbors.

"The immediate neighborhood in which we are located," says Mr. Webb, "is decidedly residential. Our greenhouse is in the rear of our residence, and the problem which we had to face was how to bring out a salesroom to the street front and conduct business without marring the residence street with a regular store front. We accomplished this in a unique way, by adding a conservatory to one side of the front of our residence, with a separate entrance from a large, handsome porch which we built across the front of the house.

And one of the gratifying things about it is, that instead of offending our neighbors by bringing the business 'to the front,' we were rather surprised to have many of them tell us that it was really an improvement to the street and they enjoyed seeing the display of flowers."

CASKET COVERS.

The florist of the average small town seldom is called upon to supply a casket cover, sprays usually serving the purpose. When such a retailer receives his first order for a blanket of flowers he finds himself what is familiarly known as "up against it"—his resources are taxed as never before, for a casket cover, simple in itself, is the king of floral designs and the most difficult of all to make in such a way as to give an appearance of grace and beauty.

The accompanying illustration will show the result of one retailer's first attempt. The blanket was called for on short notice, as usually is the case, so nothing was to be done except make the best use possible of the material at hand. Fly screen thirty-six inches wide was used for the basis of the design. This was covered with southern smilax, although had it been available Asparagus plumosus sprays would have been a better material. Killarney roses were used above the green, and a "fringe" was made of Romans and smilax. The choice of material was in all cases simply that which was at hand. White roses, valley, sweet peas and many other flowers might have been used to at least as good effect had they been in stock.

The piece was the work of Joseph Haube & Bros., Charleroi, Pa.

WON BY WAITING, AND WORKING.

The accompanying illustration shows an interior view of the retail store of M. Anderson, in the Arcade, Dayton, O. Mr. Anderson removed from Chicago to Dayton three years ago and commenced business in his present location. Being a stranger to the flower lovers of Dayton, it took him a little time to get established, but, knowing that "all things come to those who wait," he was patient and persistent. Soon things began to come his way, and continued to come until last year he was obliged to rent the adjoining store. The partition was torn out, and the combined stores made a fine, spacious, showy room in which to display his stock.

Mr. Anderson reports that he is well satisfied with business in Dayton and that he finds the people of that city remarkably courteous. R. A. B.

A conference to consider the advisability of laying before the Interstate Commerce Commission the question of express rates was opened May 11 at the rooms of the Merchants' Association in New York. Invitations to send delegates were extended to 100 organizations similar to the Merchants' Association in character. Trade bodies in nearly all large cities east of the Mississippi replied favorably, and many places on the Pacific coast have sent proxies. The call for the meeting was, in part, as follows:

"This association has under consideration the expediency of requesting the Interstate Commerce Commission to make a full investigation of the justice and reasonableness of the entire schedule of rates charged by the principal express companies doing business in the United States. Several important business organizations in various sections of the country have hitherto written us, suggesting joint action for revision of express rates. We think the subject should be fully and carefully considered by a conference of the principal business organizations of the country with a view to such joint action.

"We enclose herewith a report which shows the assets, income and expenses of four principal express companies, and the net profit made by them upon the capital actually and necessarily employed for express operations so far as that capital can be determined from the reports of the companies. This report shows the prima facie reasons for believing that express rates return a net income excessively disproportionate to the capital actually employed by the express companies in the proper business of express operations."

BULBS IN VIRGINIA.

While the government is spending considerable money, and making much effort, to encourage the growing of bulbs on the Pacific coast, the Virginian growers are going right ahead without assistance from any outside source and are building up an important industry purely on its merits as a money-making proposition. Those who have not seen them invariably are amazed at the extent of the Virginia bulb industry when they pay a first visit to the fields while the stock is in bloom. Tidewater Virginia is becoming the Holland of America. An idea of the extent of the fields may be gathered from the accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph made at the Rose Gardens, the establishment of C. W. Beman, at North Emporia, Va. In the picture only one variety is shown of the large number of varieties that are grown. This is Narcissus Virginian Glory.

Where they abound, traps should be set under the water in the supplies or overflows and should be securely fastened by an iron chain, or the rats will drag them long distances.

Lilies.

Lilium longiflorum for Memorial day is likely to be useful this year, as flowers promise to be none too abundant. The plants, owing to the increased warmth and longer daylight, are coming along much more rapidly than during the late winter months, and if the first buds show white by May 30, they will be in season. On the other hand, a cold cellar will hold back early ones for some time. The demand for cut lilies May 30 is considerable, while few pots will be called for.

Summer blooming lilies in pots, such as speciosum in variety, auratum, Hansoni and others, which were potted in late fall, have made considerable growth and many are already showing buds. Keep these in a cool, sunny and well ventilated house. Supply with liquid manure as the pots become filled with roots. Lilies under glass are always clean and free from spot, as compared with outdoor ones, and even in the hot months there is always a demand for such flowers.

Outdoor lilies are now growing apace. A good mulch of littery manure, or well decayed manure, will keep the roots cool and moist, and rains will carry some food to them. A few of the most satisfactory of the garden lilies commercially are: Candidum, tigrinum splendens, auratum, speciosum album, speciosum rubrum, speciosum Melpomene, Henryi, Hansoni and Brownii. With the exception of L. candidum, which flowers in late June and should be planted four inches deep, the sorts named will be better covered eight to ten inches.

Perennial Phloxes.

Perennial phloxes are now making quick growth. In order to secure a longer blooming season, it is a good plan to cut back some clumps, or at least pinch back part of the growths. This will compel them to bloom in September or early October, when good phlox spikes are scarce and are much called for. Any planting should be completed with as

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Dahlias.

While dahlias are frequently planted outdoors as early as the middle of April, we have proved that those set out a month or even two months later will give better results. Green plants cannot be planted until danger of frost has passed, and if sod land has been plowed up for them there is always the danger that cutworms will find them toothsome morsels. A ring of soot and lime around each plant will help to ward off attacks of cutworms, and will at the same time provide a little food for the plants.

Divided pieces of roots are used by about all large growers; one or at most two eyes to a portion are ample. Planting whole clumps gives a mass of shoots, which, if left, simply smother one another. The sunniest possible location suits dahlias and the furrows for the roots should be plowed six inches deep, allowing a yard between the plants. Where small lots are grown, spades or trowels can be used for planting. The land should previously have been well manured and thoroughly cultivated. We like to use a stout stake to each plant, but the largest growers, by planting closer and pinching the plants after they have made two or three pairs of leaves, to give a stocky, branching habit, dispense with the use of supports.

Allow four or five feet between the rows where horse cultivation is to be given, and keep stirring the soil on every possible occasion. It is astonishing what a prolonged drought dahlias will stand if a nice, loose mulch of earth is constantly kept on the surface. In planting dahlias, always lay the roots down flat; a common error is to stand them straight up.

Hardy Nymphaeas.

If planting of the hardier nymphaeas is to be done, it should be done at once. Although May weather has not been of the warmest, the plants are already making some growth. A good compost for nymphaeas is two-thirds fibrous loam and one-third cow manure. A box twelve inches deep and forty-eight inches square, sunk in water thirty to thirty-six inches deep, will carry a plant nicely for two seasons. A layer of coarse sand should be placed on the surface of the boxes after planting. When in their natural conditions, nymphaeas have an abundance of rich mud to grow in; therefore it pays to give a liberal treatment if fine flowers are desired. They should also have the fullest possible sunshine. Allow plants fifty to seventy-five square feet of space each. They do not look well crowded on the water. Each plant should have ample space to show its individuality.

Some good hardy nymphaeas to set out now are: Odorata, odorata rosea, odorata sulphurea, all the Marliac hybrids, including Marliacea chromatella, Marliacea albida, Marliacea rosea; Laydekeri rosea and tuberosa; the latter should be allowed 100 to 125 square feet of space, being a luxuriant grower.

The noble nelumbiums or lotus plants should have a separate pond from the nymphaeas, as they are robust growers, attaining a height of three to six feet and spreading with great rapidity when once well established. They can be planted from the middle to the end of May. Nelumbiums want plenty of rich, black mud. After the first year they increase rapidly. Good varieties to grow are: Speciosum (the common Egyptian lotus), Pekinensis rubrum, kermesinum, album grandiflorum and luteum. Muskrats are fond of lotus roots and will soon do great damage to both these and nymphaeas, unless systematically trapped.

little delay as possible. Cuttings put in sand in early spring are now making plenty of roots. Gradually inure these to sunlight and plant them out before they become hardened in the cutting bench. These cuttings will give grand spikes during September and October, and where strictly fancy spikes are a desideratum for exhibitions, etc., the cuttings can always be relied upon.

Poinsettias.

Provided the old poinsettia shoots were started when advised, they should now have a nice crop of cuttings ready for the sand bed. To stop the bleeding, plunge the bottoms of the cuttings in charcoal dust before putting them in the propagating bench. Porous sand, where no water lies, is a necessity where the cuttings are to be placed. There is still ample time in which to start stock plants yet in a dormant state. These will give cuttings within three weeks, and such plants can be grown a yard tall before the flowering season arrives.

FUCHSIA AS A BASKET PLANT.

N. Greivelding believes in demonstrating the usefulness of the things he has to sell, so along his front porch he hangs a row of baskets filled with one of his specialties, Fuchsia Trailing Queen. Mr. Greivelding's place is opposite the city hall at Merrill, Wis., and everybody in town sees, admires and, in many cases, emulates his display.

Mr. Greivelding says that Fuchsia Trailing Queen is one of the handsomest and most adaptable of plants for baskets to hang on shady porches. He propagates by cuttings in fall and early spring and shifts along until the plants are well established in the flowering pots by March. One plant is used in a 4-inch pot, two plants for a 5-inch pot, three for a 6-inch pot and four for a 7-inch pot. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made in July. The plants in hanging baskets will bloom profusely all summer.

HARDY PLANTS FOR BORDERS.

[An extract from a paper by Arthur E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.]

It is no doubt a truism to say that we can dispense altogether with some of the older forms of herbaceous plants, which were popular fifty years ago, in favor of the much improved and beautiful new kinds. But it must not be supposed that all the old friends can be discarded. There are some which will undoubtedly continue to be grown so long as gardens exist, and this applies more to species than varieties, for it is among the latter that one looks for the majority of new plants. Although a large number of the newer introductions originated in American and European gardens, the most noteworthy are to be found among the new plants discovered by E. H. Wilson. The results obtained from his labors during the last eleven years are invaluable.

In making this selection of new and desirable varieties I have endeavored to include those only which may be relied on to prove satisfactory, and except in one or two instances they are perfectly hardy.

Blue Flowered Plants.

Blue flowered plants, apart from delphiniums, are not numerous, but two beautiful additions have recently been made. Both are varieties of the old Anchusa Italica. One, named superba, or Dropmore variety, has dark blue blossoms, and the other, called opal, has flowers sky-blue in color. These are two remarkably fine plants, unsurpassed by anything with which I am acquainted. As they seldom seed and sometimes show a tendency to die in winter, it is advisable to propagate a few plants during the fall, so that one may be sure of retaining them.

Aconitums are on a par with delphiniums for stateliness, and the best should always be included, as they continue to give a succession of bloom over a long period. The most effective is the new A. Wilsoni, which grows six feet high, with pale blue flowers. Spark variety, dark blue, is also good, and A. rostratum, which grows four feet tall, is a pleasing shade of pale blue, deeper on the hood. A. Hemsleyanum, a new climbing variety, is also interesting and desirable.

Achillea Cerise Queen is the most recent and desirable addition to this family, and is devoid of the weediness which usually characterizes these plants. The flowers, cerise pink in color, are produced abundantly all through the summer and fall.

Japanese Anemones.

It is much to be regretted that Anemone Japonica and its many excellent varieties are not sufficiently hardy to withstand the severity of our New England winters in all localities, but if favored positions are selected for them there is no reason why they should not succeed. Two or three years' growth are necessary to get them well established, and as they make long roots, which penetrate deeply, the soil should be well prepared, which enables them to obtain the maximum amount of moisture and food. Under such conditions the typical variety will grow six feet high, and if they are planted in groups, the luxuriant foliage and great quantities of flowers are unsurpassed in the autumn. There are now numerous varieties, all of much merit, but the old Anemone Japonica, with its single pink flowers, and the white form are hard to beat. The list should also include A. Japonica Autumn Queen, which is dark rose in color and semi-double. Mont Rose is very double and pale pink; Whirlwind is a fine double white; Prince Heinrich is double, dark red, and Purpurea is a large flower, purplish-rose in color.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS FOR WHOLESALING.

I am interested in the wholesale trade in bedding plants and should be glad to see something about this branch of the business, especially referring to geraniums. The geranium is one of the commonest of plants, but I find that infinite care is necessary to get a crop through in good shape, while frequently the closest attention does not serve to ward off trouble.

H. O.

Those universal favorites, the geraniums, would more greatly be missed than any one plant from our gardens. They submit to many abuses and everybody has his own way of caring for his geraniums, but they must have light. Heat with poor light and excessive moisture would be the worst conditions for a geranium or any of the pelargonium family.

Our ordinary bedding geraniums will propagate any month in the year, except perhaps June, July and August. In those months they would need keeping quite moist to prevent severe wilting and the tissue of the cuttings would get filled up with water and rot would likely set in. Early in September we take cuttings from outside and put into 2-inch pots and place in a light greenhouse or cold-frame. No bottom heat is necessary at this time, or any other, for this class of geraniums. If shifted at New Year's into 3-inch and in early April into 4-inch, these should make splendid plants by the middle of May. In most cases a cutting can be taken off the top of each of these about February 1, which, if shifted as soon as well rooted, will make a good bedding plant in a 3½-inch pot and a neat size for shipping. As far as price and profit are concerned, there is more in these smaller plants at $1 a dozen than the larger at $1.50.

We have, as retailers, mostly no space to give to old plants, but the man who wholesales cannot only take off all the cuttings possible in September and October, but should at the same time lift these same cut down plants and put them on the bench in five inches of good soil, giving them space to grow. They will soon take hold and in a night temperature of 50 degrees and a light bench you will be able to take off at least three good batches of cuttings from autumn to March.

The trouble with many of the young geraniums you buy of wholesale growers is that they are drawn-up, elongated, weak things. They have been grown too crowded and warm. In the winter months, whether for your own spring retailing or for shipping, 45 degrees at night is plenty and they must have light and ventilation whenever possible. When these succulent plants are in a low temperature they are often kept too wet and that makes them soft. Being on the dry side, and only watered when they are decidedly dry, makes them short-jointed and hard, and that is the condition a geranium should be in if you expect a free-growing and free-flowering, robust plant in the summer months.

A rather stiff loam and firm potting is essential at every stage of growth. To use too much manure and induce a rank growth is a big mistake.

Now a word about packing these plants for shipping. Perhaps you have noticed that there is no plant that so soon suffers with yellow leaves if excluded from the light a few days. Even if left in the packing-shed for forty-eight hours the leaves lose their color. Therefore, express is the only way they should be shipped. The small 2-inch or 2½-inch pot plants are the sizes mostly shipped in winter, and nothing is easier. A tight box of moderate depth is lined to keep out frost, each little plant wrapped in some pliable paper and then laid tightly in layers till the box is full. I say tightly, because there should be no chance for any plant to move, whichever way the box may be tossed about. Any small plants, roses, carnations, verbenas, petunias or anything else, travel finely except that with carnations or plants with small tops, four plants can be put in one parcel instead of each plant singly. The principal thing is that there should be no chance of any plant moving in the box. Plants should be dry when shipped, never just watered. Moist would be correct, and the foliage dry.

We often have to ship a few hundred fine 4-inch geraniums in full flower at bedding time. To pack these plants tightly in a closed box would mar their appearance a great deal, although no permanent injury would be done, but these we wrap in paper and stand in a box with the sides as deep as the tops of the flowers. There is a way which must suggest itself to everyone; that is, after the first row of plants is stood firmly in the end of the box, another tier can be put between the stems of these. The next row is stood on the bottom of the box, and so on. If compactly packed, no foliage will be bruised or broken. Then the box is covered with a few strong strips, leaving plenty of space for the plants and flowers to be seen. Then I never knew an express man to turn the box on its side or on end, but they can stand other boxes on top of your box without harm.

A good packer is a valuable man and it is a great advertisement for a firm to gain the reputation of packing well without making expensive charges.

A NEW YELLOW FORCING ROSE.

No yellow rose ever will enjoy the market for cut blooms in this country that there is for white, pink or red. But that there is a place for a yellow forcing rose that will stand for quality beside Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond every retail florist and wholesale grower will agree. Perle des Jardins now is almost the only yellow rose that ever is seen as a cut flower. It is not at all in the class with the modern forcing roses of other colors and the demand for it, therefore, is on the wane. Whether or not Lady Hillingdon will prove to be worth space in the American greenhouses that shelter the Killarneys remains to be seen, but in England, where it originated and where yellow is a more important flower color than it is here, it is thought highly of. The accompanying illustration would indicate that it is worth a trial.

Rose Lady Hillingdon originated with Lowe & Shawyer, Ltd., a firm that was established by Joseph Lowe, at Uxbridge, Middlesex, England, in 1864. When exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society at London, March 8, 1909, the variety gained an award of merit. It is described as "a beautiful new tea-scented rose that appears to be especially suitable for forcing. It has long stems and handsome foliage. The full, broad-petaled blooms are of a pleasing shade of soft yellow. A very fine new rose."

While Lady Hillingdon was raised by Lowe & Shawyer, it will be distributed to the trade by George Mount & Sons, of Canterbury.

LYON ROSE A KEEPER.

Laurence J. Cook, of Stuart Low & Co., the well-known English firm, says that the remarkable substance possessed by the bloom of the Lyon rose was demonstrated when, after exhibiting flowers in the warm atmosphere of the hall of the Royal Horticultural Society at London, they dispatched the same blooms to Falmouth, 300 miles distant, where they looked quite well at the exhibition there the two days following. This lasting quality is an additional merit for the Lyon rose, which has so rapidly become popular.

SUMMER ROSES.

[A paper by Charles T. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., read at a meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club, May 3, 1910.]

Not so many years ago there was practically no demand for good summer roses, and in consequence few or none were grown. Whatever demand there was had to be filled with roses which were grown for the winter cut or all the year around. Of course, a lot of La France roses were grown during the whole year, and it was certainly a beautiful flower, and I am at a loss to understand why it is not grown now.

About 1892 or 1893, Testout was sent out and first grown for winter flowering, but was found to be too expensive. Kaiserin followed about the same time and was tried in a well known rose grower's place around New York, where it gave such poor satisfaction during the winter months that it was thrown away after two years' trial. But what a grand flower for the summer cut! After trials in several places for summer flowering, it gave such good results that it is today the only good white summer rose grown. It has several faults, but these can be overlooked when you get the grand flowers which the plants produce all summer long. Testout was tried the same way and extensively grown on the same principle in the east.

Carnot, Killarney and Others.

Shortly after, President Carnot was sent out, and while wanting as a winter bloomer, the fine, long-stemmed flowers produced during summer were highly pleasing to the grower. The public, however, was slow in taking hold and I remember that we were growing this rose for about a year and a half before there was any real demand for it. Now it is well liked and a rose of the same color for the winter cut would be most welcome.

A few years after, Killarney appeared, and while disappointing when first seen, we must say that since then it has conquered the world. It is a free bloomer during winter and the same plants will produce good flowers during the summer. It is more particular about treatment than other roses, but, when well grown, the color is good, as well as the stem. The foliage takes mildew easily and the flowers are somewhat single, but the public likes the flower just the same.

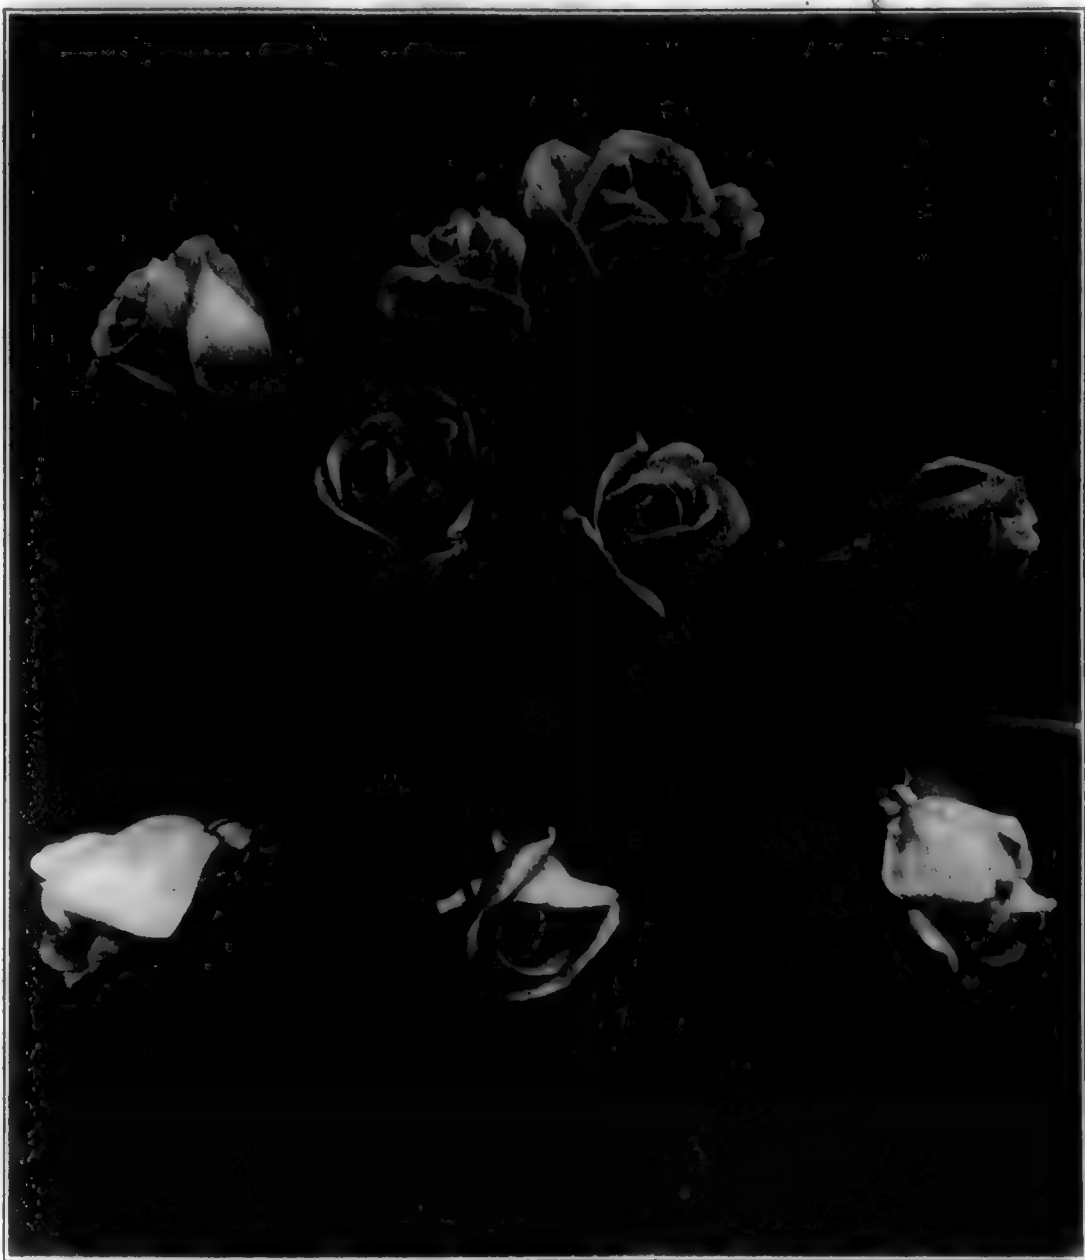

La Detroit made its appearance shortly after and we always liked the flower. We are growing a few for the summer cut at present, but as it opens so quickly during warm weather, we will probably replace it with another pink one, called Ideal. Ideal is a sport of La France, somewhat darker than the parent, but the plants we have in stock have given such satisfaction that we may grow more for pink for the summer cut. When you cut the flowers they seem quite single, but they open so nicely and are so full that you can scarcely improve them, and what a nice smell they have!

Wellesley, Beauty and the Newer Sorts.

Wellesley is another good pink summer rose, but as we have not grown many, I cannot give you my opinion until later.

In the darker red roses, we have practically only the American Beauty, which gives good satisfaction to the buyer at any time of year, if not always to the grower.

Of the newer roses, My Maryland is well spoken of, but what it will do can be seen only next year, as the limited stock in this country is used this year for propagating.

White Killarney showed up finely in several places where I have seen the flowers, and if it proves as good a seller as the pink Killarney, it may become a standard rose for all the year around. President Taft is another new rose and, judging from what I have seen of the flowers, I should think it would make a fine summer rose.

All these roses have to be grown in greenhouses around Buffalo, to give good satisfaction.

A Good Outdoor Rose.

One rose, however, has given us excellent results outdoors, and that is Cochet. Flowers from outside are better than those grown inside, unless they get spoiled from rain. After several trials of keeping plants of this variety outside all winter, we now dig up the plants in the fall, pot them and store them in a cold house, where they begin to grow slowly in the spring. At the end of May we plant them outdoors, and if watered well, you will get a lot of good flowers all summer long. I think that Cochet and its white sport should have the widest dissemination among owners of gardens who like to cut a few roses during the summer from their gardens. Around Baltimore this rose will stand the winter outdoors, but here we have not succeeded in keeping it in good shape outdoors.

Many more roses, fairly good for indoors and very good for outdoors, might be mentioned, but as my experience with these has been limited, I leave it to some one more able to handle the subject.

GLADIOLI.

If I plant gladiolus bulbs in a greenhouse bench the first part of July, when will they be ready to cut and will the bulbs be good to use again? Are America and Americus one and the same bulb? If not, what is the color of each?

R. C. W.

Gladioli planted as late as July 1 would do better outdoors than in a greenhouse bench. They would flower in ten to fourteen weeks after planting, much depending on the variety and the condition of the bulbs. If you keep the house in which they are growing well ventilated, the gladioli should do fairly well, but it is quite late to keep bulbs dormant. The bulbs are not of much value to use again after forcing. They may, however, be gradually ripened and planted outside another season.

America is probably the same as Americus. I am not acquainted with the last named. The color of America is a beautiful soft lavender pink and it is undoubtedly the most popular variety on the market today.

The public, however, was slow in taking hold and I remember that we were growing this rose for about a year and a half before there was any real demand for it. Now it is well liked and a rose of the same color for the winter cut would be most welcome.

A few years after, Killarney appeared, and while disappointing when first seen, we must say that since then it has conquered the world. It is a free bloomer during winter and the same plants will produce good flowers during the summer. It is more particular about treatment than other roses, but, when well grown, the color is good, as well as the stem. The foliage takes mildew easily and the flowers are somewhat single, but the public likes the flower just the same.

La Detroit made its appearance shortly after and we always liked the flower. We are growing a few for the summer cut at present, but as it opens so quickly during warm weather, we will probably replace it with another pink one, called Ideal. Ideal is a sport of La France, somewhat darker than the parent, but the plants we have in stock have given such satisfaction that we may grow more for pink for the summer cut. When you cut the flowers they seem quite single, but they open so nicely and are so full that you can scarcely improve them, and what a nice smell they have!

Wellesley, Beauty and the Newer Sorts.

Wellesley is another good pink summer rose, but as we have not grown many, I cannot give you my opinion until later.

In the darker red roses, we have practically only the American Beauty, which gives good satisfaction to the buyer at any time of year, if not always to the grower.

Of the newer roses, My Maryland is well spoken of, but what it will do can be seen only next year, as the limited stock in this country is used this year for propagating.

White Killarney showed up finely in several places where I have seen the flowers, and if it proves as good a seller as the pink Killarney, it may become a standard rose for all the year around. President Taft is another new rose and, judging from what I have seen of the flowers, I should think it would make a fine summer rose.

All these roses have to be grown in greenhouses around Buffalo, to give good satisfaction.

A Good Outdoor Rose.

One rose, however, has given us excellent results outdoors, and that is Cochet. Flowers from outside are better than those grown inside, unless they get spoiled from rain. After several trials of keeping plants of this variety outside all winter, we now dig up the plants in the fall, pot them and store them in a cold house, where they begin to grow slowly in the spring. At the end of May we plant them outdoors, and if watered well, you will get a lot of good flowers all summer long. I think that Cochet and its white sport should have the widest dissemination among owners of gardens who like to cut a few roses during the summer from their gardens. Around Baltimore this rose will stand the winter outdoors, but here we have not succeeded in keeping it in good shape outdoors.

Many more roses, fairly good for indoors and very good for outdoors, might be mentioned, but as my experience with these has been limited, I leave it to some one more able to handle the subject.

GLADIOLI.

If I plant gladiolus bulbs in a greenhouse bench the first part of July, when will they be ready to cut and will the bulbs be good to use again? Are America and Americus one and the same bulb? If not, what is the color of each?

R. C. W.

Gladioli planted as late as July 1 would do better outdoors than in a greenhouse bench. They would flower in ten to fourteen weeks after planting, much depending on the variety and the condition of the bulbs. If you keep the house in which they are growing well ventilated, the gladioli should do fairly well, but it is quite late to keep bulbs dormant. The bulbs are not of much value to use again after forcing. They may, however, be gradually ripened and planted outside another season.

America is probably the same as Americus. I am not acquainted with the last named. The color of America is a beautiful soft lavender pink and it is undoubtedly the most popular variety on the market today.

ROCHESTER, IND.—J. H. Shelton says his sales for Mothers' day were about five times as great as last year.

MARIETTA, O.—F. E. Thompson, formerly of Bradford, Pa., now has charge of 25,000 feet of glass in this city for Smith The Florist. Mr. Thompson says trade is fine; over 15,000 white carnations were used for Mothers' day, and three funerals helped to keep business on the go.

Two-year-old Seedling Amaryllis, Light Forms.

SEEDLING AMARYLLIS.

Under separate cover I am sending you a lily of the amaryllis type. Will you give me the name? I have had the bulb for a number of years and it bloomed last year for the first time. I am anxious to get more bulbs.

R. J. C.

The flower is a fairly good, light colored amaryllis hybrid, of the sort that are purchasable from many seedsmen and other dealers. As there is a host of distinct forms of the amaryllis when raised from seed, these are rarely named. English specialists name some of their best varieties and get fancy prices for the bulbs, in some cases $50 to $100 for novelties. In America we can grow the amaryllis as easily and as well as in Europe and a few details as to culture may not be out of place.

The amaryllis is increased by side bulbs and seed. The latter plan is the best. Bulbs have been flowered in as short a time as fifteen to eighteen months from seed, but as a general rule growers manage to flower a certain number when two years old, and others not until the third year. As the flowering season is now over, it is not possible to secure any home-grown seeds, but by selecting suitable flowers of decided colors, which have plenty of substance, some splendid varieties are certain. In purchasing seed, that handled by specialists should be secured. There is much cheap, trashy seed sold, which will only prove disappointing to any who sow it.

Amaryllis seed should be sown as soon as ripe, or as soon as purchased. It should be sown in pans or flats and placed in a warm, moist house, using a light, sandy compost. A little leaf is not long in appearing. When two leaves have been produced, pot off into 2-inch pots, still growing them warm and moist. As the plants need larger pots, use a heavier compost. For the final pottings, two parts of a rather heavy, fibrous loam, one part of old cow manure, some gritty sand and a dash of soot and fine bone make a good potting medium.

Amaryllis seedlings should be kept growing continuously until they flower. One successful specialist devotes a bench to them in the greenhouse, where they remain until they flower. This is an excellent plan where the necessary space can be spared, but on most commercial places it is impracticable. Another method is to plant the seedlings outdoors early in June on a warm, sunny piece of rich ground. They will make a good growth here, but when lifting and potting them in the fall they receive a great check, many roots being broken.

An excellent way to grow amaryllis plants in summer is in frames, plunging them in manure to the top of the pots. They can be put in the frames any time after the end of May. A light shade on the glass will be necessary, also a spraying over each afternoon to keep spider in check. Treated thus, the bulbs produced will be double the size of those on plants not plunged. The plants can remain in the frames until early in October, when they can be removed to a cool, dry house for flowering size bulbs, and a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees for seedlings. Drier conditions at the root should be maintained in winter, but it is a big mistake to keep the plants dust-dry, as many do. These bulbs are really evergreen and the baking process to induce them to lose their leaves is all wrong.

A repotting each season is not usually necessary. If the drainage is seen to be right and some of the old surface soil is removed to allow a liberal top-dressing, the plants with the aid of liquid stimulants can be carried over another season. Potting or top-dressing should be done while the plants are resting, January and February being suitable months. In starting bulbs, a temperature of 60 degrees at night and some bottom heat should be provided.

In some of the warmer states the amaryllis, or hippeastrum, as it is now often called, succeeds well outdoors. Even in New England it is planted out in summer and blooms well, and it is likely to be much more used in this way in years to come.

It is best to cut amaryllis flowers for shipment while in bud and open them in a warm house. The flowers are hard to pack without bruising them. During the last few years there has been a marked increase in the use of amaryllis in the larger stores, both cut and as a pot plant. Easter is the time when it is most easily and naturally flowered.

LATE TULIPS.

Can you give me the name of a light pink or rose-pink tulip which blooms at the same time as White Swan, also a red one? Are there any other varieties of this shape blooming at the same time? Are the Darwin tulips any later than such varieties as Picotee, Gesneriana, etc.?

H. H. G.

White Swan is sometimes listed as an early tulip and in other catalogues is included among the late ones. It flowers later than White Pottebakker, White Joost von Vondel and others of the early bedding section, but is faded before Picotee, Gesneriana, Bouton d'Or and the Darwins are in season. I do not know of any tulip with the same egg-shaped flowers, either in pink, rose or scarlet, which will bloom at the same time.

Picotee, Gesneriana and the various Darwin varieties come in close together. The Darwins more nearly resemble the White Swan in form, but could not well be used with the latter variety, as they bloom some days later. The following Darwins you will find excellent for bedding; they all flower together: Gretchen (syn. Margaret), blush; May Queen, rosy pink; Glow, crimson scarlet; Flambeau, brilliant scarlet; La Candeur, pure white, shading to blush; Carminea, bright rose; Pride of Haarlem, rose suffused purple. All the foregoing are of moderate price.

LOWELL, MASS.—Frank P. Putnam will soon start commercial greenhouses here, specializing on carnations.

DUNDEE, ILL.—A new gas-heating apparatus has been installed in the greenhouses of the D. Hill Nursery Co.

HIRAM E. WILSON.

A little more than a quarter of a century ago, when Rochester, N. Y., was considerably smaller than it is today, a man with unbounded faith in the future opened a little flower shop on Hudson avenue, in that city, in connection with his greenhouses, and the sign over the door read "H. E. Wilson." For a little time nearly all the plants and flowers for the store were grown in two houses, each about 20x100 feet, but good stock and tasteful designs soon brought more business and the number of houses was doubled. Almost before these were completed it was seen that more glass would be needed and so more houses were added, until today the Wilson greenhouses number twenty-five, with more than 100,000 feet of glass, and are among the most convenient and up-to-date in the city.

After more than twenty-five years of active labor, Hiram E. Wilson has gradually withdrawn from the active management and shifted the burden to the shoulders of his three sons, who from boyhood have received practical training in the various details connected with the greenhouses and retail stores. Edwin P. Wilson is in charge of the main store, at 88 Main street; Hiram W. Wilson is the superintendent of the greenhouses and retail store on Hudson avenue, and Ransford W. Wilson is manager of the Rochester Floral Co., at 245 Main street, east.

Four of Mr. Wilson's houses are devoted exclusively to roses, and a finer assortment would be hard to find. A like number are given up to carnations, and the remainder contain a large collection of palms, ferns, primulas, hydrangeas, spiræas, bulbous plants, etc. The present facilities are now too small to meet the demands, and Mr. Wilson has recently purchased an additional tract of sixteen acres, which will be used for growing asters, carnations for summer blooming, gladioli and roses.

FAILURE WITH HYACINTHS.

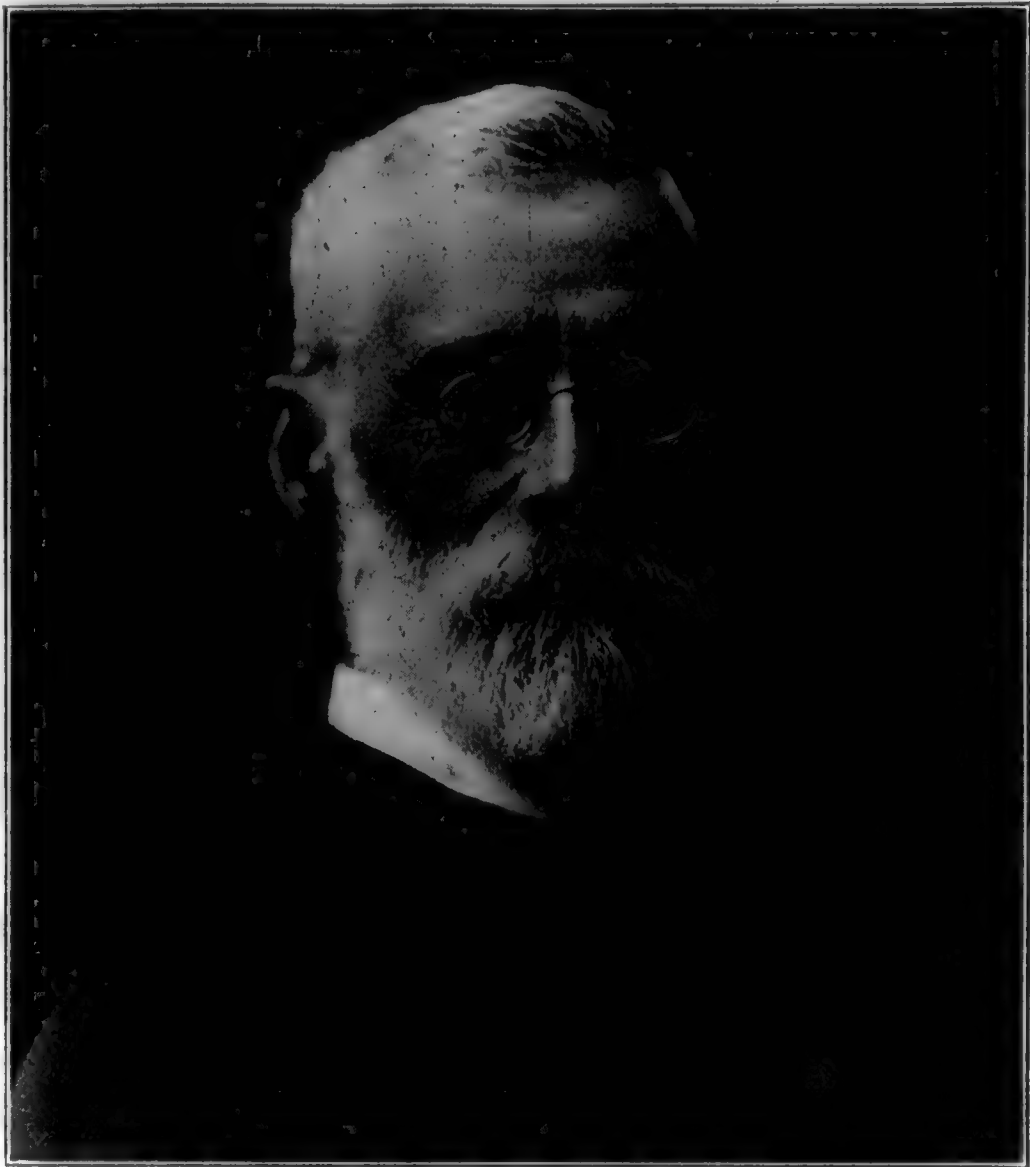

Can you inform me what is the trouble with my hyacinths? I potted them about March 28, brought them into the house five weeks before Easter. I got only a few in bloom for Easter. The balance has been coming irregularly, the last one in bloom today. They are on the bench with tulips, which I had to hold back for a week or more.

W. B.

It is impossible to say just what has been the trouble with your hyacinths, without knowing more of the cultural conditions. Not unlikely premature lifting of the bulbs may have been responsible for the bulbs blooming so erratically, but several other growers have this season had similar experiences.

C. W.

Hiram E. Wilson.

tion of good cow manure should be incorporated with it; one-third manure to two-thirds loam is not too rich. If this can be stacked and turned over a couple of times, it will be in fine shape to use. Some of the largest growers plant directly in the ground, having no beds or benches, manuring heavily each year. One successful grower, who has been planting on the same ground for five or six years, says they improve each year. He grows single violets to precede the sweet peas.

Bone meal as a top-dressing, while the plants are flowering, is beneficial. It should be forked into the ground.

Seeds may be planted as early as July, or as late as January. The earliest sowings made in July and August will flower from the middle of October to Christmas and onwards. For a spring crop sow in October or early November. While the seeds can be sown directly where they are to flower, a much better plan is to sow in flats of sand or small pots and transplant them four inches apart in the single rows. There is no advantage in having the seedlings thicker. It will only mean weak haulm and poorer flower spikes.

For winter blooming Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc, Mrs. Alexander Wallace and Watchung are excellent. The two first named sell specially well. The regular outdoor varieties should not be sown before December. They do not flower satisfactorily until spring. The hooded Spencer types are fine for late blooming inside, doing well until after Memorial day.

Green-aphis is liable to attack the plants. Fumigation once a week with some nicotine preparation will easily control it. Red spider will sometimes attack the vines if a too arid atmosphere is

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

What soil is used for sweet peas under glass and how is it prepared? What fertilizer is used? What time are the seeds planted and how? Are they planted directly in the house? What varieties are best for winter culture? What insects and fungi trouble the vines? Where can the best seed be obtained? How many rows in an even-span house of two side benches and solid center bed? Will nematodes injure sweet peas? C. G. P.

Good fibrous pasture loam plowed up last fall or even in early spring is the best for sweet peas. A liberal applica-maintained, especially near the heating pipes. Use the spray nozzle on the hose on the first signs of it. Too damp and drafty conditions may lead to mildew putting in an appearance. Cutworms, if they appear, must be carefully looked after. A poisoned bait of shorts, Paris green and molasses will account for many. I have not found that nematodes do much injury. A free use of soot discourages them and improves the peas.

The number of rows in a house depends altogether on its width. Do not plant over two rows along a 6-foot or 7-foot bed. The best growers allow five to six feet between the rows. One row would be all you could possibly plant on side benches. Sweet peas want lots of headroom. It should never be less than four to five feet, and six to eight feet is better. They will grow ten to twelve feet high in suitable houses and flower abundantly for some months. The best houses for them are twenty-five to forty feet wide and of any desired length. The REVIEW contains the advertisements at the proper time of many specialists in sweet pea seeds. C. W.

degrees; they put them in the public cold storage warehouses, in the room next coldest above the freezing point. Of course, it is necessary that the temperature be evenly maintained. Thus stored, peonies will keep in excellent condition for several weeks, probably as long as there is any real demand for them.

THE COMMERCIAL CAR.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a commercial car decorated in prize-winning fashion for the Chicago automobile parade by Muir, but a special interest attaches in that it is a new car, now being put on the market by the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., that seems excellently adapted to the requirements of a florist's delivery vehicle.

Henry Blanksma, aged 38 years, a partner in the greenhouse firm of Blanksma Bros., Grand Rapids, Mich., died May 5, at Reed's Lake sanatorium, in that city, of typhoid pneumonia.

Mr. Blanksma was well and favorably known in trade circles of his city and state. He is survived by one brother, Peter, who was also his business partner. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the Madison avenue church. Interment was in Garfield Park cemetery.

The 1910 meeting of the American Peony Society will be held at Horticultural hall, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Mass., in connection with the regular peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Thursday and Friday, June 9 and 10. This date is subject to change if weather conditions require. A. H. FEWKES, Sec'y.

MR. GOOD'S VIEW.

Before the big frost, it looked as though the peonies would be in bloom the first week in May. This was all changed one morning, when the night before it had frozen so hard that when the sun hit the plants they were flat to the ground. I do not believe, though, that the freezing will keep them from blooming, as at the present time (May 3) the buds are well formed and seem to be unhurt. Unless the weather should turn cold, and as it is at the present time, they would be in bloom two weeks earlier than usual.

I might say that the sale of peony roots has increased wonderfully with us. A few years ago we could only sell the cheap mixtures. Now the demand runs for the better varieties, where they are not too high in price. A great many of the good varieties will be high priced for a number of years yet, for the reason that there is no great amount of stock in sight. The present tariff on peony roots increases the price of the cheaper mixtures, but lowers the price on the high-priced varieties, but, of course, there is not much stock of a great many high-priced varieties in the old countries; therefore, it is not going to affect the sales in this country.

STORING PEONIES.

We generally keep our peonies in storage in a temperature of 40 to 42 degrees. What length of time would you suggest they could be kept if placed in at the proper stage of advancement for keeping? A. F. C.

Wm. E. Hall.

Wm. E. Hall, of Clyde, O., died at his home on Piety Hill, May 3. He was nearly 53 years of age. His severe illness of four weeks' duration was due to a relapse after having a siege of the grip.

Mr. Hall was a son of Ezra and Nancy Hall and was born May 18, 1857, in Clyde, where he spent all of his life. He was married to Eva Stark June 17, 1885. To this union were born six children—four sons, Eugene, Breese, Lloyd and Frank, and two daughters, Amy and Lulu, who, with the wife and mother, are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. He also leaves an aged father, Ezra Hall, who thirty years ago started as a florist and gardener in Clyde. He retired in 1898 and the business has since been carried on by his son, the subject of this sketch, in a most prosperous manner, and in later years he has been assisted by his sons, Eugene and Breese. Through his prosperous business as a florist he gained a wide reputation and was also well known and highly respected by the community at large.

Funeral services were held from the home Friday afternoon, May 6, with interment in McPherson cemetery. The florists in attendance were Messrs. Krueger and Bayer, of Toledo, O., and I. Husbands, of Bellevue, O. Deceased was a member of the following orders: S. A. F., American Carnation Society, Toledo Florists' Club and the Independent Order of Foresters.

Henry C. Eickhoff.

Henry C. Eickhoff, a nurseryman of Julietta, near Indianapolis, Ind., died of heart trouble April 29, at his home on the Michigan road.

Mr. Eickhoff was born June 9, 1853, on the farm where since his twentieth year he carried on the nursery business. Originally he conducted the business in partnership with his brother, Edward A. Eickhoff, under the firm name of Eickhoff Bros., nurserymen. In later years, however, he conducted the business in his own name. His home and surroundings were always a beautiful example of landscape gardening. In 1907 he became ill with heart disease and complications, from which he never fully recovered.

He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Elizabeth Kuehn, and eight children, five girls and three boys.

Mrs. McKellar is as enthusiastic an automobilist as she is a bowler, and as successful, for in the first automobile floral parade at Chicago, held this week, she won first prize for her six-cylinder Winton, vermilion red, decorated with Asparagus plumosus and poinsettias. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made just after the parade. Mr. McKellar's special pleasure is to occupy the mechanic's seat, as in the picture.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

THE REVIEW brings results.

WITH this issue the REVIEW completes its twenty-fifth semiannual volume.

GET a printed letter-head if you want the man to whom you send an order to have respect for your business ability.

THE florists' business has "evolved" to the point where a little selling ability is a great help, no matter how expert the grower may be.

Do you know how far you travel in plowing an acre of land? If the furrows are a foot apart the plow, and plowman, must go just eight and a quarter miles to the acre.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA has made so great a hit in Australia that the largest firm of seedsmen and plantsmen in the antipodes devotes to it the whole back page of its 100-page catalogue.

HAIL.

One of the most destructive hail storms in the history of Kansas swept over Wichita on the night of May 1. Possibly an average of greater than seventy-five per cent of all glass was destroyed, with a corresponding damage to stock. All florists were insured except one, who had allowed his insurance to lapse by non-payment of the twentieth assessment.

J. G. ESLER, Sec'y.

DUTY ON PLANTS IN TUBS.

Wadley & Smythe, New York, imported a number of large plants which the customs collector classified as palms under paragraph 251, tariff act of 1897, and as nursery or greenhouse stock under paragraph 252. The importers contended for classification under paragraph 560, relating to tropical and semitropical fruit plants for the purpose of propagation or cultivation. The protest was overruled. The following is a summary of the finding of General Appraiser Waite:

"This is an importation of forty-nine trees, comprising thirty-five orange trees, six myrtle, four oleanders, one palm, and three pittosporums.

"The examiner of nursery stock at this port testified that he personally examined this importation; that it consisted of old and fully matured trees, which were intended for ornamental purposes about the grounds of the importer; that these trees were planted in large tubs, and were moved in and out of the greenhouse to protect them from the rigors of this climate; that they were not intended or used for propagation or cultivation.

"Paragraph 560, under which the principal claim in the protest is made, reads as follows: '560. Fruit plants, tropical and semitropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation.' In framing this paragraph, we think the intention of Congress was to admit without duty, for the purpose of encouraging agricultural and horticultural pursuits, such plants as were intended to be used in increasing the stock or for cultivation in raising and producing fruit. To give this paragraph any other interpretation would deprive the words 'for propagation or cultivation' of any force or effect. This importation is therefore not classifiable thereunder.

"We do not think these trees and plants should be classified under the first of paragraph 252, but rather under the latter part of the paragraph as 'nursery or greenhouse stock not specially provided for.'"

WARD'S EPIGRAMS.

Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, have sent out a set of cards in line with the prevailing craze for epigrams, each having in some way a connection with the florists' business. No claim for originality is made, but many of them are new. Here are a few:

"He who owes money at Easter has a short Lent."

"Are you a real Florist or just merely a Potter-up?"

"The man who thinks he can't is usually right."

"Every business is a good business, but how good depends on the man."

"To escape criticism, do nothing, say nothing, and be nothing."

"The lowest bidder sometimes cuts a big figure with his competitors, but that is before he gets the contract."

"If your competitor talks about you put him on your pay roll. Never mind what he says so long as he talks."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

To Mothers' day is to be given the credit for the best week's business ever enjoyed in the Chicago market in the period between Easter and Decoration day. The extra money taken in as a result of the popular observance of the new flower day amounted to thousands of dollars to the local wholesalers. They all shared in it. Locally Mothers' day did not arouse anywhere near the interest that was taken in it in smaller cities. It takes a prodigious amount of stirring to wake up the people in Chicago; so the reports of local retailers are not particularly enthusiastic, though most of them did a little extra business. But the demand from out-of-town was something extraordinary; it was far beyond what the most optimistic had anticipated. White carnations were principally called for and were so far short of the demand that trade was necessarily turned to other items. White roses were second choice and sold splendidly. All carnations realized much better prices than in any recent week. There was some complaint of the sharp advance in prices, particularly for white carnations, but the greater part of the stock was sold to the public one flower at a time for boutonnières, and the retailers found there was no special objection to the price, even though it were two or three times the ordinary rate; it would have been different if the sales had been in dozens and larger quantity.

Last week opened dull; it was not until Thursday that the awakening came, but the last three days were much busier than the market ever has seen in May, except the week of Decoration day. Extra effort was made to gather in all the white carnations possible, and an enormous quantity was handled. But orders for thousand lots were numerous and there were many buyers who called for supplies in lots of 3,000 to 5,000. Practically every order included more white than all other stock combined, so that prices ran up sharply and before the demand had subsided it was hinted, to anyone who objected to the price, that he might consider himself fortunate to be supplied at all. Small whites like Boston Market really sold above their value. Everything sold well, even long Beauties, all except the best of which had been drooping for several days. These have been and are in heavy crop. There was an extremely large call for short and medium roses and a splendid business in the better qualities. Peonies sold much better than heretofore this season and sweet peas were just as good property as ever, although the supply was much increased.

The market was so well cleaned up last week that the tone was good early in the present week. Supplies were not so large; demand continued excellent, local trade showing some improvement, and conditions generally were quite satisfactory. The quality of stock in general is better than it usually is at this time of year. The cool weather has done much both for carnations and roses. Beauties are of almost winter quality. The special feature of the week is the reduction in the price of cattleyas because of largely increased supply and the end of the shortage in Easter lilies, largely due to heavy receipts in one house. Peonies are coming in much more heavily and many are of the best quality, showing no apparent injury from frost. It now appears that the local crops will not be available for Decoration day, and the best southern stock is going into storage in anticipation of the heavy demand sure to come at the latter part of the month.

The green goods market is a little easier. Smilax is plentiful, though not of exceptional quality. Asparagus in bunches is abundant. Asparagus strings may be had, but advance orders are advisable. Fine Farleyense is available in quantity. Southern ferns have arrived.

The Auto Parade.

The principal item of interest, for the trade, was that Mrs. C. W. McKellar won first prize for privately owned cars in the automobile parade May 9.

A number of cars that had been decorated at considerable expense for Saturday were not redecorated when rain necessitated the postponement of the parade to Monday. Therefore the showing was not what it would have been had the affair been run off as planned. Several of the cars were, however, handsomely attired in natural flowers and a start was made that is expected to result in something notable next year.

The McKellar car, driven by Mrs. McKellar, is a brand-new six-cylinder Winton, only delivered a couple of days before the parade. The decoration was a canopy of asparagus and poinsettias.

C. A. Samuelson decorated two exceedingly attractive electrics, Fleischman Floral Co. had a fine piece of work on a car belonging to Tom Murray and J. L. Raske had a car done almost entirely in Beauties that attracted much attention. Muir decorated a commercial car for the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., and there were several others, not to mention those that were out Saturday and did not reappear Monday.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club May 5 A. A. Vermeiler, of Swain Nelson & Sons, was elected to membership. Proposals were two: P. J. Saunders, retailer on Cottage Grove avenue, and George Grimm, pickup man for the American Express Co. The secretary's report showed

The committee on the calliope excursion reported and the club appropriated $25 as per original authorization to close the matter up. The committee on publication of by-laws and list of members was instructed to complete its work before the June meeting.

About twenty-five were present. Refreshments were served, as usual.

There is a probability that valley will be first-class property before the new crop comes in next season. H. N. Bruns says he has had an exceptionally large demand for pips and that supplies of pips in storage are reduced to the minimum.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports having received the first asters of the season May 9.

Inquiry has reached the wholesale market from Minneapolis, as to the Visias brothers, the statement being made that they were negotiating for the lease of a store at Minneapolis. In the George Visias bankruptcy proceedings, an effort will be made to find out what became of the cash taken in for sales during March and April, when purchases averaged about $40 a day, but cash on hand at date of going into bankruptcy was only $15.

A new grower began shipping Easter lilies to E. C. Amling last week, consignments running from 500 to 1,000 a day at a time when the general supply was light.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says Mrs. Jardine is the best rose now on the market.

Walter Burhop is one of this season's addition to the colony of florists at Maywood. He is building a house 29x200.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett reached home May 9 from California. They will sail from New York May 26 to spend six months on an automobile tour of Europe.

J. L. Raske had the decoration for Senator Lorimer's new La Salle Street National Bank, May 9. He used several big urns of long Beauties, fine vases of Maryland, Killarney and some of carnations, in addition to palms and ferns, and made the place look like a ballroom rather than a banking house.

William Collettz, of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood, received his new E.-M.-F. automobile May 10. Walking is too slow for many of those Maywood growers.

Charles Handel, who rented Mrs. Schaefer's place about a year ago, is remodeling the houses and expects a much more prosperous season next year. In spite of some handicaps, he has turned out a first-class grade of Killarney.

A. Vanderpoel, who does business as the Douglas Boulevard Floral Co., feels that he has a kick coming. In the first place, the city authorities changed his street number, and no sooner had he got so he could tell people his address without hesitation than they changed the name of the street from Douglas boulevard to Independence boulevard. He scouts the suggestion that he call himself the Independence Floral Co.

Kyle & Foerster report that J. H. McNeilly opened his new flower store at 1153 Sixty-third street, May 7. It promises to attract a large share of the business of that section of Woodlawn. Mrs. McNeilly, Announcement is made of the marriage of A. F. Longren, well known as a traveler for E. H. Hunt, and Miss Margaret Sharp. The ceremony was performed April 30 at 4419 Park avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Longren reside at Des Plaines.

C. L. Washburn says Bassett & Washburn could have used 50,000 white carnations last week, but that the shortage in this line made a fine sale for short white roses.

The Market.

A large volume of business was transacted last week in the wholesale houses, but the stock is still so plentiful that prices have not stiffened. Mothers' day, owing to the inclement weather and the fact that popular demand practically centered upon the white carnation alone, was more or less of a disappointment; still, the money total from the week's business was quite gratifying.

A little more than a sufficiency of all kinds of roses is apparent, and the prices are reasonable. Many move in job lots. The supply of long Beauties slightly exceeds the demand, while the short ones are relatively scarce. The average quality of the Killarney, My Maryland, Rhea Reid and Richmond in the market is exceptionally good, considering the time of the year and the weather conditions of the last several weeks.

Peonies are coming in with more regularity than heretofore. A local expert says that the buds are so far advanced that, if we have a spell of warm weather now, many of the early varieties will have finished blooming in this neighborhood by Decoration day. Should this contingency arise, other nearby fields that are not so far advanced will give us a sufficient supply to meet all requirements.

Carnations are still abundant. The Enchantress varieties, Beacon and O. P. Bassett continue to hold up their quality fairly well, but Lawson and Winsor are decreasing in size and show the effects of warmer weather. The buyers take the sweet peas as rapidly as offered, and lily of the valley is scarce. There are not nearly so many callas and longiflorums as before. Enough of all kinds of green goods is offered to meet all demands. New southern and Kentucky ferns are on hand. The quality, owing to the early, bright, warm weather, is better than it has ever been early in May.

Various Notes.

This summer the county will build a road through R. Witterstaetter's place and a farm adjoining, owned by Charles Brunner. The new way will be right along the eastern edge of Mr. Witterstaetter's range. He expects a good cut of carnations for Decoration day.

C. E. Critchell is getting in an abundant supply of new Kentucky ferns. Last week he had his entire force working overtime nearly every evening to get out his shipping orders for supplies, wire goods and green goods. He is also receiving good peonies.

J. A. Peterson was in Chicago last week on a business visit.

William Murphy is receiving weekly shipments of green sheet moss directly from the woods. Besides this, he is offering new southern ferns. He found a good call for all his stock last week.

Miss Laura Murphy took a prominent part May 9 in a musical recital at the Odeon.

Weiland & Olinger report a large volume of business for last week. They are offering a new crop of smilax.

Ed. Fries has been seriously ill for the last fortnight.

Gus. Adrian will rebuild part of his establishment this summer, work to begin as soon as the bedding season is over.

ceiving some excellent callas from George Corbett, of College Hill, and longiflorums from Ernst Mack, of Price Hill.

E. G. Gillett says that, judging from the way Beauties and other roses moved Monday, the prospects for a good week's business are splendid.

Mr. Leedle, of the Leedle Rose Co., Springfield, enjoyed the May festival, and while here he called upon the trade.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester F. Benson, of Indianapolis, visited friends in this vicinity, Sunday, May 8. While here Mr. Benson placed large orders for plants.

The Market.

Taken all in all, business was not bad during the last week. The quantity of flowers arriving is reduced, as compared with a few weeks ago, and, while there is no special activity in any line, clearances are fairly satisfactory. After an exceptionally cold and dark week, we are now getting clearer and much warmer weather, which will materially increase supplies and assist in making the quality of roses and carnations poorer. Roses are getting harder to move and but for the street fakers using a lot of the short-stemmed flowers, there would be considerable waste in these. Killarney and White Killarney are holding up well. Richmond is on the wane, but Rhea Reid promises to be a good hot weather rose. Bride and Maid are hard to dispose of. Carnots sell well and some nice Kaiserin are coming in. These, however, move more slowly. Beauties are getting poorer, but are now abundant.

Carnations sell at the same rates as a week ago. May 6 and 7 the demand for Mothers' day braced up prices, whites especially making good money. Sweet peas vary from 25 cents to $1 per hundred, but have cleaned up pretty well. The supply of bulbous stock will soon be over. There are now no double narcissi and the single Trumpet section is about gone. Plenty of poeticus will be procurable for some time yet, and while the early tulips are about over, the Darwins and other late sorts are now in season. There are now far too many gladioli of the Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride type, but some good spikes of May and Augusta bring good prices. Spanish iris is not selling so well. Outdoor valley will be procurable in a few days. There is a fairly steady call for the forced article. Cattleyas are plentiful, so are gardenias; each sells tolerably well. Lilies are selling better, especially longiflorum. The call for antirrhinum is uncertain. Daisies, both yellow and white, are in heavy supply. The yellow sells well and is much in favor for window decorations.

There is a much better supply of Asparagus Sprengeri, but plumosus is less abundant. Adiantum is in good supply and demand.

The warmer weather has given a considerable impetus to trade in bedding plants. These do not appear in more than small quantities at the wholesale markets. It is a pity Boston has not some suitable building to use as a plant market. Large quantities of bedding plants, trees, shrubs, etc., are sold outside Faneuil Hall market, all being in the open. Geraniums, heliotropes, fuchsias, verbenas, vincas and cannas appear to be the best selling varieties.

Various Notes.

The directors of the Boston Cooperative Flower Market held a meeting May

7. The reports were of an encouraging nature. The members are well satisfied with their new market and business is good with them.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, is handling a lot of specially well grown hydrangeas at 2 Park street.

E. O. Orpit, of South Lancaster, Mass., will give a talk on orchids at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 17. Coming so near the big orchid exhibition, an orchid evening will be specially seasonable. Some good exhibits are promised for this meeting. The question of the annual picnic and other business will come up. It has been decided to hold a ladies' night June 21, which will be the last meeting until September 20.

W. W. Edgar & Co. have been sending in some well flowered pots of Chrysanthemum Golden Glow. The flowers are fully equal to those usually seen in October and are a decided novelty. We have seen this variety in bloom for Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas, and, with the addition of Memorial day, only Easter is lacking to complete the cycle of floral festivals.

folia variegata and Ficus pandurata among other plants at present.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, had branches of Cornus florida in bloom, which worked in nicely with his other window decorations. Orchids, gladioli in variety, Spanish iris and a large variety of choice cut flowers and plants were noted.

Alexander McKay, formerly in business at South Framingham, and who went to Scotland a year ago broken down in health, returned a few days ago, looking remarkably well. Mr. McKay is uncertain yet as to where he will locate, but being a first-class grower he is bound to succeed.

Mothers' day was quite generally kept, not only in Boston but throughout the state. There was a marked increase in cut flower sales, particularly of carnations. The various women's clubs, King's Daughters and similar organizations did much toward popularizing the day. As a general rule, carnations were mostly favored, but another year, with a probable large increase in sales, a wider variety of flowers should be used.

Seed merchants are at last getting a let-up in business. During March and April it was a case of night and day work and the tired staffs appreciate a breathing spell. All report the volume of business as equal to any previous year's record and the majority note a large increase.

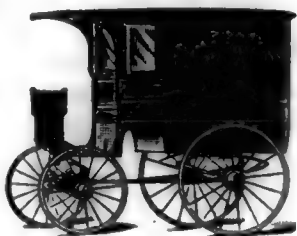

Peterson & Co. are operating the greenhouses formerly occupied by Alexander McKay at South Framingham, their specialty being carnations.

Thomas F. Galvin has a fine show of Calceolaria Stewarti in his Tremont street store windows at present, also many of the spotted herbaceous varieties. He also has a fine line of orchids.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., are looking forward to an exceptionally heavy Memorial day trade and are better equipped than ever for handling it. Business with them continues satisfactory.

cessful series of auction sales this spring. Prices generally have been moderate and favored purchasers.

Arthur F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, has an extra fine line of bedding geraniums at 2 Park street, which are in active demand at present.

While we had low temperatures here during the first week in May, with readings as low as 26 degrees and 28 degrees, the damage done was not serious. Strawberries and asparagus suffered somewhat; carnations in the field were unharmed and fruit trees sustained little damage; such plants as peonies and lilacs were untouched.

Julius H. Zinn continues to make quite a display of Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward in his window on Park street. He has some excellent calceolarias and fine Gladiolus Peach Blossom.

Pierce Bros., of Waltham, will have their usual big crop of Memorial day flowers, such as spiræas and gladioli. They are now marketing some superb spikes of the latter. Gardenias will be made more of a specialty in the coming year.

The committee on prizes and exhibitions met at Horticultural hall, May 9, and made arrangements for the coming big orchid show. The attendance promises to be a record one; many are coming long distances to see it. Among English visitors, H. A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., is due in Boston next week, to be here during the exhibition.

Continued dry weather is causing a great deal of comment and some damage, and a much longer drought would retard growth to a serious point. Already vegetation is somewhat sickly and dry, and the lawns and parks present burnt offerings to the sun's rays.

of last week, and there was much more call for them this year than last. When white carnations could not be got, other flowers were substituted, and this new holiday in the flower business promises to be a success in the coming years.

The sympathy of the trade is with E. Nagel, who lost his wife last week. The funeral was held May 7, at Lakewood. Visitor: H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man. M. E. M.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been quiet. There has been some funeral work, but not much else. Mothers' day made a nice little spurt. The weather has been unusually cold for this season of the year, having a tendency to shorten up the cut flower supply. However, the roses and carnations are of much better quality than they would have been otherwise. Sweet peas and marguerites are moving well. Valley and orchids are plentiful.

The florists doing bedding work are patiently waiting for the weather to warm up, when they will have their hands more than full. Some good bedding plants are to be seen and all we need is a little warm weather to make them move.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Young Co., of Cumberland, has material on hand for a new greenhouse. This firm has added a number of cases of orchids to their collection.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, was in the city last Tuesday. Mr. Coles came over to attend the meeting of the State Florists' Association. After spending the day among the different florists, he found that he was a day early for the meeting. Nothing else to do, Mr. Coles went back to Kokomo that night, returning again the next day for the meeting.

W. J. Farney, the smiling salesman with M. Rice & Co., spent a few days in the city last week. Mr. Farney reports business good all along the line.

Homer Wiegand and Hans Kipke spent a day in Richmond last week.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held Wednesday night, May 11, at the Elks' Club. The meeting was well attended, a large number of out-of-town members being present. The question of the fall show came up, but nothing definite was decided upon, though the general sentiment was for a big show this fall. A committee was appointed to formulate plans for this show. The meeting was followed by a Dutch lunch and smoker. Out-of-town members present were: George F. Moore, of Rushville; Fred Lemon, Earl Mann, Charles Knopf and George Gause, of Richmond; J. S. Stuart, J. E. A. Haugh and E. Hyatt, of Anderson; W. W. Coles, of Kokomo; Herman Junge, of Cumberland, and Charles White, of North Manchester. H. L. W.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business has been moving along without any special excitement. There was plenty of stock of all kinds, which cleaned up nicely.

Mothers' day seems to have been better for the wholesalers than the retailers. The trade all knew about Mothers' day and prepared for it, but the trouble was they were like the circus man who thought he would surprise the people by coming into their town without advertising it; so he came and went and the masses never knew it.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, May 3, at the Fort Pitt hotel, with a good attendance and P. S. Randolph in the chair. S. J. Hatch, Allison Park, Pa., exhibited Cattleya Mossiae plants which were particularly fine; one plant had twenty-six flowers, another sixteen, and another twelve, all newly imported stock. Mr. Hatch is getting into the orchid business and his success so far has made him feel like throwing out his carnations entirely and devoting his whole time and space to orchids. The Phipps North Side Conservatories had some fine gloxinias, which were a credit to James Moore, the foreman. Neil McCallum, foreman of the West End park, exhibited early blooming shrubbery; some double flower crabs as large as a rose were particularly fine.

It is reported that the storm, Sunday evening, May 1, completely wrecked a new vegetable house, 120x600 feet, owned by W. H. Weinschenk, New Castle, Pa., and which was about half glazed; the wind got under the roof and tore it to pieces.

Fred Burki, who has been a victim of rheumatism, left recently for Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he expects to take the baths.

Traugott Malbranc, of Johnstown, Pa., stopped over on his way home from Chicago, where he has been looking over some of the latest things in greenhouse building, as he expects to add something to his plant this summer.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has been receiving some large consignments of orchid plants, with which they are stocking one of their houses; they find an increased demand each year for this flower and propose to be in shape to take care of it. PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Mothers' day, May 8, was the bright particular spot in flowers. The demand for white carnations was larger than last year, although we think the order for 25,000 went to Chicago. The prevailing prices for white were from $3 to $6 per hundred, although a few fancies soared higher. The demand came from the residence rather than the shopping districts of the city and from out of town. Colored carnations shared a little in favor, but other flowers were not worn.

The other features of the week ending May 11 are the heavy increase in the rose crops with most of the growers, and in other supplies of flowers to a lesser degree. Sweet peas have fallen off a trifle in price, owing more to lack of finish than to anything else. Callas are rather scarce, with moderate demand, while Easter lilies are plentiful and require pushing. The greens market is in poor shape. Adiantum of fine quality is not wanted. Smilax brings fair prices when it can be sold. Plumosus, though used, can hardly be called buoyant.

Peonies from local growers are an important addition to the market, indicating, as they do, the strong probability that they will not outlast May. Fancy blooms of P. festiva maxima are coming in from the south, with increased shipments of the varieties noted last week. Some southern iris is seen. Local snowballs have made their appearance, while lilac from down east is here.

The general market conditions may be summed up in this way: The supply largely exceeds the legitimate demand; the surplus, when not overripe, is taken by the street at some price, usually very low; choice flowers, like cattleyas, when in good condition, bring good prices, and the same applies to valley and to a few of the gardenias; fancy roses and Beauties sell far more readily than ordinary stock; prices are fair for the season.

The Demand for Plants.

Inquiry from Robert A. Craig elicited the information that the demand for all sizes of ferns, well grown, is unusually brisk, specimen Boston and their kin being particularly popular. A hurried trip through the houses showed a wonderful change since Easter. A few short weeks have transformed the scene. Ferns in all sizes, Pandanus Veitchii beautifully colored, crotons (this is a Craig specialty), Ficus pandurata, geraniums, including 10,000 S. A. Nutt. and salvias reign. This salvia is noteworthy. It is the new Zurich, grown as I have never seen it grown before. It is not uncommon to have scarlet sage in bloom in the greenhouses before planting-out time, but in order to get them in bloom they are apt to suffer a check that robs them of their foliage, giving them that premature, faded look so common among cigarette smoking youths. But this Salvia Zurich—I wish you could have seen it, and the smile on Mr. Craig's face as he pointed it out. It really is superb stock, with glossy green foliage to the pot, surmounted by brilliant, wholesome-looking flowers that did one good to see. They were there in quantity, too, and were appreciated, as shown by a tag to a far-away point on a nice block of these salvias. Stock like this is an inspiration, making one feel the possibilities in the art of growing plants.

Charles Netsch, of Buffalo, N. Y., was here a few days ago.

Robert Schoch, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a successful trip through western Pennsylvania and southern New York, where prosperous conditions prevail. The demand for fancy ribbon, Killarney and Richmond shades, is increasing.

Leo Niessen believes that all kinds of flowers will be worn on Mothers' day.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market was barely steady during a week of rain and chill, and even Saturday, with its brighter skies, and Mothers' day, seemed to exert little influence. The weather was against it. Prices were a little higher for white roses and carnations Saturday, but there were plenty that had to be closed out at greatly reduced figures on Sunday. The warmer and clearer weather of this week indicates a great abundance of shipments and lower prices.

Long Beauties were as low as 12 cents at times last week, for selected stock. All varieties of roses shared in the general slaughter. Carnations also have fallen, though a few sold at 3 cents on Saturday. The leftovers of the same lots were jobbed to the department stores and street merchants at $1 per hundred Monday morning. Lilies of all varieties are lower. Valley now competes with the outdoor and southern shipments. Lilac comes from local centers and some of it, owing to the sprinting ability of the gatherers, has its first cost reduced to a minimum. Tulips, daffodils and narcissi are about to retire from competition with the higher grade of decorative stock. Gardenias are on the street. Orchids are none too plentiful.

Dinners to Japanese princes and some brilliant weddings and theatrical events kept the retail market from stagnation last week. This week we have the president, the actors' fair and the launching of the dreadnought, Florida, calling for elaborate floral decorations.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club, May 9, was well attended, President Miller in the chair. W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., reported progress for the market committee, and of his visit to the city controller, who promised to bring the market project before the board of aldermen, which later reported favorably. He also referred to the excellent featuring of the project by the city papers, and especially by the Evening Telegram, which predicted for the enterprise an immediate success. He said the consummation of the market scheme cannot be long delayed, and everything now promises the speedy and practical establishing of a plant market for New York worthy of the name.

The transportation committee reported progress, as did Chairman Bunyard for the outing committee, announcing Tuesday, June 28, as the chosen date, and Witzel's grove at College Point the place for the annual "beanfeast," with the usual rates for tickets, $5 a couple, men $3.50, ladies $2, children $1 and babies free. The souvenir is to be the same style as last year, with portraits of the club members, and all who have not done so are requested to send photos to H. A. Bunyard without delay.

The exhibition committee, through W. E. Marshall, read a letter from Hitchings & Co., offering a large silver cup, beautifully chased, of the value of $25, suggesting a competition each year for the same class of exhibits. The exhibition committee recommended that the club offer the cup for competition at the monthly meeting, commencing with the June meeting and ending with the December meeting of this year, said cup to be known as the Hitchings Cup of Merit and to be awarded to the exhibitor scoring the greatest number of points during the next five meetings and to be presented to the winner at the first meeting of next year. The committee also recommended rules for the competition and the report was adopted. W. F. Sheridan, for the essay committee, announced an illustrated lecture at the June meeting by George V. the death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey were read and adopted.

Prof. Craig, of Ithaca, was the lecturer of the evening and for nearly an hour held the close attention of his audience. He spoke of floriculture as a fine art and said the Empire state leads the nation in the finer things of floriculture, nursery interests and vegetable growing, and in fruit culture nearly so. In 1905 the College of Agriculture was established at Cornell. Previous to that the federal government established its experiment station. The modesty of florists, he said, was exemplified in their lack of expressed requirements. He referred to the field experiments being made at Cornell with dahlias, asters and especially sweet peas and peonies. The Peony Society tests were started four years ago in cooperation with Cornell and 1,600 varieties of peonies may now be found on the trial grounds. A public report, he announced, will be complete and available in three weeks, free to all applicants. He also spoke of Cornell's work in cooperation with the Sweet Pea Society and of the 600 varieties now growing there. This is on the same line as the peony work and before January a report will be available for all. He then referred to the line of work under glass, the influence of artificial light on growing plants, electric and acetylene, in forcing bulbs, lilacs, etc., the acetylene rays being similar to those of the sun, with no question as to their influence on growth. He told of the four years of experiments in etherizing plants and the methods of applying sulphuric ether, its cost being ridiculously low. He suggested the experimental stations as a clearing house for the novelties of each season. He also dwelt upon the question of fertilizers, and spoke of the breeding and improving of plants, the good things that have come to us through chance, and the practical methods of sterilizing greenhouse soils, also the influence of electric currents in the soil on plant growth, and the control of insect pests by fumigating methods.

An interesting discussion followed the lecture, participated in by Harry Turner, C. H. Totty, Patrick O'Mara and others. The Rochester convention was suggested as the time and place to organize a movement in behalf of government assistance in experiment work. It was carried that a committee of seven be appointed to undertake the preliminary work to this end. Prof. Craig suggested that an advisory committee of five from the club be appointed to cooperate with the Cornell authorities. This suggestion was ably seconded by James Dean.

The cool weather has been worth many thousands of dollars to these firms. Mr. Runyon, of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., will leave shortly for his fruit farm in Cuba, where oranges, grape fruit, pineapples and tobacco have been planted in large quantities, and where the enterprise promises to become a great money-maker and splendid success. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will attend the nurserymen's convention next month at Denver. These firms believe the present paying prices are likely to continue for some time. Mr. Moon, Jr., of Morrisville, Pa., was a recent visitor at Elizabeth.

Over at Rutherford, Bobbink & Atkins have had the largest season in their history. There is as yet no let-up to the volume of shipments and the continued cool temperature has been a godsend. On the lawn of Mr. Atkins' residence is one special house is being built for them. An immense garage has just been completed, and a factory for the making of plant tubs. The Julius Roehrs Co., across the way, is in the midst of its preparations for the coming season, and rapidly getting its immense plant in order. Its importations of bay trees and evergreens this season have been the heaviest ever. The orchid range at present is the center of greatest interest, and a large display of all the popular varieties in season will be made at Boston. Ed. Roehrs, who has been in Europe for several weeks, returned home May 5, by the Mauretania, and will be at the Boston show. The cut of Warneri and Schrøderæ is over. Fine gigas, Gaskelliana, Mendelii and Mossiæ are being sent daily to the New York market. Prices are holding satisfactorily.

It is said the firm of Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., discovered last week, unexpectedly in their collection, a pure white orchid the value of which has been placed at $5,000.

Carrillo & Baldwin will have built for them at once, by the Lord & Burnham Co., a large orchid house at their new property in Mamaroneck. This firm is receiving large shipments from Brazil and other sections of South America. They supplied the entire orchid order given by Thomas Young, Jr., of Bound Brook, N. J., which amounted to $25,000. Mr. Carrillo is expected shortly from the south. Mr. Baldwin will be at the Boston show.

June 15, Samuel Woodrow, traveler for Bobbink & Atkins, will be married. June 21, James Davidson, superintendent of the Shipway estate at New Rolon, Conn., joins the ranks of the benedicts. Next week M. A. Bowe has the decorations for one of the largest weddings of the season, and the week after the popular florist himself will start on his honeymoon, with a charming and wealthy widow as accompanist.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. has some unique advertisements in the Sunday papers, featuring the chicken industries. Mayor Stumpp has returned from a short fishing excursion.

Kessler Bros. have sold a half interest in their new fern to H. Dreyer, of Elmhurst.

George T. Schuneman, of Baldwin, left for a European trip Tuesday, May 10.

C. C. Trepel, who has just completed the most strenuous season of his experience, is enjoying a well deserved rest with Mrs. Trepel in his new touring auto on Long Island.

George Saltford has returned from a brief visit at Rhinebeck, his old home, and the scene of his violet experiences.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held on Friday evening, May 6, and the large attendance showed the interest taken in the subject. After the reading of the minutes by the clerk, the usual routine of business was waived to give the lecturer a chance to make train connections. C. O. Bailey, of the State Forester's office, gave a witty and instructive talk on "Forestry and Insect Pests and the Progress Made in the Parasite Work." It would appear from his remarks that the various gipsy moth parasites which have been introduced as the real hope of holding this pest in check have, in the majority of instances, become established, and the hope is that they will increase rapidly from now on. The brown-tail moth, which, although a serious pest, is not to be compared with the gipsy moth, is in a fair way to be controlled, apparently, in Massachusetts, the diminution in numbers being quite noticeable on the North Shore last year. People living in non-infested areas fail to realize the magnitude of the work that has been done in the suppression of bugs by the state, by the towns and by individual land-owners. The lecturer exhibited a very complete case of moths in their various stages, with their natural enemies, the predatory flies and caterpillars, and was accorded a rising vote of thanks. After his departure the regular business of the meeting brought to a close one of the most interesting evenings the members have enjoyed this season.

ANTS ON LAWN.

Can you tell me something that will keep the ants off a lawn? W. K.

Locate the ant hills. Make a hole six inches deep, with a pointed hardwood stick. Pour a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide in each hole, immediately covering it up. Do it when the ground is damp. The fumes will suffocate all ants in the ground. Cyanide of potassium, ground to powder, mixed in sugar or molasses and laid about their haunts, will be greedily eaten and thousands will be poisoned thereby. Handle the cyanide carefully, as it is deadly poison, and do not use any open lights near the carbon, which is of an explosive nature. Water in which some coal tar is mixed, poured about the holes, also will drive ants away.

Of the promptness with which advertisers sell out on stock advertised in

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS' REVIEW

Advertising patronage is this season far heavier than at the same date in any previous year.

Note how promptly the advertisement served its purpose for each of the following—all received since last issue:

My advertisement in the Review has kept me in trouble right along. The first insertion brought so many orders that I was sold out in a short time. I had the advertisement omitted a week to catch up, then started again and the first insertion once more cleaned me out, one mail bringing orders for over 3,300, and every day more orders. I was more than pleased; I was surprised; I did not expect anything like such prompt answers. I had orders from Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, New York, Massachusetts and other states beside my own. I returned checks for at least $70 because I could not fill the orders brought by the advertisement.—E. Bushyager, Jeannette, Pa., May 9, 1910.

I am entirely sold out of coleus for the present; two insertions did the work, but you will hear from me again soon.—J. F. Link, Louisville, Ky., May 10, 1910.

Stop my salvia and petunia advertisements, as the stock was quickly sold.—N. E. Beck, Massillon, O., May 9, 1910.

Stop my Rex begonia advertisement; stock all sold.—Charles A. Moss, Spartanburg, S. C., May 4, 1910.

Cut out my advertisements in your valuable paper; they have found sale for all my surplus stock, but I certainly will give you my advertisement again when I have anything to offer.—J. G. Botkin, Urbana, O., May 6, 1910.

No florist need let surpluses go to waste; nor need he be content with his limited local field. The Review carries your offer to the whole trade.

WICHITA, KAN.

A severe hail storm swept over this city, May 1, and destroyed over 61,000 square feet of glass in three of the larger greenhouses, besides doing considerable damage to the plants and flowers.

Mr. Mueller reported that about 35,000 feet of glass was broken at his establishment on East Ninth street, the loss being between $3,000 and $4,000.

At the Culp greenhouses it was estimated that the loss on glass would reach $1,200 and on stock $1,000, with about ninety per cent of the glass area broken.

F. Kuchenmeister, proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses, reports a loss of $1,800, about $700 of which was glass.

All the glass in each of these houses was insured, but the plant loss will devolve entirely on the owners.

D. B. Cain & Co., who recently purchased the A. T. Buckenridge greenhouse at 1621 Fairview avenue, report the greater part of the lights broken, but say that most of the plants escaped injury.

MINNEAPOLIS.

In preparing for the flower show of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, to be given in the Minneapolis armory November 10 to 16, the Twin City committee recently organized as follows:

Wallace G. Nye, chairman; Theodore Wirth, L. S. Donaldson, J. S. Mitchell, O. C. Swanson and Hugh Will, all of this city; August S. Swanson, O. J. Olson and L. L. May, of St. Paul.

The committee approved the premium list as submitted, and will circulate it among florists. These lists are now in the hands of the secretary, J. P. Jorgenson, 3501 Portland avenue.

The premium list shows a great variety of prizes for plants and flowers,

The Market.

The market last week was in such a condition that our wholesalers were not able to dispose of their consignments as well as they liked and, of course, the prices suffered greatly where big lots were bought. This applies to all flowers that came in and this shows that the retail trade was not at all brisk last week.

White carnations sold well at the wholesale houses Saturday and Sunday for Mothers' day and the price went up to $3 and $5 per hundred. Sunday, however, was cold and rainy and spoiled the trade for the retailers, who had bought heavily, expecting a big sale. Had it not been for the storm they probably would have had good business. Colored stock had but little call and plenty of roses and carnations went to waste for want of demand. Funeral work alone kept it from being reported as exceptionally dull.

Roses are plentiful in all varieties and some of the prices obtained for them would look bad in print. Other stock, such as lilies, valley, sweet peas and peonies, are enough for any demand. Common ferns are becoming scarce, but all other greens are in plenty.

Various Notes.

C. A. Kuehn's wire shop has been busy of late with wire hanging baskets and other wire designs. The other wire shops also have been busy with this kind of work for the local demand.

E. J. Wedderburn, florist of Rockford, Ill., spent a few days with the trade last week. Mr. Wedderburn left Saturday, May 7, for Memphis, Tenn.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, Ill., was in town last week, buying supplies for one of the biggest wedding decorations Belleville has ever had. Mr. Halstead is now known in Belleville as "Grandpa" Halstead.

President Taft's visit last week used up quite a lot of first-class stock for that one day, as flowers were used in quantity at the Jefferson and Southern hotels and the St. Louis Club.

Chairman De Wever, of the bulletin committee, called a meeting at the Smith Wholesale Floral Co. Thursday, May 5. Only four responded to the call. The next meeting will not be called until after the busy planting season, when all can attend.

It has been rumored that one of the leading west end florists will open a branch store in the new La Salle building, Broadway and Olive street, at an annual rental of $8,000. His name is being withheld for the present.

Fred C. Weber, Jr., secretary of the Retail Florists' Association, has sent out letters to all local retail florists, asking them to coöperate and furnish suggestions for the welfare of the association.

Charles Wors has a force of men out on the hills of Illinois gathering ferns for the trade. Ferns at the wholesale houses have become scarce and the price is away up. These will be the common dagger ferns.

The Henry Shaw memorial services will take place this month at the usual place, Christ church, Thirteenth and Locust streets. The decorations will consist of plants from the garden.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., spent a day in this city last week. Mr. Ammann consigned a fine lot of white carnations to C. A. Kuehn for Mothers' day sales. His roses are of the best quality.

The planting-out in all the parks will begin early this week. The recent cold snap has put all trees and shrubs in anything but first-class condition. Acting Superintendent E. Strehle says he will have some fine bedding stock at all the big parks this year.

R. J. Windler is showing some fine blooming plants, including extra good ramblers in bloom.

The St. Louis Ladies' Home Circle held its regular monthly meeting Monday night at Trimps hall. Mrs. F. H. Meinhardt entertained at this meeting, which was well attended.

Our wholesalers, C. A. Kuehn, W. C. Smith, H. G. Berning and George H. Angermueller, have been receiving some extra heavy consignments of everything in season, but report demand somewhat slow last week.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its May meeting Monday, May 9, in the botanical laboratory of the Central high school. Dr. George T. Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23 1910.

THE Ozark Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., organized last autumn, reports its first season's business fully up to the expectations of the promoters.

THE rush is over; country trade still is active, but the mail-order departments are able to handle everything that comes their way without doing overtime.

UNEXPECTED as it was, the government crop report issued May 9 put the May 1 condition of winter wheat at 82.1, compared with 80.8 April 1, indicating a larger yield than last year because of increased acreage.

THE Norfolk & Western railway is exploiting the market gardening possibilities of the lands along its line, which extends from Norfolk to Cincinnati and Columbus, and from Winston-Salem to Hagerstown, Md.

REPORTS from Germany speak of a large demand for lily of the valley pips and the booking of orders that will practically consume the season's crop. It is said there is at present no oversupply of pips in any part of the world.

THE Dingley tariff law continued in force twelve years, but it looks as though the seed trade would have an opportunity to secure corrections in the present law within a much shorter period. Many interests, besides the consumers, are demanding that the whole subject be reopened.

Why We Are Located in New York

Some people say, "We can buy just as well at home, so why should we buy in New York?" Now, can you buy just as well at home? That's the question. The writer of this Ad was born and raised in the West, but there is no use denying facts about the matter. New York is the greatest business city in the world. It is the richest city in the world. It is second largest in population and we believe will be first when next census is taken. It has every facility for conducting business accurately, quickly, and conveniently. The assessed valuation of property three-quarters of a mile square in the dry goods section of New York City is greater than the assessed valuation of the entire city of Chicago. Ninety per cent of all the importations of bulbs, etc., come to New York before they are distributed—even more than 75% of the Japan bulb importations come right through the West to New York to be distributed. The freight rate from Yokohama to New York is the same as to Chicago and the goods usually get to New York first—because the great bulk comes here. On the other hand, the freight rates from Europe are greater to Chicago than to New York, again making New York the greatest distributing place for our products. Direct Chicago shipments often lie on the docks here an unnecessarily long time before they are transhipped. New York is headquarters for all Custom House entries, and all inland valuations are regulated from here. Foreign news of importance reaches New York first and there is no doubt but that New York is the bulb center of America. There is no place in the world better situated as a purchasing center than New York. As a matter of fact, although strange to say, Japan bulbs may be purchased better from New York than if a buyer were in Japan. These are cold facts and however strong the desire may be to refute them, it cannot be done. They are some of the reasons why we are located in New York. It would be impossible for us to do the business elsewhere at the present time. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are well known all over as a brand of quality and we are on the ground and working all the time to make that Brand greater still.

You may have a catalogue upon application. It is illustrated and tells some facts about lily bulbs and other things.

lector's assessment of duty at twenty-five per cent ad valorem was confirmed. The following was the finding of General Appraiser Waite:

"No testimony has been introduced in the case, so we are unable to say from any evidence that this merchandise is commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock. An inspection of the sample and the record reveals the fact that it is roots of the rhubarb or pieplant, imported for the purpose of propagation and cultivation. It does not fulfill the requirement of what we understand to be bulbs or bulbous roots. We think we are warranted under the circumstances of this case in being governed by the use to which such a commodity is generally put, to wit, propagation and cultivation, and that use, in our judgment, would place it under the provision for nursery or greenhouse stock."

DUTY ON HYACINTHS.

In the REVIEW of February 24 reference was made to the fact that at Boston J. Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, and customers there, had raised the question of classification of hyacinth bulbs for duty under the new tariff act. The protest was heard by the Board of General Appraisers at New York May 4.

The importers claimed that the bulbs were dutiable under paragraph 263 of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as "all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage," at 50 cents per thousand. The Government claimed that the bulbs were subject to duty under a provision of the same paragraph which provides for "hyacinth, astilbe, dielytra and lily of the valley clumps," at $2.50 per thousand.

The importers claimed that Congress, in constructing the section of paragraph 263 providing for hyacinth, etc., at $2.50 per thousand, meant the word clumps to pertain to hyacinths, astilbes and dielytras as well as to lilies of the valley. The Government had a bulb grower from Holland and numerous dealers testify that no such thing as a hyacinth clump was known to the trade or ever imported.

The Government claimed that the sprouted mother bulb, that is the large bulb with smaller bulbs growing thereon in places where cuts have been made, was not an article of commerce and therefore could not be what Congress meant, because they would not presumably pass a law which provided for an article which was not bought and sold.

Prof. L. C. Corbett, of the Department of Agriculture, testified that the Government was conducting a station at Bellingham, Wash., for the purpose of raising and propagating hyacinths, and in his opinion the mother bulb was too delicate and required too careful handling to be imported. Both the Government and the importers have handed in all their testimony and are awaiting the decision of the Board.

Among those present on subpoena by the Government and whose testimony was

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

In the REVIEW of February 24 it was suggested that, in spite of the somewhat ambiguous language, it was the intention of the framers of the tariff that hyacinth bulbs should be dutiable at $2.50 per 1,000, and that seems to be the general opinion of the trade.

BUSINESS OF SEED GROWING.

[A paper by W. W. Tracy, of the United States Department of Agriculture, continued from the Review of May 6.]

Need for Improvement in Practices.

It is evident that the present practice of growing and handling seeds is by no means ideal or such as to give the greatest possible uniformity of varietal character. In the case of a majority of the vegetable cultures* in America, if all or even ninety per cent of the plants were as nearly alike in varietal type as the twenty per cent which were the most alike, the profit from these cultures would be greatly increased; often actually doubled. On the other hand, the growing of vegetable seed under present conditions is not particularly profitable or satisfactory to the farmer. Is there any possibility of betterment? We think so.

*The word "culture" is used here in the way it is used in Europe to signify a planting or separate lot. If a 5-acre field or a greenhouse is planted wholly with Grand Rapids lettuce, all sowed or set at the same time, either is a culture of Grand Rapids lettuce; but if the field is planted with two different varieties of lettuce, or the house with different lots of Grand Rapids lettuce, set at different times, each different lot is a culture of that variety.

Seed planters are coming to realize more fully the importance of the use of better seed and the folly of being so largely influenced by low prices and a persuasive salesman in buying, while seedsmen and professional growers are learning that wisdom and care in the breeding and growing of the seeds they offer is quite as important as shrewdness in buying and skillful handling and selling, and that seeds of the best quality can not be secured without the active, intelligent coöperation of the producing farmer.

Suggestions for Possible Improvement.

The seed grower should come into closer touch with the producing farmer and should make a greater effort to place his contracts not only with good cultivators who are most favorably situated both as to climate and soil for growing and facilities for the handling of some particular seed crop, but with those who are likely to continue to grow seed, become interested in the varietal character of the sorts they grow, and through a better knowledge of their cultural requirements secure greater uniformity and stability of product. It is true that this necessitates giving the farmer a better place "in the game" and paying him higher prices for growing the seed, but this is more than offset, even financially, by the elimination of careless and incompetent farmers who are likely to fail to deliver the expected crop and through whose negligence carefully selected stock seed is often lost. The advantages from the building up of a clientage of experienced and careful farmers who would not only deliver better seed, but in more uniform quantities, so as to lessen the liability to the alternating periods of scarcity and surplus which are now so common and unsatisfactory, would more than counterbalance the additional price paid. Again, the necessity and expense of constantly hunting up new growing centers and training new farmers would be lessened, though possibly not entirely obviated, since this is often necessitated by the local development of special diseases or insect pests as a result of the large area devoted to some particular crop and of permitting it to come to full maturity of seed before harvesting.

One of the most important factors in the growing of a stock of seed which will develop into plants of uniform varietal character is to form a very clear conception of precisely the varietal form wanted. It is very important that this be clearly defined and written out and that such written description be frequently referred to in order to avoid indefiniteness and change in the type selected, which is very often the cause of want of uniformity in seed otherwise carefully grown. It is true that it is a practical impossibility to write a description which will enable a reader to recognize with certainty the varietal characteristics the writer has in mind, but the attempt to write such a description will always clarify the writer's conception of the exact type he seeks; and it is believed that a rigid adherence to exactly the same varietal character for successive generations is the key to the production of seed which is certain to develop into plants of that exact character.

A second factor is the growing, by methods which will vary with different species, of stock seed, all of which shall not only be the product of plants of the same varietal character, but which is known to be the product of just such plants for the greatest possible number of generations. This stock seed may then be given into the hands of the farmer for the production of seed for market.

The seedsman and the farmer should come to a very clear understanding as to the qualities most desirable in each variety, and these should be established by a sample, a photograph, and a full varietal description. An intelligent and interested farmer, particularly if he confines his seed crop to a single variety of a species, is in a better position to select the farmer. He should make a careful study not only of the particular crop, but of the variety best adapted to his conditions of soil and climate and of the cultural methods which will give him the greatest certainty of a crop of seed, and also of the methods of harvesting and cleaning it which will secure the greatest possible return of seed which shall be bright, clean, highly vital, and fit for seedsmen's use. Many cases are known where of two crops of the same seed grown on adjacent farms and which up to the time of harvest were equally promising, one gave a good return of seed which was clean, highly vital and satisfactory to both farmer and seedsman, while the other crop, solely because of careless handling, was so discolored and lacking in vitality that it was unfit and worthless for seedsmen's use, though it might bring as much as the other if both were sold as grain.

Peculiarities of Growing Contracts.

A contract for growing seed differs quite materially from one for the manufacture or delivery of most merchandise in that the practical possibility of its fulfillment is very dependent upon weather and other conditions which man is powerless to predict or control. The most that such a contract can equitably provide for is that an honest and well-directed effort be made to grow and deliver the quantity of seed contracted for. The price specified in the contract should be based upon the actual cost of the production and delivery of the seed of the particular variety named under normal and average climatic conditions. A price which would be equitable under such conditions might prove entirely too low to meet the actual cost of the growing, harvesting and delivery of the crop in an exceptionally unfavorable season.

Under such circumstances the farmer sometimes fails to appreciate the importance of the agreement he has entered into and either fails to plant the area under contract, plows it up and plants some more promising crop, or neglects to properly cultivate and harvest the meager crop which it is possible to secure. In other instances when because of a general failure of the crop of that particular sort seed is exceptionally scarce and valuable and some "pirate" seedsman offers double the contract price for the crop the farmer lets him have it, claiming that he is justified in doing so because his contract was unfair.

both he and the contracting seedsman knew that because of exceptional weather conditions it would cost him more than the contract price to do so, the farmer has received the bare contract price, though knowing that he could readily sell the crop for double the price he received.

In growing garden seed on contract, permanently satisfactory dealing will depend upon all settlements being made upon an equitable rather than upon a simple legal basis, and a reputation for fair and equitable dealing is most important to all concerned.

Conclusion.

This discussion has been limited to a consideration of the common practice in the growing of garden seed, with little direct reference to the possible growth of the industry or the openings it affords for the development of a profitable business. When one compares the prices paid at the corner store for small packages of vegetable seeds with the actual cost of growing the seed, seed growing would seem to be enormously profitable; but such prices are only obtainable for small quantities and in the course of a retail trade, which the farmer is seldom able to command or satisfactorily supply. The trade conditions certainly would not justify an inexperienced farmer in planting vegetables of any kind for a crop of seed with the expectation of being able to sell the seed at prices which would make the crop as profitable or as satisfactory as one of grain. It is true he might secure a crop in a season when, because of a general shortage, he could sell it at a price which would make it profitable, but it is more probable that he could not sell it at all, or only at less than it cost. Neither would it generally be wise for a farmer to attempt to establish a connection with some seed house and devote his whole farm to seed growing. The wiser course when one has good reason to believe that conditions under his control are such that he can profitably grow seed would be for him to get into communication with some seed merchant or seed grower and secure a contract for the growing of a limited acreage. If he found that his conditions enabled him to produce certain vegetable seeds of such superior quality that they would command remunerative prices, he might make vegetable-seed growing a very profitable and satisfactory part of his regular farm operations.

GROWING STRAWBERRY PLANTS.

Can you tell me how to grow strawberry plants for sale? I have a great many calls for plants and think I will go into that part of the business. What varieties would be best to start with? How should I get the stock and where? How should it be grown and how can our stock be increased for future years? What varieties should be grown together in order to fertilize? I live in the state of Pennsylvania. B. J. P.

Strawberries succeed best on well drained land, which will hold moisture longest during summer droughts. They can be grown in almost any soil, from that of a light, sandy nature to one of stiff clay. A rather heavy and retentive loam is preferable. The ground should be liberally manured and deeply plowed. A good time for you to plant will be early in May. As a rule, commercial growers prefer spring to summer or early fall planting. There are many ways of growing the plants. As a general thing the matted row plan is most popular. You can set either a single row of plants eight inches apart and allow three feet between the rows, or plant a double row a foot apart and allow thirty inches between each double row.

Cultivate regularly until the end of August; then discontinue it. Do not apply any winter mulch until the ground is hard frozen; only give enough of some light material, such as marsh hay, straw or litter, to just cover the plants. Remove this early in April. If plant production and not fruit is your aim, the plants can be allowed to make runners freely, merely cutting off the end ones or weakly ones. A fresh planting each spring is necessary to keep up a stock which will give an abundance of runners.

Each section of the country has some strawberries peculiar to itself, but some varieties succeed in nearly all sections. In your state I would recommend the following as specially good: Climax, very early; Success, early; Sample, midseason to late; Marshall, midseason; Nic Ohmer, midseason; Commonwealth, late; Stevens' Late Champion, late; Gandy, late. These are all perfect flowering varieties, except Sample, which, being a pistillate sort, should have a perfect variety planted every third or fourth row, in order that its flowers may be properly pollenized. About all nurserymen and many strawberry specialists can supply plants.

tomato foliage; namely, leaf-spot, leaf-mold and bacterial blight. We have three or four diseases that attack especially tomato stems. These are the bacterial blight and the sclerotium disease, which seems to have been imported from the south. In addition, we have two or more root diseases; namely, rosette (rhizoctonia), and nematodes.

Upon the fruits of the tomato we have the attacks of the bacterial blight, the black-rot and the point-rot. These are all parasitic. We must add to the parasitic list a disease similar to the Mosaic disease of tobacco, which is apparently caused in both tobacco and tomatoes by an organized ferment which breaks down the leaf-green.

Leaf-mold.—This is a common trouble on forcing house tomatoes near the close of the season. It is a true disease, however, caused by the mold fungus, Cladosporium fulvum. The diseased leaves show lighter spots above, while beneath these are covered by the grayish-brown mold fungus. It is profitably controlled by any good fungicide used as a spray.

Leaf-spot.—The leaf-spot fungus, Septoria Lycopersici Speg., is more of an outdoor trouble. In wet seasons, like 1909, it attacks the foliage to such an extent that most tomato vines are entirely bare of leaves toward the end of the season. In the greenhouse it is rarely a serious trouble, though known to occur. It is successfully controlled by about three thorough sprayings with Bordeaux mixture. The spray, however, may necessitate the wiping off of the fruit before marketing.

Bacterial blight.—This is a wilt disease, caused by the same bacterium as that causing the potato wilt, Bacillus solanacearum. It attacks not only branches, but at times entire plants. It is less common under glass than in fields. Where it breaks out on eggplant or tomatoes, care should be taken to burn the diseased refuse.

Sclerotium blight.—This is a wilt-like disease, attacking the stems, and was first discovered in Florida in 1892. The first symptom of sclerotium blight is a wilting of the terminal portion of the plant. The cause of the disease is a fungus which is carried over from year to year by means of small bodies in the stems, which resemble mustard seeds. Sometimes these sclerotia grow together into larger, somewhat irregular masses. The color of the mature sclerotia varies from almost black to mahogany red. Apparently the one method of handling, in addition to soil steaming, is to gather and burn all diseased plants.

Fusarium wilt.—There is a fusarium wilt of tomatoes, which differs from the bacterial wilt chiefly in the organism which causes it; namely, a pink mold,

The Harriman Plant Setter does away with tedious back-breaking work in setting out or transplanting vegetable and flower plants. It is especially desirable for transplanting young strawberry, tomato, cabbage, sweet potato and tobacco plants, as well as potatoes, onions and other tubers. It sets plants at any desired depth, weighs less than 5 pounds, is substantially constructed and easy to operate. A great time and labor saver. Delivered by prepaid express to any point east of Kansas City for $2.25.

Fusarium species. The remedy is the same as for the other two just mentioned.

Rhizoctonia.—The rosette fungus on lettuce shows in somewhat rosette development on tomatoes. It causes the root branches to die off, and the leaves fail to develop fully. It is handled by the soil treatments if these are thoroughly done.

Nematodes.—These give similar trouble to that on other greenhouse plants, and are controlled by the soil steaming.

Anthracoze. — Anthracoze fungus (Colletotrichum phomoides) seems to be more frequent eastward and in West Virginia than with us. It causes small depressed spots in the fruit, and occurs freely outdoors.

Black rot.—The black rot fungus (Macrosporium solani) sometimes appears as rotted spots in tomatoes. It is less common under glass. Outdoors it seems to attack very ripe fruits, as well as green ones. Where necessary to use sprays, these will be found effective against the troubles just named.

Point-rot.—We often have outbreaks of point-rot, or decay at the blossom end of green tomatoes, just when the call for water is loudest in early summer.

Outdoors we have the same sometimes in dry periods. Both under glass and in the open the point-rot follows limited water supply. Recently it has been shown that bacteria are the real cause of the decay, the condition being insufficient supply of moisture to the plants. We can overcome the condition by more liberal watering or, better, by mulching and water combined.

LOUISVILLE.

The Market.

Business for the last fortnight has been good. The demand for funeral work has been steady and stock is cleaned up daily. Carnations are off crop, but there are still enough to go around. Roses are in good supply; the quality is good, bad or indifferent, according to prices. The best stock is wholesaling at $6 per hundred. Sweet peas are in good supply and are selling at $1 per hundred, retail. Ten weeks' stocks are on the wane. Some few Blushing Bride gladioli are coming in, and also a little swainsona. Peonies have been held back a great deal by the cool weather, but will be rather plentiful in a few days. Outdoor valley is about cut out and the supply has been reduced considerably.

In potted plants, hydrangeas are most prominent and some good ones are to be had. Some few primroses and potted rose plants are to be seen, but the demand for the latter has been a good deal shorter this year than formerly. Green goods, especially smilax, are scarce.

Mothers' day has come and gone and some extra business was done. A little more advertising in future years will probably make a big difference in the observance of the day here. The governor declined to issue a proclamation concerning Mothers' day, he claiming that every day is mothers' day in Kentucky. That does not sell any white or colored flowers for the florist. Where is the Kentucky Society of Florists, and what have its members been doing?

Various Notes.

Jacob Schulz has planted three borders, 5x140 feet, in asters, and will plant one border the same size in mums. He has nearly completed a new house, which will be one of the best houses in this vicinity. Concrete walls and borders have been put into it. There is ventilation on both sides and at the ridge. The pipe posts and purlins make the house light and airy. He expects to cut some good stock from this house. Miscellaneous stock for cut flowers will be grown.

Adam Heitz has his greenhouses well stocked with bedding plants and has a good many orders booked for cemetery work. His geraniums are hard to beat.

The family of H. G. Walker had a narrow escape from suffocation last week. A fire at 3:30 a. m., in an apartment adjoining their own, filled their place with smoke, and Mr. Walker ran a block in less than two minutes to turn in the alarm. The damage to Mr. Walker's place was slight.

Geo. E. Schulz has returned, after a ten days' visit to Boston and New York, combining business with pleasure. He is well pleased with his trip.

A. Rasmussen, the New Albany rose and carnation grower, is sending some fine stock across the river. His roses are especially good and he is cutting quantities of them.

K. R.

PACIFIC COAST.

DALLAS, ORE.—D. L. Thomas, formerly a florist at Salem, Ore., has removed his business to this city.

PORTLAND, ORE.—George Otten, formerly a florist, has been engaged by the Board of Education to work out plans for beautifying the grounds of the public schools. The Board has $20,000 to devote to the purpose.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions last week were at a low ebb, with an occasional funeral to relieve the monotony, as well as a few weddings.

Stock has been plentiful. Carnations are a glut on the market; yet the prices have held up remarkably well. Roses are in fine crop. Some choice Marylands and Princess Metschersky are in evidence. Sweet peas are coming along slowly and maintain a high standard. Violets have at last been eliminated from the market. Bedding stock is in unusual demand, and the general report is that stock of first quality is about exhausted.

Preparations for planting carnations outside are everywhere noticeable, as all danger of adverse weather has passed.

Mothers' day brought elegant results to the florists, and advance orders for white carnations were heavy. The Mothers' Congress established booths in various public buildings, in order to advance the cause by means of the sales. Governor Benson issued a proclamation, declaring Mothers' day a day to be observed by all.

Peonies are becoming more plentiful and of fine quality. The indications are that the crop will be over before Memorial day. Water lilies have made their appearance and are welcome visitors, as well as a source of revenue to the florists.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues to be most beautiful and everything in the floral line can be called likewise, provided one does not touch on business, which is rather a scarce article with most of the dealers. Even at its worst, however, it is a shade better than it was at this time one year ago. This is somewhat of an encouragement, but the fact remains that things are at a low ebb. This is because flowers are in oversupply and the continued fine weather means that the avalanche of blossoms will not cease for several weeks.

It is hardly worth while to put prices on such articles as carnations. These can be bought for almost anything the retailer wishes to offer. This is not quite true, however, with roses, for there is a scarcity of good red sorts. Whites and pinks are being brought to town in large quantities, and Cecile Brunner is plentiful for the first time in many moons. Easter lilies of the best quality can be had as low as $1 per dozen and valley has depreciated fully fifty per cent in value in the last two weeks.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

THE American Peony Society's annual meeting and exhibition will be held at Boston June 9 and 10.

W. VAN KLEEF, JR., of W. Van Kleef & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, is at Chicago this week.

It is reported that a demand has developed for Montana larch seeds to be used by German nurserymen.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Henry C. Eickhoff, a nurseryman of Julietta, near Indianapolis, Ind.

GEORGE S. JOSSELYN, Fredonia, N. Y., has gone to Canada on a fishing trip and expects to be away from business several weeks.

JOHN W. GATES, millionaire operator in wheat and in Wall street, has gone into the nursery business. He is one of the chief stockholders of the Port Arthur Nursery Co., Port Arthur, Tex., of which C. D. Otis is manager.

THE state of New York has appropriated $50,000 for use by the Commissioner of Agriculture in an emergency to eradicate or prevent the spread of the brown-tail or gypsy moth and other dangerous pests or diseases.

THE Rogue River Valley Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Medford, Ore., with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are C. F. Cook, F. H. Cook and B. Franklin. Thirty acres of land have been leased and some thousands of seedlings are already growing.

H. M. WHITING, Geneva, N. Y., is meeting with trouble in making deliveries in the vicinity of Albion, N. Y., one of the obstacles being action at law based on the law which makes it a misdemeanor for a person to represent himself as a company or partnership except certain requirements have been complied with. It is said that farmers in Orleans, Monroe and other counties have clubbed together to employ legal assistance and refuse to accept deliveries.

THE Berryhill Nursery Co., at Thirteenth and Berryhill streets, Harrisburg, Pa., recently purchased a 45-acre tract of land on the Jonestown road, which will be used for growing nursery stock, including hardy shrubs, trees, evergreens, fruit trees, roses, etc. The present office and show grounds will be continued as heretofore. The officers of the company are: O. P. Beckley, president; H. L. Carl, treasurer; W. E. Hamilton, secretary; E. Moreh, superintendent, and H. Riebe, nursery foreman.

A BLUE ROSE

The Greatest Rose Novelty of the Century

It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.

The New Rambler (Violet Blue), hailed by the German rose growers as the forerunner of a genuinely cornflower blue rose, is a seedling of Crimson Rambler, very vigorous and hardy, and free blooming.

THE SEASON.

A number of nurserymen reported on the spring business and commented on its peculiarities. In general, the volume of sales is said to have been larger than ever, in spite of the shortness of the season. Here are some further reports:

Franklin Davis Nursery Co., Baltimore.

On account of the very early spring with us, the shipping season of 1910 has been short. Business, however, has been satisfactory and we have cleaned up on many items, especially apple and peach. We are still doing some planting in the way of evergreens and ornamental stock. Recent heavy rains have delayed our plantings of young stock at the nursery, but the season is now quite favorable and everything very promising for fall.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.

We are hardly over with our season's business yet and are still rushed some with our retail orders. Think our nursery business, in the volume, will compare favorably with any year that we have ever had, although we have done no figuring yet. The season was a peculiar one, owing to the first part of March and last part of April being transferred on the weather man's calendar, and a great deal of ornamental stock that we could have sold was too far advanced to handle when we could get around to filling the orders. In fruit trees, the demand was almost entirely for peach and apple, and not as heavy as usual on other items.

W. & T. Smith Co., Geneva, N. Y.

We have just passed through one of the busiest seasons that we have ever experienced. On account of the early season, all of our work came together and if it had not been for our exceptional facilities for handling business, we never should have been able to accomplish what we did. As a matter of fact, we have crowded about eight weeks into four. The demand for stock has been very general and there are but few items which have not been moved.

Weather conditions at present are very favorable for all stock which has been planted, but on account of the frequent rains we are delayed in our work.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N.Y.

We are glad to report upon our experience in handling this season's business as compared with other years. It has been a peculiar spring. The warm weather of March brought out instructions from all quarters, to ship immediately. It looked like the selling season was to be cut short fully a month, and that caused a sharp slump in prices. The retail nurserymen who had bought on estimates got scared and began to unload their surplus. It was not a great volume, but sufficient to affect the market. There was no reason for prices not holding up until the end of the season. We have been shipping up to May 7, out of cellared stock, of course. The last three weeks in April were as good as any we have had this season, and we have little to go on the brush heap. Business shows an increase over last season. We have no complaint with conditions. We sell what we grow, and can not well expect to do more than that.

Andorra Nurseries, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

It has been a most peculiar season, by reason of the extremely warm weather during the month of March. In fact, it was perfect June weather, and it brought all lines of deciduous stock forward with a rush. This meant that business was poured in all at once, and in the last eight weeks we have been obliged to put through an ordinary fifteen weeks' business. All stocks have sold and business has been very good.

BLOOMING OF WHITE LILAC.

Why is it that white lilacs do not bloom as much as the ordinary lilac? What can be done to increase the bloom? Does cutting the bloom start the growth or stop its bloom for the following year?

G. T. M.

White lilacs should flower just as profusely as the purple ones. Perhaps your bushes need enriching. Give them a mulch of well rotted manure each winter, lightly forking it in around them, and you will speedily make them more vigorous and floriferous.

Cutting some wood away with the bloom may check the flowering on that particular shoot for one season, but if you will select the tops of the longest shoots it will help to keep the plants shapely and thus be of benefit, being in the nature of judicious pruning. Pick off all the flowers after they fade. If allowed to remain on and go to seed, they weaken the plant's vitality.

C. W.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Roses are plentiful and are selling readily at good prices. Carnations also are plentiful and are selling well. Irises are being used a great deal at present for centerpieces in decorations, but the supply is small, considering the demand, as the heavy frosts spoiled a great many. Some peonies are blooming in sheltered yards. The supply of sweet peas is equal to the demand.

There has been a good demand for shrubbery this spring and all who handle it were quite busy; some are not through planting it yet. There is one shrub that is extremely scarce in this market—the desmodium. The question is often asked, "Why don't the nurserymen grow more, since the demand is always far more than the supply?"

Various Notes.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is now cutting large quantities of roses. Some of their Beauties are extra fine. Their carnations are better than ever before and they are getting good prices for them. Their retail cooler is always filled with the choicest of stock.

D. Freudenthal is now dealing in bedding plants—a new addition to his trade. We hope he will be successful in his new venture.

C. C. Maynard, the nurseryman, says he has had an excellent trade this spring. His supply yard is located at Thirty-fourth and Main streets.

J. Austin, at Thirty-fifth street and Park avenue, says that some one is gathering porch boxes, to be planted in his name. He is anxious to find out who it is. Mr. Austin has just received a large lot of box trees, in all shapes and forms. He says he is doing a fine business in his new store. He expects to build two large greenhouses this summer, to grow carnations for his store. His rheumatism is disappearing fast.

The window of the Rock Flower Co. is always handsomely decorated and is remarkably pleasing to the eye. This firm was quite busy last week with funeral work.

Nelson Jarrett has his wagons in the market filled with good stock. He always has some of the best grown geraniums in the market and they sell at sight.

R. S. Brown & Son report a heavy trade for the last six weeks. On some stock they are already running extremely short.

A. Barbee, the republican candidate, was elected alderman for the upper house in our last election. He feels justly proud in being so popular as to receive so large a majority of votes.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co., now at Ninth street and Highland avenue, will move August 1 to their new location, 1010 East Thirty-first street. They have leased a store room at this number and will fit it up as a first-class cut flower shop about July 1. They will build greenhouses to connect with the rear of the store at once. They have also rented a large piece of ground north of this store, in which to plant out their summer stock, such as asters, snapdragons, gladioli, dahlias, etc. Their greenhouse will be built with brick walls and heated by hot water. The firm name will be changed to Humfeld-Orear Floral Co. Leon Orear will be half owner in this new firm. He is a natural artist and can hold his own with anyone in the west.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business is getting quiet here, although white carnations are in big demand, the smallest making $3. Peonies, Spanish iris and sweet peas are both plentiful and cheap. Bedding stock is in unusually great demand.

Club Banquet.

Casting aside the cares and worries of everyday business life, prominent business men of the capital, with ladies, enjoyed the annual banquet of the Washington Florists' Club at Rauscher's Monday evening, May 3. The large banquet hall was transformed into "a veritable fairyland of flowers," by what the local reporters called "a masterpiece of the florists' decorative art." "Green and white were used effectively in the decoration scheme, and the banquet room was a scene of floral splendor seldom equaled in this city."

Ninety-five diners were present, more than half of whom were beautifully gowned women, whose presence added much to the pleasure of the occasion. A pleasant surprise to Toastmaster William F. Gude came shortly after the opening of the festivities, when Fred M. Owens, in an eloquent little speech, presented him a handsome silver service. The set consisted of twelve pieces, and was the gift of Mr. Gude's friends in daily business life. Mr. Gude was completely overcome, and it was some time before he could make a brief speech of thanks and appreciation to the donors.

The part that flowers play in the molding of civic life and beauty furnished themes for several brief after-dinner addresses. Among those who spoke were Commissioners Rudolph and Judson, former Commissioner Macfarland, and Fred M. Owens.

Various Notes.

Everybody said the annual banquet of the Florists' Club, held at Rauscher's, on the evening of May 3, was a great success. Everybody was there, the commissioners were there, the retailers were there, the growers were there, and there were at least three out-of-towners: Joseph J. Goudy, Alvah Jones and Israel Rosnosky.

The popular price for white carnations in Washington wholesale markets for Mothers' day was 3 cents.

David Grillbortzer has a fine lot of the best varieties of carnations planted out in the field.

William J. Moore is once more at the helm at 1212 New York avenue. Alvah Jones has returned to Philadelphia.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The first week in May brings rather unusual conditions. Owing to the cool, dark weather which has prevailed for a fortnight or more, flowers, where they have been cared for, are in excellent condition, being exceptionally good values for the prices obtained. There is, of course, considerable rubbish of little or no value.

Business has fallen off, the demand being rather weak and irregular, especially on colored stock. Carnations were rather scarce Saturday, especially white, which brought 3 cents wholesale, as the demand was heavy on account of Mothers' day.

Pot plants are moving slowly, because of the excessive rain, and on Wednesday, May 4, we had a light frost, which hurt the strawberry crop in certain locations.

Valley is plentiful this season and can be had for 25 cents per hundred. Daisies are in large supply and have a heavy demand, especially the yellow. Ferns and asparagus are exceedingly scarce. Hydrangeas are plentiful and move slowly. Some peonies are to be had, but only in small lots.

Various Notes.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. is planning several more modern houses, to be erected shortly for geraniums.

The parks and squares have been planted with 40,000 pansies, which were grown by a local florist.

J. Bolgiano & Sons gave away 7,000 white carnations Saturday, May 7, for Mothers' day. Every person entering the store was presented with one neatly wrapped. In one of their windows were over 500 small chicks, four or five days old, which were hatched in incubators at the store in full view of the public.

The Market.

Trade has been heavy the last two weeks, with stock more plentiful, but there has been no surplus of anything. Roses are in good supply, but the demand cleans them up right along. Brides and Maids are the only ones that are in heavy crop at this time. Carnations have been quite plentiful, but they are cleaned up daily. Enchantress is more in evidence than any other variety and proves a good seller at all times.

Sweet peas are coming in fine and find a ready sale; the stems are unusually long. Outdoor valley made its appearance for a short time, but it is about done now.

Beauties are moving better and the prices are down. Smilax has been scarce, but a good supply of asparagus helped out nicely.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day was a great surprise to the trade here. They all stocked up heavily for the event, but the demand swept everything before it. White carnations sold out early, and after they were gone the colored ones disappeared, with all other stock following closely. It reminded everyone of an Easter rush, but it is the opinion of the trade, and also of many customers, that it would be better to wear the mother's favorite flower, it being thought that this would spread the demand over all varieties.

William Graff sold out clean Sunday morning and had to close the doors with a sign: "All sold out, more tomorrow."

Sherman Stephens said he could only get a handful of white carnations to go around.

The Riverside Floral Co. reports heavy business for Mothers' day.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. cleaned up everything in cut flowers. This firm is cutting heavily on sweet peas at present.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports a regular Easter rush for Mothers' day.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y.—A. B. Reynolds has been using in his local advertising a unique and artistic postal card, designed by himself. The picture on the card is entitled "A Fight with Jack Frost," and represents a greenhouse almost buried in snow and ice, while in one corner of the view is a beautiful pyramid of potted plants, symbolizing the fact that Jack was not the victor.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

To judge by the way stock moved the greater part of last week, one can only report that business was good. Death having claimed several of our older residents, who were prominent both in business and social circles, trade in that line of work was heavy and kept certain classes of stock cleaned up all the time. Receipts in most lines were heavier than the week previous and, if the present favorable weather continues, buyers will have an easier time of it. The supply of carnations, although somewhat heavier, was not equal to the demand, and towards the end of the week they brought $3 and $4, with white realizing $5. On Sunday morning it was impossible to get white carnations at any price. And yet some will say that the observance of Mothers' day is not at all general here!

There was a good demand throughout the week for Beauties and lily of the valley.

Various Notes.

F. Bliese, of Schneck & Bliese, Waukesha, Wis., was compelled to call for stock Sunday morning, which they used to fill a rush order on the same day.

Otto Sylvester and son Alfred, of Oconomowoc, Wis., spent Sunday in Milwaukee.

The sudden deaths, on May 9, of George Brumder, pioneer German publisher, and E. P. Hackett, retired real estate man, have caused two vacancies in the Milwaukee Park Commission.

E. O.

RENO, NEV.—F. J. Fisher was injured recently by a violent fall from his bicycle while riding along South street on the way to his place of business. The accident resulted in concussion of the brain and numerous bruises about the head and he was unconscious for several hours.

Greenhouse Heating.

COAL rates from the southern Illinois and Indiana mines to Chicago will be advanced from 8 to 12 cents per ton, about June 1, unless the Illinois railroad commission, which has already started an investigation, intervenes. In this case the advance will be felt at once by the consumer, as it will be added to the cost of production at the mines.

A RANGE IN NEW MEXICO.

I expect to build three houses. Houses No. 1 and No. 2, each 27x100, will run north and south and will be connected. There will be two and one-half feet of concrete and three and one-half feet of glass in the side walls, and a glass partition between the two houses. House No. 3 will run east and west and will be 27x60. It will have three feet of concrete and three feet of glass for side walls, and glass in the east end. The west end will adjoin the boiler house. In house No. 1, the west one of the two connected houses, I will grow carnations. In house No. 2, I should like to grow palms for decorating, and also ferns, some roses, smilax, etc. In house No. 3, I should like to grow sweet peas, callas, lilies, mums, geraniums, and plants that will stand a low temperature. I shall have a propagating house, five and one-half feet wide, on the north side, with a partition between it and the main house.

Please inform me how to pipe my houses. For house No. 1, I wish to use 2-inch pipes and, if advisable, I would use manifolds; I have these on hand. I wish to place all return pipes in the four walks and have the center walk without any pipes. I shall have semi-solid beds, about eighteen inches high. Our average winter temperature is 40 degrees above zero. Our days are warm, but the nights become cold toward morning. The coldest weather I have seen here was 14 degrees below zero, but this did not last more than two nights. For house No. 1, I want a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees; for house No. 2, 55 to 60 degrees; for house No. 3, about 40 degrees, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

I have a Kroeschell No. 3 boiler. My pit is fifty-six inches deep. I have an artesian well near my greenhouses, with eleven pounds of pressure. Can I connect the well with my boiler and not use a special tank?

be advisable to use three 2½-inch flow pipes (or five 2-inch), with nine 2-inch returns in house No. 1, and twelve returns in house No. 2. In house No. 3, use three 2-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. The returns can be arranged in the walks, as proposed, and can be connected by means of manifolds. Two of the flow pipes can be on the side walls and the others on one of the parlins.

If the system is connected with the artesian well mentioned, there will be no occasion for an expansion tank.

HEAT FOR FALL AND SPRING.

I have a range of eight houses. Houses No. 1 to 6 are connected and parallel. House No. 1 is 10x70; houses No. 2 to 6 are each 20x70. Extending across the ends of these six houses is house No. 7, and parallel with the latter is house No. 8; each of these is 16x100. I am also planning to build another house, 38x100, parallel with house No. 8. The boiler house is located at the corner where houses No. 1 and No. 7 meet.

The range is heated by steam, but I should like to install also a hot water boiler, to be used during early fall and spring. I thought of running one hot water flow and return through house No. 7. What size of flow and return would be required, and how many 2-inch pipes would be needed in each house to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 30 degrees? What size of boiler would be suitable? I think I should prefer a sectional boiler. I am located in Pennsylvania. E. W.

To furnish heat as indicated, about one-half as much radiating surface will be required as to do the work through the winter months. We would suggest for the houses 20x70 feet that one 2½-inch flow and four 2-inch returns be used; for the houses 16x100 feet, one 2½-inch flow and three 2-inch returns; for the house 10 by 70 feet, one 2-inch

Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?

INSTALL

A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

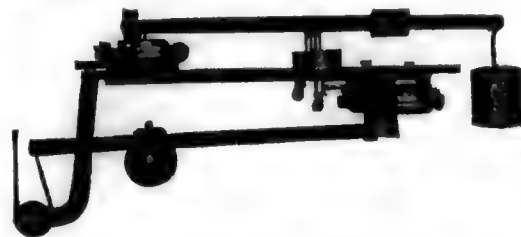

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Are not facts like these worth an investigation?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business remains good, funeral orders being especially numerous and principally for large designs. A number of weddings and receptions, as well as dancing parties, combined to make last week a satisfactory one to both growers and retailers. There was an abundance of everything and prices ruled well. Carnations were a trifle short, being off crop the latter part of the week, and held back by the unfavorable weather conditions. Saturday, the increased demand for Mothers' day made whites especially short; the price Saturday stiffened from $2 per hundred to $5 and $6, and few were available at that.

Various Notes.

Johnston Bros. had a pretty decoration for one of the large college fraternities, May 7.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, is bringing in some fine hybrid roses in pots. He has considerable outdoor work on hand, his care of the grounds of the Agawam Hunt Club taking much attention. He has recently purchased a horse sod cutter, which is proving highly satisfactory.

There was a large display of fine pieces at the funeral, May 5, of Charles H. Mathewson, advertising manager of the Providence Journal. There were nearly fifty designs, well distributed among the concerns of this city.

T. L. O'Connor had the decorations for the annual reception at the Home for Aged Women, May 2.

John M. Greene, of 187 Harrison street, has opened a store at 238 Cranston street, corner of Bridgman street.

Maxwell Villard, with Johnston Bros., was a visitor in Boston May 3.

A bicycle belonging to Mr. Peterson, of East Providence, was stolen recently from in front of one of the stores in this city. It was recovered three days later in Fall River, Mass.

William Hoffman, of Pawtucket, is going to tear down two of his old ranges and replace them with new houses, one 38x128 and the other 28x100. The contract for the two houses has been given to the Lord & Burnham Co., of Irvington, N. Y.

John Macrae is bringing in some fine spikes of gladioli.

Earl Bavier, who is in charge of the flower department of L. Dimond & Sons, Inc., was formerly with Mark Aitken at Springfield and Worcester, Mass.

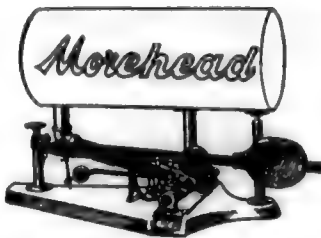

George Johnston & Sons had the decorations at the Park Avenue High School building, where the new city of Cranston was inaugurated May 2. The decorations were in charge of Ed Sharkey.

Visitors: G. Hampton, with Joseph G. Neidinger, of Philadelphia; W. S. Woodruff, of Orange, Conn.; E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; W. P. Snyder, of Edwards Folding Box Co., Philadelphia; F. J. Sullivan, of Springfield, Mass., and a representative of Welch Bros., Boston.

W. H. M.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—Charles B. Gould, of Winona avenue recently erected a greenhouse upon his property.

STANFORDVILLE, N. Y.—Elmer J. Wooden is erecting a violet house here, and not in Schultsville, as reported in a local newspaper.

The Market.

The retail business was quite brisk last week, for there has been a strong demand for cut flowers and blooming plants. No surpluses have been found in any varieties; on the other hand, there has been a noticeable shortage in sweet peas, and the stock that has come in has not been up to the usual standard.

Mothers' day brought a great demand for carnations, and of course prices advanced accordingly; at retail 75 cents to $1 a dozen was the ruling price, although some extra fine flowers were sold at $1.25 a dozen.

The usual spring supply of bedding plants is shown, pansies, ageratum, coleus, and at present the prices are on a profitable basis, but they fluctuate like the weather—15 cents a dozen one day and 25 cents the next for the same stock out of the same flat.

Various Notes.

The exhibition committee of the local Florists' Association held a preliminary meeting Monday evening, May 9, and started a movement for the next flower show. In view of the great success of the 1909 exhibition, the committee decided to recommend to the association that five afternoons and evenings be given to the 1910 show, beginning Tuesday afternoon, November 1. Last year the exhibition filled the main part of Convention hall, but this year the plan is to use the entire building of about 48,000 square feet of floor space. Charles H. Vick is chairman of the committee and his assistants are George B. Hart, F. J. Kellar, A. H. Salter, J. M. Kellar and E. P. Wilson.

At the regular meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association the action of the exhibition committee received unanimous and enthusiastic approval. The coming S. A. F. convention will undoubtedly be an incentive to Rochester florists to make their own show one of the best ever held.

William C. Barry, vice-president of the Park Commission, invited the Rochester Florists' Association to spend Friday afternoon, May 13, at Highland Park, for the purpose of inspecting the lilacs, which will be at their best about that time. This collection contains over 200 varieties and is one of the three largest in the world, being excelled only by the collection at the Arnold Arboretum in Boston.

Albert Vick, chairman of the bowling committee, announced that Mr. Farnham, manager of the Central Alleys, had donated a silver cup to be competed for by the S. A. F. teams in August.

Charles H. Vick, superintendent of the trade display, says that entries for space should be made at once. So many houses are reserving space that late comers may not find room for their display.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Last week was a pretty busy one for many of the florists. The opening of a large new dry goods store created an unusually large demand for flowers and plants. As blooming plants were scarce, many hundreds of Beauties were used in their place.

There is a great abundance of first-class stock in this market daily, but the demand has been so steady that every day sees it well cleaned up. Roses are especially fine, Kaiserin attracting particular attention. Beauties, from 6-inch stock to blooms with 4-foot stems, are plentiful and of fine quality.

Carnations in all varieties are good in both color and stem, and are bringing good prices. Sweet peas are becoming a little more plentiful.

There is a remarkable scarcity of flowers suitable for funeral design work, white carnations for backgrounds being especially scarce.

Though Mothers' day did not create any great demand for flowers locally, still this day undoubtedly has a great future, its success depending much on the retail florists. The seed has been sown and is already well rooted; all it needs now is liberal watering and lots of light in the form of advertising and talking up. Many out-of-town shipments were made by our commission houses, resulting directly from Mothers' day.

Various Notes.

Frank Holznagle, in Highland Park, just a block north of the city limits, is gradually building up a good retail business, being located in a fine residential section. Mr. Holznagle last week executed an order for a horseshoe standing nine feet high, to be used for a store opening.

The Breitmeyer Cut Flower Co., of Mount Clemens, Fred Breitmeyer, proprietor, is sending large shipments of excellent roses daily, the Beauties being especially fine.

B. Schroeter supplied the decorations for the Elliott-Taylor-Wolfenden opening, using many palms, ferns, boxwood and laurel.

The next meeting of the club should prove a most interesting one to the growers, as a great fuel-saving device is to be fully explained by its inventor.

H. S.

NORRISTOWN, PA.—Adolph Muller, proprietor of the flower store at 57 East Main street, has sold his interest in the Acorn Hill Nurseries, at North Wales, Pa., and will devote his entire attention to the store.

Hose in the Greenhouse

Our patented process of braiding seine twine jackets over pure rubber tubes, and then, by tremendous pressure, vulcanizing the jackets and the rubber into a unified fabric, has produced a hose that lasts longer and gives better service under glass than any other hose ever planned or manufactured.

The Market.

Last week's business seems to have been satisfactory to all, with a good supply of stock and an equal demand. The weather continues cold and dull; consequently outdoor stock is checked, making it better all the way around for the florist.

Bedding plants are commencing to move rapidly and no one will be sorry, as the space they occupy is needed badly. The approach of Decoration day is already bringing orders in large numbers.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day seems to have come into existence all at once; not until this year has it been so universally popular. In previous years we were hardly aware of its presence, but if it continues in popularity as it has this year, it will be necessary to name more than a white carnation as an appropriate flower, as this year the florists found it utterly impossible to supply the demand. Price was no object; any price asked was willingly paid; white carnations brought $5 per hundred wholesale, and $10 retail.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young spent several days of last week in Hillsboro, O., where she went on business.

Gus Ehlenbach, formerly with the Advance Floral Co., will soon leave on a motorcycle trip, in company with another cyclist, for San Francisco. They will take in all points of interest along the way, and expect to arrive at their destination in time to witness the big prize fight.

R. A. B.

BROCKTON, MASS.

Mothers' day caused a large extra call for flowers here, carnations being in special request. One large dry goods firm gave away several thousand carnations to its customers.

W. W. Hathaway is doing a heavy spring trade and anticipates a busy Memorial day, for which he is already making preparations.

C.

MOUNTVILLE, PA.—A report from Jacob H. Linkey states that Mountville and vicinity was visited by a severe hail-storm, May 3. Mr. Linkey says the storm was the worst in his experience; 1,500 lights were broken in his greenhouse and the hail was as large as hens' eggs, frequently three inches in diameter, and one of the largest weighed half a pound.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

Interior of "Danker the Florist's" Pipe Frame House, at Albany, N. Y.

THAT PIPE FRAME HOUSE OF OURS

This shows the way the Clamp Column Fittings are used to make the Giant Arch, also how the Purlin Bracket is bolted through the gable rafter.

WE used to call it the Semi-Iron House, but improved as it is now, we saw that it was more than a Semi-Iron House and that the name belittled it. The new name also more nearly describes the kind of framing.

Next to our sectional Iron Frame Construction, this Pipe Frame house is the best house for the money, on the market.

See what you get—Wrought Iron Posts at the sides, which are secured to our patented Ice-Clearing Eave Plate by a specially strong fitting. The plate is equipped with Sash Bar Clasps, which grip the bars securely and carry off the drip, protecting them from end rot.

The Pipe Purlins, tied together by our column fittings, make that famous Giant Arch, which supports the roof and stiffens the entire frame work lengthwise, endwise and crosswise.

Then there are minor details, like the wrought iron brackets, which support and secure the roof bars to the ridge; the purlin end bracket, which is bolted to the gable rafters and clamped to the purlins, securely tying the gables together, and so on, each thing doing its part to make our Pipe Frame House the superior house it is.

If you want a light, rigid, enduring house, that's worth dollar for dollar, every dollar you put into it—then here's the house for you.

Send for detailed information.

THE GREENHOUSE QUESTION IS AN IMPORTANT ONE

You can't possibly get away from the fact that it is absolutely essential to best results in growing—the best grower in the world could not make a hotbed answer as a greenhouse and get a first-class crop. It is true that the greenhouse is not as important as a good grower, but it is necessary to have both of them first-class if you expect to make a profit. The question as to the style of house, the kind of materials to be used, the location, etc., are questions that must be settled by every man that builds a greenhouse. If you are puzzled on anything relating to greenhouse construction we will be glad to help you in any way we can. Why not get one of our catalogues? Just send your name and tell us what you have in mind.

Send for our Catalogues: No. 4, Greenhouse Materials.
